"Whereas, Under the management of Ben Holladay, our investment in the Stock of the Oregon Central Railroad has been greatly depreciated, the rights of the creditors and stockholders have been defied, and the interests wants and convenience of the people along the line of the road wholly ignored and the road itself suffered to get out of repair, thereby imperiling the lives of passengers and endangering the safety of property, therefore be it resolved

1st—That we hereby wholly condemn and disapprove of the management of the Oregon Central Railroad by said Ben Holladay.

2nd—That we have good reason to believe that said Holladay has wrongfully and unlawfully appropriated and converted to his own use a large amount of the funds borrowed to construct said Road; and we therefore call upon the new Board of Directors to make a thorough investigation of said Holladays' acts, and if these suspicions be well founded, to take such steps as will compel the return of said property.

3rd—That we hereby instruct the Board of Directors to immediately put the Road in thorough repair, and make such regulations as will fully accommodate the people on its line and build up its business. On motion of W. T. Newby the stockholders meeting then adjourned sine die.

T. R. Cornelius, President, called the meeting to order.

Mr. Koehler read the following for the information of the board.

Portland, Or. Sept. 7th 1880.

To the Board of Directors of the Oregon Central Railroad Co., Portland. Gentlemen: I have the honor to lay before you the following statement in regard to certain work performed for this Company's railroad and to request your approval of my action.

In accordance with the terms of the lease of this Company's Railroad to the Western Oregon Railroad Co. we were required to complete at our own expense the extension of our depot in this City, also to erect a round house with 4 Engine stands, and suitable machinery as used for repairing rolling stock, we were also required to relay with new steel rails a certain part of main track on 4th Street in this City and to improve by macadamizing a part of said 4th Street.

In order to carry out the work as above indicated and without any available funds on hand, I had to resort to the credit of the Company and succeeded in making an agreement with the President of the Northwestern Construction Company according to the terms of which said Company undertook to perform such work and to Charge at the completion, cost price only, the O. C. R. R. Co. in return and as part consideration to furnish to said Northwestern Construction Company such motive power and rolling stock as could be spared and to allow the use of our road for the transportation of material intended for the construction of the W. O. R. R. Co; said N. W. Cons't Co to pay of course all salaries and wages of our employes engaged in running construction trains, and also all expenses for keeping motive power and rolling stock in repair, as a further consideration the N. W. C. Co. agreed to exclusively ship by our road such material used in the construction of the W. O. R. R. as might not be hauled by the construction trains, and to pay for all such hauling on our own trains the regular freight charges.

Amount of such transportation charges to be credited to us and deducted from the amount due by us for work performed for our Company by said N. W. C. Co.

Believing this agreement to be favorable for our Company I respectfully ask you to approve of and ratify the same and to grant the request now made by the N. W. C. Co. to execute our due bill, bearing interest at one per cent per month from first day of September 1880 in settlement of their claim.

For the purpose of your information, I submit herewith itemized statements to which I give the following explanations to wit:

1/ The account "O C Depot Extension" embraces a/ The construction of 2 new side tracks on our depot grounds and east of our depot building, which tracks were mostly to be built on trestle work, the raising of the old tracks and of the depot building to a uniform and proper height, making necessary repairs on said depot building, providing new and additional doors for the same and painting the outside of the building, planking of the principal part of depot grounds and furnishing and setting up a 30 ton track scale.

b/ The Construction of a round house upon the river lot belonging to this Company immediately below the O. R. & B. Co's property called "the old bone yard," with 4 stands for engines and space for machinery, also the furnishing and setting up of the following machinery to wit: 1 axle lathe, 1 bolt cutter, 1 vertical drill, and 1 plainer selected by me.

The account presented shows an amount expended of $13,584.22

In addition the N. W. C. Co. by agreement paid Sept. 7th for work not completed and now to be completed by us the amount of.... 250.00 which will cover all expenses to be still incurred in setting up the machinery and in bringing it into working order. Total of this act. $13,834.22

2/ The account 4th Street improvement embraces the cost of material principally of steel rails and fastenings and ballast and the expense for labor for relaying the track and macadamizing the Street, showing an expenditure of 7,059.70

Total of both accounts..... $20,893.92

For freight transported by our trains on account of the N. W. C. Co. we received a credit amounting to..... .....7,887.40

Leaving a balance due by our Company..$13,006.52 for which amount a note is asked. Very respectfully yours, (Signed) J. BRANDT, Supt.

And the party of the second part agrees to accept the above conditions in lieu of the former contract as an amendment to the same, reserving all the rights and covenants of the above described contract not changed or affected by this supplementary contract. And the said first contract is to remain in force in all respects wherein the same is not changed by the present supplementary contract made in pursuance of a mutual understanding & to the mutual benefit to both parties hereto, & for the consideration above named.

In witness whereof the parties hereto have caused the same to be signed by the President and Secretary of the party of the first part, and by the party of the second part on this the 27th day of November A D 1867.

And on motion the Secretary was instructed to prepare such contract in duplicate and the President and Secretary were instructed and authorized to sign and execute the same on behalf of the company, and to deliver a copy of said contract so duly signed and executed to N. P. Perine when he should have signed and executed the said duplicate copies for and as one of the firm of A. J. Cook & Co. Successors in interest to O. J. Clarke, with whom the original contract was made on the 23" day of April 1867

And on motion the Secretary was instructed to prepare for delivery to said N. P. Perine the bonds of the Company to be delivered to said contractors, according to the terms of said contract, that the same may be ready for delivery when the terms thereof are complied with.

On motion C. N. Terry and I. L. Parrish of Salem were duly elected Trustees for the bondholders, as required in issuing bonds under the terms of the Mortgage required to be made. And the Secretary was instructed to notify them of their election as such Trustees, and ascertain if they accept the said trust.

On motion the Board adjourned.

After marching and countermarching through the city, the procession crossed the river, forming on the east bank and marching to the spot selected for the commencement of exercises. The officer of the company, the members of Common Council, the orator of the day, and others, were called to the stand amid the plaudits of the multitude.

Rev. Mr. Waller advanced to the front of the Speaker's stand, and commenced the exercises by offering up a fervent prayer.

Hon. J. H. Mitchell then advanced, and on behalf of Samuel M. Smith, Esq., presented the President of the road with a shovel made from Oregon material, by Oregon workmen. His speech was eloquent in the extreme, and will be found in another column. President Moore responded in a neat speech, and taking the shovel he broke the first ground on the O. C. R. R. Co's. road, (east side.)

The vast number of people who left their business to attend these exercises attests the deep interest felt in the railroad enterprises now inaugurated in this State, and we sincerely hope that nothing will transpire to shake the people's confidence in either.

CITY AND STATE NEWS.

ANOTHER GREAT DAY.—We have to chronicle another great event in the history of our young State. As announced, the formal commencement of the construction of the Oregon Central Railroad (east side) was inaugurated yesterday in East Portland, near the south line of what is known as Stephens' Land Claim. The exact locality in which transpired the interesting proceedings was decked with nature's green and presented as lovely a scene as one could wish to behold. Scarcely a stick or stone could be found to mar the beautiful surface, and near by stood the proud and towering forest trees which grow so luxuriantly in Oregon, and seemed to look down with satisfaction upon the proceedings which rendered famous the day of which we write. Our object is to give but a general idea of what transpired for the information of those who were not present. We would gladly publish the speeches made by the different orators, but our space actually forbids such an undertaking. Early in the day our people (and the strangers who were in the city) began to stir and gave indications that something important was looked for. The Portland and Frush ferry boats were both engaged for the auspicious occasion, and everything that could be done by man was accomplished to consumate the celebration with a crowning success. At an early hour the Fannie Troup arrived at her wharf, bearing a large number of visitors from Vancouver, including the Fire Department of that town and the Cavalry Band from the garrison. At the wharf the firemen of our own city met and received their brother firemen in a flattering manner, and escorted them through our streets. The Washington and the Fenian Guards were out in gay uniforms, and lent enthusiasm to the occasion by their military bearing and presence. The Aurora Brass Band had arrived the day previous and gave us some of their sweetest strains. The programme, as advertised, was carried out to the letter. The Marshal (Zieber) and his Assistants (Messrs. Starr and Whiting), succeeded admirably in the parts allotted to them. When the great concourse of citizens and visitors reached the locality where the ground was to be broken, they found great preparations had been made by the erection of stands, shades, and seats for the ladies, and in fact all that could be had been done, except to provide seats for the most of the thousands who were present, which of itself was ordinarily impossible. The stream of visitors was actually increased to the close of the proceedings, hence, to estimate the number there were out, is, to say the least, impracticable.

Everybody busied themselves talking, looking and surmising, and canvassing the great work to be commenced—the railroad stakes then stuck in Oregon soil was a wonder almost of itself, and they were gazed at with interest by all. After the crowd had become somewhat calm, Mr. Loryea called the multitude to order and stated that the first in the order of the ceremonies was the presentation of the shovel mentioned by us a day or two since as having been manufactured at the Willamette Iron Works in this city expressly for the occasion. The presentation speech was made by J. H. Mitchell, Esq., for and in behalf of Sam. M. Smith, who procured made this implement of industry. Mr. M. indulged in a few happy thoughts upon the resources of Oregon, prompted by the fact that the shovel he held in his hand was manufactured entirely of Oregon material, even to the oil upon the handle; the silver upon which the inscriptions were made was taken from the mountains of Santiam. President Moore, of the Company, received the shovel and made a neat response, after which he descended and with his own hands formally commenced the stupendous work of construction a railroad. Music and deafening cheers failled the air and all present seemed to be relieved, now that work had commenced. Immediately after Mr. Moore completed breaking ground, about fifty Chinese workmen began in dead earnest the grading of the road. The orator of the day, Mr. Upton, was then introduced, and for a short time indulged in the consoling thoughts suggested by the commencement of a great work, which in time would make us a great and important State. The next speaker called to the stand was J. N. Dolph, Esq., who also indulged in happy remarks suggested by the importance of the occasion. J. H. Reed, Esq., was then loudly called for; he made his appearance and excused himself with the "fallacy" that he had nothing to say. But the audience knew better, and repeated their demands for his reappearance. He couldn't dodge it, and forth he came, and made one of those happy little speeches for which Reed is so proverbial. After the conclusion of the speeches, and the sights had been seen—i. e., laborers actually at work on the railroad, the entire assemblage reformed into a column, the military and firemen in the lead, and marched to the ferry landing, when they crossed as fast as two boats could carry them. Arrived upon this side of the river the different associations were escorted with music to their various quarters, and the Common Council, the Mayor and city officers to the Council room. The Vancouver firemen and military returned apparently happy over the day's doings. The steamer Senator was hauled up below the ferry landing, in East Portland, to accommodate those who desired to ascend the river. Our citizens seemed determined to put in a full day, and many if "not more" gave themselves up to jollity and good feeling for the fraction of a day which remained. Not a disturbance of a serious nor a semi-serious nature occurred during the whole day, and that we consider a compliment to our people at large which cannot be granted to communities outside of Oregon. It is determined, we understand, to increase the force of laborers and continue in the good work commenced—which certainly is the hope of every man who has the interest of our State at heart.

THE DAILY OREGONIAN.

Breaking Ground—East Side.—The 16th day of April, 1868, was a gala day in this city—a day to be long remembered by, at least, all who participated in, or witnessed, the ceremonies of "Breaking ground" for the Oregon Central Railroad, east side. At an early hour, large crowds of people belonging to this city, Vancouver, Oregon City, the towns above, and the surrounding country, gathered upon the principal streets to await the forming of the procession, announced to take place at 10 A. M. Flags were flying from the several Engine houses and most of the principal buildings of the city. The piazzas of the hotels and many of the residences, supported crowds of spectators of the animated scenes in the streets below. Everywhere were people on foot, on horseback and in carriages, hurrying hither and thither in active preparation for the coming celebration. Never, except, perhaps, on our great National Anniversaries, has Portland witnessed a more general turnout of people, or more animated spectacles than were to be seen all along Front and First streets yesterday morning.

The Procession.

At about 11 o'clock, the elements of the procession having been assembled, the Marshals began to form the column, on First street, the right resting on Stark. At a few minutes past eleven, the procession moved up First street, led by the Aurora Band, followed by the Washington Guard, the Fenian Guard, the Mayor and members of the Council of the City of Portland, the Chaplain, Orator of the Day, the President and Directors of the Oregon Central Railroad Co., the Chief Engineer and corps of employees, constituting the First Division. In this division was borne the shovel to be presented by Samuel M. Smith to the President of the Railroad Co., and to be used in breaking ground. The Second Division consisted of the First U. S. Cavalry Band, the delegations of firemen from the Vancouver Fire Department, and the Portland Fire Department. The Third Division consisted of citizens on foot, on horseback and carriages. The procession, after marching through the principal streets, proceeded to the ferry, and crossing as rapidly as the two commodious boats could carry the people, reformed on the east side of the river and marched to the place selected for breaking ground. Long before the procession moved, vast crowds of people flocked to the boats and crossed over in advance to make sure of being present when the ceremony should begin.

The Grounds.

The place selected for breaking ground was in an open field about three-fourths of a mile from the ferry landing at East Portland, and, perhaps, five hundred yards from the east bank of the river. Just on the right of the surveyed line of the railroad, a stand had been erected for the speakers, Directors and others who were to participate in the ceremonies. Opposite this was a shed containing tiers of seats for ladies. On the west and directly across the line of the road, were several tiers of seats for spectators—the three forming a sort of court or square opening to the eastward and looking directly out upon that part of the road where the workmen were to begin the grading as soon as the signal should be given that ground was broken. Just on the right of the speaker's stand in the center of the road, stood a flag staff from whose top floated the National banner. The preparations for seating the audience proved to be far too limited, not more than one-fourth of those present being able to get seats. A little way to the eastward were piles of wheelbarrow material, ready to be put together, shovels, picks and various other implements to be used in the work of construction, and farther along on either side of the marked line of grade, stood long rows of Chinamen with shovels in hand.

The Ceremonies.

The assemblage, numbering not less than Five thousand people, of whom a very large number were ladies, having gathered about the stand, Dr. Loryea came forward and announced that the ceremonies would be opened with prayer by the chaplain of the day, Rev. A. F. Waller. The chaplain arose and addressed the throne of grace, with an impressive petition for the favor of God upon the enterprise now about to be undertaken.

Presentation of the Shovel.

After music by one of the bands, the presentation to the President of the Oregon Central Railroad Co. of an Oregon-made shovel, was announced. This shovel bears on it a beautiful silver plate attached to the front of the handle, with the following inscription:

"Presented by Sam'l. M. Smith to the Oregon Central Railroad; Portland, April 16, 1868. Ground broken with this shovel for the first railroad in the State."

Presentation address by Hon. J. H. Mitchell.

Mr. President of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, ladies and gentlemen: I have been selected upon this occasion to present, in the name and on behalf of Samuel M. Smith. Esq., one of the worthy pioneers in trade in the city of Portland, to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, this substantial and magnificent piece of workmanship which I now hold in my hand, and which is truly and emphatically in the various materials from which it is constructed, a most fitting emblem of the invaluable and unfailing resources of the State of Oregon. The blade of this ESSENTIALLY HOME production, this substantial shovel, beaten out as it is from the virgin ore taken from the prolific mines of Oswego—the Pittsburg of Oregon—where lies imbedded this valuable metal in inexhaustible quantities and of most fabulous richness, is a true representative of this important class of our mineral wealth. The handle, made from an Oregon maple, represents that material interest which includes all the vast resources of trade and commerce that can and must eventually spring from the most magnificent forests with which our State abounds. The beautiful silver plate that adorns the handle, and which bears upon its face the inscription of the donor, was carved out of the precious metal taken from the mountains of Santiam within this State, and it serves to remind us that our mineral resources are not confined to the baser metals, but that here in Oregon, as well as elsewhere upon the golden shores of the Pacific, the honest miner finds a full recompense for his hours of patient toil. The handle, also, you will observe, has been seasoned with oil manufactured by an Oregon mill, from the raw material grown upon an Oregon farm by an Oregon farmer, while the workmanship and mechanism displayed in its construction are but a just tribute to the mechanical skill, and the commendable industry of the people of our State.

And, Mr. President, in acting upon this occasion as the medium through whom this representative of the material resources of our State is conveyed to you, and to the corporation which you represent, as a tribute of respect and confidence from one of the citizens of Oregon, for the indomitable energy and perseverance which have enabled you to enter this day upon the practical work of the great enterprise for which you were incorporated, it may not be inappropriate in me to refer very briefly to the cause of our assembling together at this time. The occasion of our presence here today, is one of profound interest to the people of Oregon. We are here for the purpose of celebrating the commencement of a new era in the history of her people. For the purpose of witnessing the laying of one of the great corner stones of that wealth, prosperity, influence, civilization and empire, shall soon characterize our State as a bright particular star in the great family of States, for the purpose of inaugurating a work which, under your fostering care, and management, and the well known energy and business and financial ability of the contractors represented here today in part by such men as Flint, Peabody & Co., of Boston and California, calling to their aid as they have, the best among the Civil Engineer Corps of the Pacific coast and, in fact of the nation, promises fair to move directly and rapidly on to successful completion. And a work, which, when completed, will be the great life artery of our young and noble State, and along which, impelled by the irresistable and energizing power of steam, will bound and rebound the great vitalizing currents of population, wealth, trade, internal commerce, and all that tends to make up and work out a glorious destiny for the worthy pioneers of our adopted State.

We are here to celebrate the inauguration in Oregon of that system of internal public improvements, which in the Eastern, Western and Middle States has brought the vast multitudes of these extensive regions into a close communication of trade interest and sympathy, and which has bound them together as with bands of fire and ligaments of steel, and to which, more than to any other system of internal improvements, are the United States to-day indebted for their unparallelled growth in material wealth, prosperity and power. And therefore it is not strange that an event such as this should call from their homes, their firesides, their farms, their work shops, their offices, their parlors and their sitting rooms, this vast concourse of people who have come hither to approve by their presence and to witness the commencement of a work that must tell so deeply and so materially upon the future welfare not only of Oregon as a State, but also upon the individual interests of her people. And it is an occasion upon which the hardy pioneers, especially those who first braved the dangers but a few years ago, of these Western wilds, who first reared the standard of civilization along the picturesque banks of our beautiful and far-famed Willamette, and planted the first seeds of our present greatness and future glory, as a people, can rejoice with exceeding great joy as they look back over the conflicts and trials of the past, and now find all culminating in a new era of prosperity and greatness that must inevitably, and at no distant day, make Oregon as a State what her agricultural, mineral and manufacturing resources, as well as the characteristic energy and go-aheaditiveness of her people justly entitle her to—second to none West of the Rocky Mountains.

This, to some, may seem an extravagant prediction; but it is one, the truthfulness of which, will be demonstrated during the lives of many of those I now address. The sound of "the shovel" of to-day, which is caused by the first breaking of ground by "the Oregon Central Railroad Company" is but the legitimate echo of ten thousand similar sounds that are to-day reverberating along the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains and along the eastern and western slopes, and amid the Alpine caverns of the Sierras, and which shall continue to wake up the stillness of those solitudes, until from Portland, Maine, to Portland, Oregon, shall be one unbroken line of railway, and along which shall move in one continuous phalanx the population and wealth of this mighty continent; but not only of this continent, but of the continents of the world; and the islands of the sea. The Great Union Pacific which is now gradually but surely threading its way across our land like a huge serpent with a tongue of fire mocking at every opposition, when completed, as soon it will be, and of which the road this day begun is but a legitimate extension, will be the great internal highway of nations, along which shall pour in one uninterrupted current the trade of Europe, Asia and America, as it passes on like a swift-winged messenger, according to the laws of its being, to circumtravel the civilized nations of men. And who is there, I inquire, in this vast audience, representing as it does every department of industry and trade, after contemplating the past history of our country, the unmistakable, and truly prophetic signs of the present, can remain incredulous either as to the speedy completion of the work this day commenced, or the influence and power which when completed it will have upon the prosperity of this people in developing our resources and building up our State to something like its true character and legitimate proportions? The revolutions wrought by the age of steam and by the irresistible will and energizing power of the American people are so really fabulous in their appearance that were they not stamped indelible and enduring characters upon the pages of American history, and in still more comprehensive language of imperishable truth upon the very face, the wide savannahs, the rugged mountains and the vardant hills of our favored land, their history would be treated as a fable emanating from the brain of a visionary. In 1754, when Dr. Franklin projected a plan for the union of the colonies, he proposed the city of Philadelphia as a metropolis, giving as a reason that it was situated about half way between the two extremes, and, as he said, could be conveniently reached even from Portsmouth, New Hampshire in eighteen days. Had a child of the future risen up from the gray mists of coming time and said to Dr. Franklin yea, and two generations shall not pass away until Portsmouth and Philadelphia shall be within a few hours ride, the revelation would have been regarded even by that great philosopher and statesman, as one never to be fulfilled. Even he who never told a falsehood, would have been disbelieved, if on the 30th day of November, A. D. 1782, when England conceded American Independence, the Father of our Country, the immortal Washington, had been enabled to lift the veil of the future that then flung its darksome folds across the coming greatness of our Republic and had been permitted to look down the great broad avenue of coming time, and gifted with the speech of prophecy had turned to Adams and Jefferson and Hamilton and Randolph and others of his great compatriots, and said to them: I see coming slowly but surely on away down yonder in the dim distance upon the broad plain of futurity, thirty-five millions of people from all over the vast continent they are coming up, and from all nations beneath the shining sun—they are bearing in their hands great white banners, upon which are inscribed "Liberty and Progress" and they are coming nearer and nearer, and very soon they will take the place of the three millions who now possess this land, and the eight hundred thousand square miles of territory which now comprises our possessions, I see expanding on the north, south, and west, into a mighty area of over three million of square miles, bounded by conterminous oceans, bearing upon its face everywhere the unmistakable impress of civilization, of greatness, of power; and yet all this, fabulous as it might then have appeared, has come to pass in the brief period of three-quarters of a century. And who can comprehend the progress that is to succeed?—with a country doubling its population every twenty-five years, and inestimably rich in all that can tend to wealth the mind becomes disturbed and the imagination lost in contemplating the future greatness of our country.

Twenty-five years ago the place where now lie those beautiful cities which loom up to our view on the eastern and western banks of the peaceful Willamette—Portland proper and East Portland—with their teeming thousands of busy population, their happy homes and joyful hearts, their school houses, their academies, their colleges, their temples of justice, their wealth, their trade, their commerce, their influence and their power, was a barren wilderness, a pathless swamp, a dismal solitude, threaded alone by the trail of the red man, and echoing to no more inviting sound than the scream of the badger and the war-hoop of the savage. Then this whole Pacific coast, from the Golden Gate to Behring's Straits, that now flings its broad expanse of increasing greatness toward the gilded arch of our western sky, was one vast unbroken wild over which the bird of promise had never flown, and where the foot of civilization had never trod; but to-day, through the indomitable energy of our race, and by the magic power of works such as we are here to-day to inaugurate, the "Druidical silence" of that solitude has been broken, the forests have faded back into the dim distance, the verdant arches that had been entwined by the fingers of the living God in the great centres of these primitive wilds, have been displaced by temples reared by the hand of civilization and progress. Rivers and lakes are spanned, the valleys rise up from their lowly beds, at the command of the voice of enterprise, and the snow-capped mountains of our golden coast are made to bow their everlasting heads in reverence and acknowledge the inevitable progress that is being made in all that tend to develop the resources of our heritage, and promote the general welfare of our race.

Receive then, Mr. President, this tribute of respect in the spirit of friendship and encouragement in which it is tendered, embodying and representing as it does, in the materials of which it is formed, many of the great elements of wealth that pertain to our present prosperity and greatness as a State, and which point forward along the line of coming years to a higher destiny and a more glorious exaltation. Take it, and may the important work with it this day begun go forward with all the rapidity possible consistent with the magnitude of the enterprise. May the hands that wield it in the great cause of internal improvement be as tireless as the hands upon the dial of time, and may the minds, and energies, and resources, that direct the work in which you with it this day engage, be as unfailing as the light of the sun; and may the time soon come when from the city of Portland to the SOUTHERN boundary of the State there shall be erected, through your energies and through the energies and enterprise of others, two great race tracks for the iron horse—the one upon the east and the other upon the west side of our noble river—and when the smoke from the fiery nostrils of the competing steeds shall rise up from the angry chargers, and bending over shall mingle with each other and with the hot breath that ascends as a gloomy pedestal from the floating palaces ascending and descending our loved Willamette, forming an arch of beauty and grandeur, which in form and outline, though not in substance, shall beautifully symbolize the coming greatness and glory of our adopted State.

Mr. Mitchell's address was frequently interrupted by loud and prolonged applause.

President I. R. Moore's Reply.

Mr. Mitchell: In accepting for the Oregon Central Railroad Company the very neat and appropriate present of Mr. Smith, for whom you act upon this occasion, we regard it as not only a token of personal esteem to the members of our corporation, but as an earnest of a hearty sympathy with the purposes and objects of this enterprise, which he entertains in common with all the people of the State.

In the use of this gift, at this time, we behold not only the commencement of a great work fraught with issues of momentous import to our young and rapidly growing State, but the dawning of a new era in the history of Oregon that all here assembled will revert to in after days as the time when the garb, the habits and methods of thought of the frontiersmen were cast aside, and we commenced the race for political and commercial greatness with our sister communities in this great Nation.

And the first spadeful of soil is removed we see unearthed a germ of progress just putting forth which shall continue to grow and expand, until the cities of this beautiful land will be busy centers of wealth and population, and teeming myriads shall occupy our valleys and mountains and develop the immense resources which as yet are scarcely appreciated. We feel that we can assure you that the work so auspiciously commenced to-day will only cease when the groaning granaries of our farmers will no longer need facilities for reaching the markets of the world and the drowsy echoes of the Umpqua and Rogue rivers will resound with the breathings of the iron horse on his rapid march in the work of founding agricultural and commercial empire.

In conclusion, and on behalf of the company, I thank you.

Breaking Ground.

President I. R. Moores then descended from the platform, with the shovel in hand, and proceeded to the centre of the square where was driven the "first stake," and amid the acclamations of the multitude, threw out the first sod in the construction of the Oregon Central Railroad. The act was followed by three rousing and hearty cheers for the road, for the Directors and the contractors, and "Hail Columbia" by the Cavalry Band.

Commencement of the Grading.

The cheers of the people had scarcely died upon the air, when the laborers, getting the signal, fell to work upon the grading of the road. This was followed by a considerable stampede of the people on that side of the crowd, to the spot, and the Chinamen were soon enclosed between two walls of interested spectators, each of whom seemed to have a deep personal interest in the matters going forward. Many of them procured shovels and joined in the work. Among the latter were a considerable number of ladies who evidently shared in the general enthusiasm of the hour. There were hundreds who perhaps never handled a shovel before, can boast in after years that they threw out dirt at the inauguration of the Oregon Central Railroad. In a few moments, and after most of the people had returned to the stand, Judge Upton was announced and as he came forward, was greeted with cheers.

Hon. W. W. Upton's Address.

Ladies and Gentlemen: We have met to assist in ceremonies connected with events of the greatest importance to the citizens of Oregon. The ceremonies inaugurate a work of vast interest to us a people and to our State. The great line of railroad that sooner or later must connect Oregon with the Atlantic States, and pour treasures of produce from the Willamette Valley and our other rich valleys into the world's markets and return its equivalent, can not be laid down at once; it is a work of time, labor and capital. There must be a beginning, and the day that begins it is not altogether a day of ceremonies; not altogether an idle day. These ceremonies signalize the commencement of that work.

This large concourse of people is here to signify public approbation of this effort, and to signify their willingness to put their shoulders to the wheel, and to contribute material aid to roll on this daring enterprise.

The people of Oregon are now fully alive to the great interest we have in railroad communication with the rest of the world. The recent action of the city of Portland in favor of railroad communication, shows the feeling on the subject in this city, and its almost unanimous approval by the people of Portland is but an index of the feeling that pervades the State. We no longer have any fears of too many railroads or too much railroad.

Although railroads have been in practical use about half a century, it is during only a few years that we have had any real understanding of through lines or thoroughfares—of those great lines of railroad travel and freight that roll population and labor and life and activity and wealth into a new country, and make the West a part of the East, and the East common property with the West.

It is only ten or fifteen years that this matter has been at all understood, anywhere. How has this thing been learned? Those fortunate regions where it has been tried have found commerce and business and wealth poured in upon them like the rain from heaven. Those unfortunate localities that have neglected or resisted these great arteries of trade, find themselves shut off from the marts of the world, and the rich products of a bounteous soil lie almost useless in their granaries, or are struggling in an almost hopeless effort to make produce over-pay the expenses of its own transportation to market.

One of the most astonishing facts developed in modern times, is the cheapness at which these great lines of railroads can transport freight and passengers long distances. Men not in the business are astonished when they learn that a full employed railroad can carry freight a thousand miles, cheaper than it can be put into and taken out of a merchant vessel. The lighterage, stowage and discharge of a cargo of merchandise costs more on an average than it costs a business road to transport the same cargo a thousand miles. It is the long lines of road with an immense business that can work at the rates. What was it, that in a period of ten years changed the value of improved farms in Illinois, Wisconsin and other Western States from an average of ten dollars per acre to an average of fifty to sixty dollars per acre?

Railroad men discovered within that time that they could carry flour from Chicago to New York city for twenty-five cents per barrel and other products at similar rates. The ordinary and natural completion of four great lines of railroad fixed that price, and made a grain field of Illinois bring as much freight per acre as a grain field a few miles from New York city. The grain fields of the West come up at once in price so near the value of Eastern farms. The farms enriched the railroads and the railroads enriched the farms. They developed each other and reaped mutual advantages.

The results of energy and competition in railroads on the routes from the Atlantic to the Mississippi has astonished all parties. How many miles of railroad could be paid for with the rise on real estate within that time in one of those States? a rise of property caused principally by the construction of railroads.

This increase in the value of land in Illinois alone, is sufficient to build and equip a line of railroad reaching twice around the earth. The same addition per acre to the value of the available lands in the Willamette valley would reach the sum of $150,000,000. And yet there are some men who have not quite done with the query, "Will a railroad up the Willamette valley pay?"

In making estimates, some men leave the rise of real estate out of their figures. In the estimate just mentioned, reference is made to farming lands alone. A full estimate would add to these figures; the value of the towns that would spring up as the country improved, and the increase in value when our present villages shall be transformed into populous and wealthy cities. This increase in value will take place at some time. It is sure to come sooner or later. But if it is seen by the present generation, it will be because the present generation builds roads. Our first and most obvious want is population. We want every acre of choice lands under cultivation.

While on this subject of population, I want to say one word to you, Gentlemen Directors, on the subject of the kind of labor it is your interest to employ. It is your interest, in my opinion, to construct the road by means of the labor of good, able bodied white men. Men whose bones and sinews are made of beef and bread, and who can earn the money you pay them; and who will form a part of the permanent population of the country to patronize the road when it is done. You will get no more labor, in my opinion, out of the rice-fed Chinamen, for the same money. He may work cheaper but will do less work. He is not able to work at hard labor with the energy of a white man, and the employment of Chinamen does nothing toward populating the country, but retards it, and I am opposed to it for every reason. Population is everything to a railroad as well as to the country, and it is a question of deep interest to the road, as well as to the country.

Oregon has the resources to support an immense population. She holds out inducements to agriculture, as soon as a way is opened to markets, such as few countries hold out. Our crops turn out as largely for the labor bestowed, and are of as good quality, as those of any large tract of land in the world. Another marked feature of the country, and an important one, is that Oregon HAS NEVER YET HAD A FAILURE OF CROPS.

None but those who have seen the impoverishing effect of repeated failures of crop, can realize the immense advantage of this feature of our soil and climate.

The 3,000,000 acres of land of the Willamette will support a larger population and pay well for a larger amount of labor than any other extensive tract of land. At most, every acre of it will justify high and thorough cultivation and will increase the profits of tillage in proportion to the labor.

But it cannot be worked until a way is opened to markets. It cannot be worked while our produce has to pass through the houses of the California merchants, and submit to the system of traffic their ingenuity has invented or while it in any manner takes the slow, circuitous and expensive route by way of the isthmus.

We are here today because the people of Oregon have begun to put their hands together and are striking a blow in the right direction.

The breaking of ground for a line of railway up the Willamette valley is the first of a series of steps that is to link Oregon with the great centers of commerce and wealth, and give impetus to our exertions.

There is no danger of too many outlets of trade. There is no danger of too many roads. It has hardly ever happened that a railroad was built that was not needed. Such a thing is next to impossible.

I hope to see the two roads now about starting from this place move on with even and rapid pace to some proper point well up the valley and then join their forces and push on in the most eligible course toward the Atlantic States.

To Oregon should belong some glory and some rewards connected with the continental roads. It was an Oregon man that first promulgated the idea of a continental road.

It was an Oregon man that first offered to build a road across the then wilderness continent for a strip of unoccupied waste land. He vainly begged and petitioned Congress for the privilege. He was on the right track, but he was one generation in advance of the age. Like many great men, he got too far in advance of his forces. His heart was right, and his "head was level," but the world was about twenty-five years behind him and did not come up in time. The world "failed to connect."

An Oregon man was the first to project a great national railroad, and if there is anything in the signs of the times, Oregon men will not rest satisfied until the project becomes an accomplished fact.

We shall hail the first rapid puffing of the locomotive as a sign of destruction to the forests around the city of Portland. When the sound of the train reaches up the Willamette, and the ground begins to tremble under the tread of the iron horse, waste land will recede on the right and the left to give place to cultivated fields; the fern will be driven out, our timber will become merchandise, population will roll in, and the hum of industry will be heard from the Coast Range to the spurs of the Cascades, and from the Columbia to the sources of the Willamette. As the line emerges from the valley and leads on to join its iron bonds with those of the Central Pacific, or the Union Pacific, the hum of industry will still keep pace with the shriek of the whistle and the jar of the train.

Railroads give life and activity to a country, and encourage men to work. The locomotive running through a productive country has a wonderful effect on the farms in a little while. It drives all the brush out of the corners of the fences and roots out the stumps; it builds great barns on the farms; it straightens out the lines of the fences and makes them look as if they were laid by a surveyor. It sets up stakes at the corners of the fences and puts a wire on the stakes and lays two rails on the wire. It gives the fence a good "worm" and turns all the five and six rail fences into eight rail fences.

When this great artery of trade is added to the net work of iron roads that now almost annihilates distance on the Atlantic side, won't we visit "the settlements?" Won't the old homesteads on the Atlantic side get waked up? Won't the ladies and children have a millenium? But this thing is not half as far off as the millenium. The railroad men know that it will pay, and they are not afraid of anything that will pay. They would saw up Mount Hood and sell it for whetstones if it would pay. They know that a railroad will pay if everybody makes up her mind to travel and take the children. You know we are all going across on about the first train, and then all our friends on the other side, and most all our friends' friends will start about that time to come and see us. Everybody will be bound to travel, for everybody is waiting for the wagon. Every railroad man has found out that roads pay in proportion to the quantity of business. They won't build a railroad where the farms won't rain produce, nor where the ladies and children won't travel on the cars.

They know that their money lies in low prices, heavy freights and rapid business. They know they have got to arrange it so that everybody can afford to travel, and then everybody will travel. They know that they can carry grain from here to New York for not more than three or four times what it now costs to furnish sacks for the grain, and that in time a healthy competition will compel them to do it at that rate. But if there is business enough to keep a road fully employed, they have no fear of the result.

There is nothing worth raising that will not at times be worth carrying long distances by railroad. There are persons here today who will live to see Oregon potatoes sold at handsome profits in the city of New York. There will be times when one or another of their crops fail in the East, that the East will want every particle that Oregon can spare. Nearly every year there will be some Oregon product—at times one of our staples—that will be in demand on the other side at prices that will make the freight a mere trifle in comparison. How soon there will be railroad connection from here to the other side is not for us to say; but it is plain to see that our material advancement depends very much on that question. Our active prosperity as a State will not be fairly and fully under way until that is accomplished.

To those gentlemen who have visited us with a view to railroad construction, I think I may say we are not afraid of foreign capital. We want them to put all their money in here if they will, and then come themselves and make themselves a home with us. We think by the time the investments are made and the business fairly under way, they will be captivated with this country and choose it as their own. We will welcome them heartily.

Judge Upton was followed by Hon. J. N. Dolph, who was frequently and warmly applauded as he proceeded.

Hon. J. N. Dolph's Address.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: This is a great day in the history of our State. That was a great day in the history of the Territory of Oregon, when the claims of Great Britain to the sovereignty of this soil was relinquished, and the Stars and Stripes—the emblem of our nationality—floated proudly over the pioneers of this the western wilderness, and the United States extended over them the protecting Aegis of her laws.

And the day that Oregon's star was placed in the galaxy of the Union, marked an event in our history well calculated to inspire those who had struggled against the disadvantages incident to pioneer life to rear here the standard of civilization and liberty, with enthusiastic hope for the future.

And when a few years since we assembled to celebrate the completion of the telegraph line, that unites us by an electric nerve with the civilized world, and when we compared the past with the then present and realized that the great distance which had separated us as it were from the great family of States, from home and its associations, was annihilated by enterprise and science, we congratulated each other and rejoiced and said that this is the great day in the history of our State.

But I see in the auspicious events of this day, no less cause for rejoicing. They are pregnant with the future prosperity, not alone of this city and of this valley, but of the whole State; to what extent no living man can say, but I believe far beyond what the most sanguine have predicted. Time will not permit—nor would it be appropriate on this occasion—to detail the advantages to be derived from the completion of this great work.

But looking at the advantages and surroundings of our State, and judging by the experience of the past, what a career of prosperity opens up in the future.

Glance at the history of the Empire State upon this matter of internal improvements; how has her resources been developed and her wealth increased by her wise policy in building railroads and canals.

About half a century ago, DeWitt Clinton, inspired by foresight and sagacity, conceived the idea of uniting the waters of the Atlantic ocean with the waters of the great lakes, and although men were found to scoff at the idea as visionary, New York engaged in the great work of constructing the Erie Canal. Today not only has this great work been accomplished and enlarged until it is navigated by steam vessels, but two lines of railroads running through the State from east to west, are found insufficient for the demands of commerce. And New York holds her proud position among the States, not so much by the reason of the richness of her soil, or any natural advantages over her sister States, as by her sagacity to foresee the growth and wants of the Great West, and the enterprise of her people and by these great works made the thoroughfare over which passes its commerce. Who can look back upon the history of New York and see prosperity, wealth and power steadily keeping pace with the enterprise of her citizens and doubt the true policy of a State

If time would permit, it would be interesting to trace the history of railroads in the Great West. To the West, the railroad has been the pioneer of civilization.

Wherever its fiery coursers speed, the wilderness, as if by magic, "is made to bud and blossom as the rose." Land that before found no market at the Government price is transformed in a few months to valuable farms, and cities, and villages, like Jonah's gourd, spring up in a night.

Hitherto the time when we shall feel the inspiring energy of this great agency of prosperity has existed only in hope; today it requires no prophetic vision to behold the realization.

We are fast being bound to our common country by bands of iron and ties stronger than hooks of steel, in the Central Pacific Railroad fast hastening to a completion, and in the beautiful language of another, "before the close of 1870, the iron horse will mingle at one run the smoke of his nostrils with the spray of both oceans."

When this great work is completed, San Francisco and New York will be nearer together than San Francisco and Portland; the commerce of the Atlantic and Pacific will be bound together, and the plains over which it stretches and the mountains it scales, will wake from natures solitude to the whirl and activity of advancing civilization, pouring over the great thoroughfare a continual stream.

A still more important enterprise to this State is the Northern Pacific railroad, uniting the great lakes with Puget Sound—destined to be the great thoroughfare across the Continent over which the great Continent of Asia, with its six hundred millions of inhabitants, will pour its commerce.

When these great enterprises are completed, a tide of immigration from all the other portions of the Union is sure to set in for the Pacific Coast. Not alone restless adventurers in search of fortune, having no interest in the country, but the hardy sons of toil bringing their means and their families to establish homes for themselves and their children.

The ever-increasing tide of foreign immigration instead of being swallowed up in the great cities of the East, or even the broad prairies of the West, will pour over the Rocky Mountains into our fertile valleys—a source of wealth and an element of growth to the State.

Between the termini of these great thoroughfares—

San Francisco and Puget Sound—lies our youthful State, containing all the elements of greatness, with a combination of advantages unsurpassed by any portion of the globe. Almost in sight in the great treasure vaults of nature, waiting the developing industry of the coming millions, is stored gold and silver sufficient to supply the most extravagant demands of the family of man. Mines rivaling in richness the wonderful grottoes of the Arabian Nights—waiting no Genii of lamp or ring to unfold their treasures, but ready to yield them up to honest enterprise and sturdy labor.

Coal and copper mines of untold richness and extent wait to supply the wants and swell the wealth of the State. And already, but a few miles above us, upon the bank of the beautiful river that rolls at our feet, the crude ore of a more useful metal is being fitted to minister in ten thousand ways to the wants of mankind.

The hum of the loom and the whir of machinery is heard in our cities and villages, and enliven the solitude of our mountains and valleys.

We have a soil unsurpassed for richness that yields surely and bounteously to the labor of the husbandman. Forest and prairie, hillside and valley, are ready to add their rewards of industry. We have a climate that challenges the world for salubrity, and situated as we are at the mouth of one of the great rivers of the continent, it requires but little forecast to predict for our own State a commercial greatness second to no part of the Pacific coast. The surplus products of our fertile plains will yet supply the mountain regions of the Pacific slope, the markets of Europe, the teeming millions of Asia and the islands of the sea, while competing, as they now do, in the home markets of the most distant States of the Union.

Commerce shall lay at our feet the products of every clime. The winged lightning, obedient to our behest, flashes the news of the hour from the historic scenes of the Old World, under old ocean's bed, and across the continent, for our entertainment and profit.

Situated as we are at the farthest extreme of the Republic, we enjoy all the blessings of the general government, while we bear but few of its burdens. We reposed in peace, protected by the name and power of this great nation, while the clouds of war that lately hung over the land never rose above the mountain tops to scatter their horrors among us. Commercial reverses and money panics spend their force before they reach our shores, and we rest secure, undisturbed by a thousand causes that overwhelm in disaster many of our sister States. Yet the State languishes. One thing is needed to develop its resources and secure all these advantages, and that is cheap transportation—the completion of the great work—the commencement of which we now celebrate — a railroad connecting these two great transcontinental roads.

When this is completed, the immigration over both these great routes will pour into our State, a uniform market will be brought to our doors, cheap transportation will secure remunerative prices for our surplus products, and the steam whistle of the locomotive that first wakes the echoes of this valley will be a magic sound that will wake up the slumbering energies of the State and start it onward in an unexampled career of prosperity. Twenty years from this time, two lines of railroads running through the State will be insufficient for the demands of the commerce of the State.

This road will be built. The ability and known energy of the contractors give promise that the work will be pushed forward to completion without delay; and it may not be inappropriate to notice here that the first steamboat that ever plowed the waters of the Upper Columbia was the James P. Flint, in honor of the worthy gentleman of that name, now here representing the contractors.

May I not speak for this company, the co-operation and assistance of this whole State, the usual contributions of its citizens and the liberal aid of the State and National Government. In no other way can money be more usefully or remuneratively expended.

The money spent in war, instead of increasing the national wealth and advancing the national prosperity, leaves whole districts of country depopulated and devastated—the people in poverty, the nation in debt; but the money expended in developing the resources of a nation, in facilitating its commerce and uniting in ties of common interest its remotest territory, adds to its wealth, increases its prosperity, and provides guarantees for its future stability.

The money expended to rear costly capitols and other public buildings and monuments may be expensive luxuries without adequate returns for the expenditure.

While the Pyramids of Egypt stand as monuments of the astonishing power and grandeur of the Egyptian monarchy, more than two thousand years before the Christian Era, they also stand as monuments of the folly of their builders.

But the work you seek to build will stand as a monument of public spirit, sagacity and energy of its projectors and builders, dispensing its blessing to the citizens of the state and their descendants.

Fellow-Citizens, looking from this small beginning to the future of our State, when, as I confidently believe, our most ardent hopes shall be more than realized, I mingle my congratulations with yours.

Upon the conclusion of Mr. Dolph's address, brief congratulatory speeches were made by Messrs. J. H. Reed, Joel Palmer and others. At about 3 o'clock P. M. the ceremonies came to an end and the people retired, full of hope that they had witnessed the beginning of a work which should bring to Oregon all the wealth and greatness so confidently predicted by the several speakers.

A communication from Ben Holladay & Co. was read as follows to wit:

Mr. President and Directors of the Oregon Central Railroad Company Gentlemen:

Owing to the fact of the continued opposition made by parties interested in opposing The Oregon Central Railroad Company, and the consequent failure up to this time to negotiate any of the Bonds of the Company (which failure is also attributable greatly to the fact the stock of the company is under the control and management of a company composed of gentlemen in Oregon who are not generally known in the financial circle of the East) the contractors have concluded that it would be suicidal in the extreme upon their part to continue any further expenditure of money under their contract with the Company unless some arrangements satisfactory to all parties concerned could be effected whereby all the stock and bonds of the Company could be placed under the ownership and control of the undersigned. And believing as we do that it would be better to lose the amounts already expended rather than incur further risk, by making additional expenditures, we have reluctantly come to the conclusion to abandon all work under the contract unless such arrangement can be effected. In case all the stock and bonds that have been issued by the Company, or in anywise owened by the Company can be transferred to the undersigned we are willing to pledge ourselves for the present rapid construction of the first twenty miles of the Road within the time fixed by Act of Congress for the completion of the same. We are willing also to assume all reasonable and just debts or liabilities of the company due, or owing at this date. The sum total of such debts, and the amount of each, and to whom owing to be ascertained and fixed by a committee of three of the Directors and the undersigned: provided such committee and the undersigned can agree upon the amounts thereof. And in addition to this we are willing to make execute and deliver to the present Directors and principal stockholders of the Company a penal bond in any reasonable amount that your body may designate, conditioned that we will forever save, indemnify and keep harmless each and all of such Directors and Stockholders from any and all claim, liability, or demand which we, or any other creditor of the Company may now have or at any time heretofore have had against the company, or against such company or against such Directors or Stockholders by reason of their having at any time been such Directors or Stockholders.

In the event that this proposition is accepted we shall proceed with vigor to the completion of the first twenty miles of the road the present Fall and next Summer direct on to Salem, and thereafter vigorously continue its construction to the Southern part of the State; otherwise although reluctant to do so, we are compelled to abandon the enterprise at once. It may not be improper here to state that this communication is not submitted in any spirit of arbitrary dictation, as we have from our first connection with the enterprise regarded each member of your board with respect and confidence, which feeling we hope may continue whatever may be the result of these negotiations, but on the contrary we submit this proposition as the final result of our calm deliberate judgment believing as we do that its acceptance will place the undersigned in a position that will enable them to negotiate their bonds and thus secure the speedy construction of the road, and without this the enterprise must be a failure.

(Signed) Ben Holladay & Co.

Lovejoy the communication just read was referred to a committee of three to be elected by the board to confer with Ben Holladay & Co. in relation to the proposition made by them to audit the accounts of the Company and ascertain if they can agree upon the same & report to the Board.

D. 1867, by and between the "Oregon Central Rail Road Company of the first part and A. J. Cook of the second part; also a contract or Agreement supplemental thereto, and amendatory thereof, made Fifth: All such contracts and agreements hereinbefore referred to shall be cancelled by both parties.

Your early consideration of these propositions is respectfully requested at an early day, and should they meet with your approval a Resolution of your Board of Directors accepting them and agreeing to the terms proposed shall be recognized by us as an execution by both parties, of a contract between the "Oregon Central Rail

And Whereas: A corporation has been duly incorporated and organized, under the general incorporation law of this State and the amendments thereto, for the purpose of constructing and operating a Rail Road and Telegraph line from Portland, Oregon, Southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue (River) Valleys, to the California line, on the Southern boundary of Oregon; which corporation has been organized by stockholders herein, representing and controlling over two thirds of the wholecapital stock hereof; and for the Sold purpose of carrying out to successful completion, the enterprise for which this corporation was originally formed. The reason for the formation of such new corporation being to avoid the embarrassments and impediments, constantly being thrown in the way of this enterprise, by certain persons who claim, falsely, to be a corporation, under the laws of Oregon, under the name of the "Oregon Central Rail Road Company", and who have heretofore disputed and still are disputing the right of this corporation, to the use of such name; and although such claim, upon the part of such alleged corporation, is, and ever has been, illegal, inequitable, unjust and based upon a gross fraud: and although such alleged corporation has heretofore uniformly failed, in its attempts in Courts to restrain by legal process, our use of such name; and while we believe that all future attempts will be met, by like results, yet we are conscious of the fact that such persons who claim to be such corporation, have not only the disposition, but the power by vexatious actions and suits, in divers Courts, wherein the right to the use of our Corporate name may be questioned, to annoy and harass this corporation, and embarrass its operations, impede the construction of its enterprise, weaken and cloud its securities and injure its credit.

And whereas. In Consideration of the premises, it is deemed advisable by the stockholders, hereinbefore mentioned, and all now present, to dissolve this company and settle up its business, and sell, dispose of, assign, transfer and convey unto the said "Oregon and California Rail Road Company". Such being the name of the corporation, so formed as aforesaid, all theproperty, real, personal and mixed, and all the franchises, rights, credits, privileges and emoluments of whatsoever name and nature, owned by, or in any wise belonging to this corporation as per terms of a written agreement between the two corporations for such purchase, dated the..... day of March, A. D. 1870. Therefore

Resolved:

That the "Oregon Central Rail Road Company" of Salem, Oregon, incorporated April 22nd, 1867, be, and thesame is hereby dissolved, to take effect upon the settlement of its business, and the sale, transfer and co nveyance of its property and franchises as hereinafter specified;

Resolved:

That the President and Secretary of this corporation, be, and they are hereby authorized empowered and directed, to immediately and as soon as practicable, settle all the business of this corporation.

And Whereas,

This corporation has, in and for the consideration of the within covenants and agreements upon the part of the "Oregon and California Rail Road Company", to pay all the debts, demands, and liabilities of this company, of every name or nature, as the same mature and become due; and in and for the further consideration of the covenants of such corporation, to forever save, indemnify and keep harmless this company from all claims and demands whatsoever: bargained and sold to such "Oregon and California Rail Road Company", all the property real and personal, rights and franchises, credits and interests, legal and equitable, determined, absolute, and contingent, of every name and nature, now owned by, or belonging to this corporation.

Therefore Resolved Further:

That the written contract heretofore entered into between this company and the said "Oregon and California Rail Road Company", for the sale and transfer of all the property of this company, to such corporation, be, and the same is hereby ratified and confirmed: And that I. R. Moores, present President of this corporation, and Geo. E. Cole, present Secreary thereof, in consideration of the covenants and agreements aforesaid, on the part of said "Oregon and California Rail Road Company", to pay all the debts and liabilities of this company of every name and nature, be, and they are hereby authorized and empowered and directed, for this corporation and in its corporate name and as its President and Secretary, and under its corporate seal and for the use and benefit of its stockholders, to sell, assign, transfer, set over, convey and deliver to the said "Oregon and California Rail Road Company", of Portland, Oregon, all the property, real, personal and mixed of whatsoever name and nature, both legal and equitable, absolute and contingent, and all donations, rights, credits, accounts and interests whatever, now owned by, or in any wise belonging to this corporation, and all franchises and interests whatever by it possessed or owned: And especially to sell, assign, transfer, set over and convey, in the name of this corporation, to-wit:—The "Oregon Central Rail Road Company" and under its corporate seal, unto the said "Oregon and California Rail Road Company", of Portland, Oregon, its successors and assigns, all the lands, rights, title, franchise, interest, claim, property and demand whatsoever, both legal and equitable, present and prospective, absolute and contingent, which this corporation the "Oregon Central Rail Road Company", of Salem, Oregon, now has, owns or possesses, or to which it is now of right entitled, either legally or equitably, or to which it may, at any time hereafter become entitled, in and to the franchise and grant of lands made by the Congress of the United States to aid in the construction of a Railroad and Telegraph line from the Central Pacific Rail Road, in California, to Portland in Oregon, by an Act entitled "An Act granting lands to aid in the construction of a Rail Road and Telegraph line from the Central Pacific Rail Road in California to Portland in Oregon", approved July 25th, 1866. And amendments thereto. This corporation havingbeen duly designated by the Legislature of Oregon, in pursuance of the requirements of such Act of Congress, with full power and authority to include in such sale, assignment, transfer and co nveyance all right, title and interest of every name and nature, which this corporation now has, or to which it is either legally or equitably entitled, or at any time hereafter may be either in whole or in part, to the ownership, management or control of the lands, franchises, and benefits granted or conferred by such Act of Congress and amendments thereto.

And Whereas:

The present indebtedness of this Company exceeds the sum of Eight Hundred Thousand ($800,000.00) Dollars, in U. S. Gold Coin, the whole of which amount, said "Oregon and California Rail Road Company" have assumed and agreed to pay and to forever save, indemnify and keep harmless this company against all liability and damages by reason thereof, in consideration of this transfer and sale to said corporation of all the property and corporate franchises of this corporation.

And Whereas:

It is the judgment of this meeting that the assumption of such indebtedness is a full, complete and adequate consideration for all the property and corporate rights and franchises of this company hereby directed to be transferred and conveyed, and that the best interests of the stockholders herein, are subserved by the cancellation of the said indebtedness:

And Whereas:

Therebeing no money or property whatever to appropriate among the several stockholders of this company after the disposal of its property, and the payment of its liabilities as aforesaid: And the business of this company being about to finally suspend:

Therefore Resolved: That the whole capital stock of this corporation, both preferred interest bearing and common stock, be, and the same is hereby cancelled, and the holders thereof are hereby directed to surrender the certificates thereof to the Secretary of this corporation; and such Secretary is hereby directed to cancel each certificate, by writing in red ink across the face of each thereof, the words:—

"Surrendered and cancelled by order of a Resolution of the Stockholders"; adding thereto the date, and his name, and title of office.

And Resolved:

That from and after the date of the delivery of such deed of conveyance, assignment and transfer to the *said "Oregon and California Rail Road Co*mpany", this corporation towit: The "Oregon Central Rail Road Company" of Salem Oregon, shall be dissolved.

And Whereas:

PREPARED BY J. GASTON

SPECIAL MESSAGE OF GOV. WOODS

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF OREGON

Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

Your attention is invited to the importance of the inauguration of a general system of internal improvements in our State. Where only biennial sessions of the Legislature are authorized by law, delay often works incalculable injury. And now that we are in rapid process of development, with a constantly increasing population, it behooves us, looking to the future good, to give all necessary aid to such enterprises as tend to the permanent development of the vast resources of the State.

Long years of experience in a country without roads, and with a water communication with the marts of trade, admitted by all to be totally inadequate to the wants of the people, has taught us the necessity for some system of intercommunication which will answer the demands of the people. With a rail-road running through the Willamette Valley, and via Oakland, Roseburg, Jacksonville and Yreka, to and connecting with the Central Pacific Rail-Road in California—thus putting ourselves in direct and speedy communication with the City of San Francisco, and the demands of our sister State, in which we have a community of interest—we should reap a benefit which cannot well be estimated. Another route, equally as important as the first, now inviting attention, is the one running from the navigable waters of the Columbia river, via Boise City, to the valley of the Great Salt Lake, connecting with the Central Pacific Railway at Salt Lake City. To this route too much importance cannot be attached. In a commercial and military point of view, it is invaluable and indispensable; and it is gratifying to know that a bill, looking to its establishment, is now pending in Congress, and will doubtless become a law early in the coming session of that body. Legislation for the purpose of carrying that great enterprise into effect will be necessary, and it is hoped that you will not adjourn without making the required enactments. In his biennial message for the year 1864, my predecessor called the attention of the Legislature to the route first above named, and forcibly enumerated the advantages to be derived from such an enterprise; and, in accordance with the suggestions, an Act was passed, the effect of which was to aid in its construction. But the amount provided for was so meager as to offer no inducement to capitalists for investment. Had a more liberal spirit characterized our legislation at that time, we should, ere this, have been enjoying the advantages and sharing the profits of the undertaking. Let us profit by the experience of the past, and take hold of this great enterprise with that liberality and determination which shall insure its early completion. I would not encourage extravagance, but on the contrary, would bespeak a vigilant watchfulness over and a prudent and judicious expenditure of the public money; but it should be borne in mind that a niggardly parsimony is often the ruin of a people, while a prudential liberality builds up a State.

Your attention is called to an Act of Congress of July 25, 1866, donating twenty sections of the public lands for each mile of Railroad, and Telegraph to be constructed from the City of Portland, Oregon, to, and connected with the Central Pacific Railroad, in California, which lands are to be selected within thirty miles on either side of said road. This grant, though quite liberal is wholly inadequate and will not, of itself, afford sufficient security to insure investment. Capital for the completion of this great work must come from abroad, and good policy requires that we should hold out inducements for investment. I am happy to be able to communicate to you that capitalists controlling ample means for the construction of the entire road proposed, are now ready, and have signified their willingness to invest in the great enterprise as soon as the legislation necessary for such an investment can be had.

Under the General Incorporation Act, a Corporation is about to be organized to be known as "The Oregon Central Railroad Company," composed of some of the most responsible and energetic business men of the State, whose purpose it is, if they can meet with proper encouragement, to immediately begin this great work. And I take the liberty to suggest that it would be well to make provision, by immediate enactment, by which through the above named corporation the State shall be able to reap the benefits of the liberal donations by Congress, and also to make provision for the payment of the interest on the bonds of the Company, necessary to construct and put into operation, the first section of twenty miles of the road. Whatever may be the objections urged, it must be conceded that the State, looking to the future permanent wealth and prosperity of its citizens, is in duty bound to lend immediate and efficient aid to this great enterprise; and since it is for the immediate benefit of all, it is eminently just and proper that all should contribute to its furtherance.

I deem it useless to enumerate the advantages to be derived from a railroad, since they must be apparent to all. The valleys of the Rogue River, Umpqua and Willamette are unequaled in richness of soil, and general resources for agricultural and manufacturing purposes; but can the farmers or the manufacturers afford to transport the products of their labor from these remote districts to Portland, at present our only outlet, and realize any profit? It is often tauntingly said by those from abroad that Oregonians are indolent,—nothing can be more foreign from the truth. Experience teaches that mankind nowhere labor for the mere love of labor, per se, but for the profits to be derived therefrom. In this the citizens of Oregon are not unlike the rest of mankind. Give them easy and cheap transportation for the products of their labor, and the most rapid development of all the multiplied resources of our State will speedily follow.

A Railroad is a public necessity. The farmers need it; the mechanics need it; the merchants need it; the manufacturers need it; all classes need it. It would infuse new energy and enterprise into the people, cause our lands to be cultivated, our manufactures to be built up, increase the demand for labor, bring hither a vast population, add to our revenue, and build up our cities. Its early completion will be a priceless benefaction. You are the representatives of the people. Their interests are in your keeping. Do your duty towards them, your State, and yourselves. Help to build the railroad. It is the people's just enterprise. Your labors will be your own lasting monument.

GOVERNMENT'S EXHIBIT 102.

Portland, Oregon, January 1, 1868.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:—

We the undersigned officers of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, having learned that some parties at Salem in this State have incorporated (under the general laws of this State) another company, and have assumed and attempted to usurp the corporate name of the organization we represent, and that said usurping company has recently printed and signed, and sent to the Eastern States, a large lot of Bonds, purporting to be the Bonds of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, feel it to be our duty to notify the public of the following facts:

1st.—The Oregon Central Railroad Company was incorporated and organized at the session of the Legislature, held in September, 1866, and received valuable grants of U. S. land, and interest on Bonds from the State of Oregon. Since that time it has duly filed its papers in the office of the Secretary of the Interior at Washington, D. C., and is now engaged in the location and construction of its Railroad, having large subscriptions of home means. It has never issued any bonds of any description, and has no agents or contractors either at San Francisco or any of the Atlantic cities, and no one authorized to represent it there.

2nd.—This new company, now using our corporate name, was gotten up in April, 1867; and although the Governor of Oregon is President of it, we hesitate not to state, that its organization is spurious, and its operations justly suspicious. It has no just or legal right to that name, and a suit in Equity is now pending in the Circuit Court of this State for Marion County, to enjoin the further use of the name, and also an action of Quo Warranto by the State of Oregon, to forfeit all its corporate rights, if it has any, for the reason that it has failed to prosecute the object named in its articles of Incorporation, for more than six months, as the General Incorporation Law requires; and for the further reason, that it has no legal organization, a Board of Directors having been elected without any subscription of the Capital Stock as the law requires.

We may further state that the character of this bogus company is such that W. S. Ladd, Banker of this city, and Ex.-Gov. Gibbs, refused to act as trustees in their mortgage, after their names had been printed on the face of the Bonds. The Company has never made any location or the least of a survey of the road they propose to construct, nor have they a dollar in the world of any kind of property. The Company is in every respect a humbug and its bonds are worthless.

Any person desiring information on the subject, are referred to A. E. & C. E. Tilton, Bankers of New York City, or Thos. M. Isett, Broker, in same City.

By order of the Board of Directors:

OREGON CENTRAL RAILROAD BONDS.

Office of the O. C. R. R. Co., Portland, Oregon, May 1st, 1868.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

The Board of Directors of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, deem it proper and right to renew the caution issued to the public in December last, in relation to the use of its corporate name by another Company; and for that purpose beg leave to submit the following statement of facts:

1st. The original "Oregon Central Railroad Company" was the only corporation in this State entitled to use this name, was incorporated under the General Incorporation Act of this state, at the session of our Legislature for the year 1866; and at that time went before the Legislature then in Salem, and procured the passage of House Joint Resolution No. 13, which designates this Company to receive all the land, and all the benefits of an Act of Congress, entitled, "An Act granting land to aid in the construction of a Railroad and Telegraph from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland, Oregon," so far as the land grant is located in Oregon. (This Act of Congress gives the Company about three million acres of land). Our Company has filed the necessary papers in the Department of the Interior at Washington, and has been officially recognized by the Secretary of the Interior. The Legislature of our State, at the same session named, passed an Act, pledging the State to pay interest on one million dollars of our Bonds for twenty years. After receiving these grants from the State, and the recognition of our rights to the land grant, by the Secretary of the Interior, we commenced surveying our line of road upon the west side of the Willamette River, and solicited subscriptions to the capital stock of the Company, and we now have subscriptions and donations of land, cash and other valuable property in aid of the road, amounting in value to near $300,000. In February last, the City Council of the City of Portland, upon the petition of nine-tenths of the voters of the City, passed an Ordinance, binding the City to pay interest on $250,000 of our Bonds, for twenty years, all deliverable on the first twenty miles of road. In March last, the County Commissioners of Washington County, upon the petition of four-fifths of the farmers, entered into a contract, obligating the County to pay interest on $50,000 of our Bonds. On the 15th ult., we "broke ground" in the commencement of our work, and a force is rapidly pushing the work. We submit that these facts, showing our standing at home, should give us a fair name abroad.

2d. On the 22d day of April, 1867, some six months after the incorporation of our Company, and five months after the adjournment of our Legislature, some parties at Salem, on the east side of the Willamette River, got together and incorporated another Company in the name of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," fully assuming and attempting to usurp our corporate name. They proceeded to elect a Board of six Directors, and that too, without subscribing the capital stock on one-half thereof, as our Incorporation law requires before the election of Directors. They let a contract to A. J. Cook & Co., to construct one hundred and fifty miles of their road; and now one year since their contract was let A. J. Cook & Co. have just commenced work with a small force. Recently this Company No. 2 has enlarged its Board of Directors, electing twenty-one gentlemen from various parts of the State, three-fourths of whom know nothing of this Company, and consider their appointment merely "honorary." In December last, M. F. Mulkey, Prosecuting Attorney of the 4th Judicial District, commenced an action of quo warranto against this usurping Company, to annul its existence for violation of the law in the election of Directors without subscribing stock. On this day our Company has filed a Bill in Equity, in the Circuit Court, for Marion County, (where the usurping Company has its office) against the second Company, praying for an Injunction against their further use of our corporate name. The papers are now in the hands of the Prosecuting Attorney of the 3d Judical District for another quo warranto action to annul the existence of the second Company for a failure to prosecute its business for a period of six months, as our law requires.

These facts are stated now, because A. M. Loryea, the Agent of the second Company, has started to the Atlantic cities with a large amount of Bonds of this second Company, and which read as if they were the Bonds of our Company. Every one will see, that if any one of the above three actions at law are maintained against the usurping Co., their organization is destroyed, and the Bonds rendered worthless to all intents.

We beg leave to state further, that on the 12th ult., Captain J. C. Ainsworth, President of the Oregon Steam Navigation Company, and a Director of our Company, proposed to James P. Flint, of the firm of Flint, Peabody & Co., of Boston and San Francisco, and who interests himself in behalf of the second Company, that all matters in dispute between the two companies should be submitted to arbitrators; or by amicable suit to the Courts and have them settled immediately. Mr. Flint endeavored to get the second Company to accept this proposition, but they declined. Since that time, Ex-Governor A. C. Gibbs, our Attorney, met the Attorneys of the second company in the argument of a part of one of said cases, and proposed and requested that they should try the whole case on its merits, and for the best interests of all parties, and of the State, settle all questions in dispute as soon as possible; and this proposition was rejected. Our Company has used every means to secure a speedy settlement of all questions in dispute, but we have been opposed by the delays of the second Company. We may state further, that such is the character of this second Company, that W. S. Ladd, Banker, and Ex-Governor Gibbs, (before he became our attorney) refused to act as Trustees in their mortgage, after their names had been printed on their Bonds.

We have issued no Bonds, have no Agents in New York or elsewhere yet. We cannot give an Eastern reference; but we have no doubt that if application was made to Julius M. Keeler, of the Oregon and New York Commission Agency, No. 95 Liberty Street, New York, parties interested in knowing the truth, could learn something of the character of the parties comprising our Board, and thereby the truth of these statements, all of which we stand ready to prove by affidavits or home reference to any business man, of the city of Portland. We only desire that parties interested should investigate the matter. By order of Directors.

OF SALEM

SALEM, OREGON
A. L. STINSON, BOOK AND JOB PRINTER
1868

To

THE PEOPLE OF OREGON.

By the Oregon Central Railroad Co., of Salem.

The Directors of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, deem it proper to present the following statement:

The capital stock of the Company is $7,250,000. This being the represented cost of the first 150 miles of the road. $5,250,000 of this is common stock, which will be offered for sale at ten cents on the dollar. On payment of ten per cent. for the stock purchased, certificates will be issued as full paid stock, and the word "non-assessable" will be printed on the face of each certificate, to protect the holder from ever being called on to pay any additional amount or assessment.

The actual cost of the road will be $5,250,000, in payment for which First Mortgage Bonds will be issued to the contractors for.....	$2,400,000

Second Mortgage Bonds will be.....	2,400,000
And we promise to raise cash	450,000

We have agreed to raise, to be applied on the work as it proceeds, the sum of $3,000 per mile, which we can do by the sale of common stock, at ten cents on the dollar. We expect the great benefits to be conferred on the country by the building of the road, to be sufficient inducement to all property owners and business men to aid the enterprise according to their ability. The contractors, A. J. Cook & Co., volunteer to give every purchaser of stock their obligation to redeem the stock, within two years, by repayment of the sum, in coin, originally paid for the same. The question of the value of the investment, independent of their promise, can be answered by a few statistics of the cost of railroads in other states, and the income derived from their successful operation.

Seven railroads in Vermont cost $40,824 per mile. Thirty railroads in New York cost $49,963. The cost of the Oregon Central Railroad is only $35,000, being $5,824 per mile less than the cost of railroads in Vermont, and $14,963 less than the cost of the railroads in New York. The roads in both of these States pay large dividends on the amount of their cost, and it is reasonable to expect that our road will eventually pay a large income, far more than is sufficient to meet the interest, while its value, when it shall become connected with the California road, and be a great national thoroughfare, connecting the North Pacific coast with San Francisco, and the Central Pacific Railroad, will be so increased as to insure that it will be able in a few years to pay off the debt and be the property of the stockholders. Its benefits to the country will be immediate, in increasing the value of property as well as the amount of business and population. There are many reasons why the people of Oregon should own this stock. One is that the possession of the majority of the stock carries with it the control of the Road, and the people of Oregon should not permit the controlling interest of so important a work to pass into the hands of outside capitalists, who might fix an unreasonable tariff for the transportation of freight and passengers.

As another reason—the influence exerted by a live Oregon corporation would be favorable, both at home and abroad. At home, in regulating the location of stations and depots at suitable points, employing persons favorable to the best interests of Oregon, and in electing officers from among our own people to manage the affairs of the company. It would exert a favorable influence abroad to have it appear that this great road is owned and conducted by the people of the State.

The following item, taken from the New York Tribune, shows in one sentence the importance of railroads in enhancing the value of the States which built them. "Twelve counties in Missouri through which the main-line of Railway to the West runs, have increased their valuation more than $135,000,000 since the roads were built. Ten counties without roads have fallen off since 1860."

There are 5,000,000 of acres of excellent land in the Willamette, Umpqua, and Rogue River valleys, besides the region bordering on them, whose timber and mineral wealth are to be affected by the construction of the Oregon Central Railroad. These valleys and timbered and mining lands are capable of supporting a permanent population of two millions of souls, and the effect of the construction of the road would be, within five years, to add over $50,000,000, to the landed wealth of these three valleys, while incidentally it would introduce an era of progress that would in the same time double the value of every other material interest in this State.

The Willamette Valley alone contains 3,000,000 acres of rich agricultural land. It is larger than the State of Massachusetts, and capable of supporting a much larger population. The time will come when a million people will occupy it; when its valuable forests, coal fields, and rich mineral deposits, will be called into requisition, to add to our wealth, and make an enlarged industry profitable. Our streams will be lined with manufactories, and an enlarged commerce will make this Road a source of great wealth to Oregon in aiding to develop its resources. Favorable arrangements are made with capitalists at the East, but they demand that the people of Oregon shall themselves take an interest in the enterprise, and lend it a reasonable amount of aid; and as we have already mentioned, the contractors, A. J. Cook & Co., are willing to give every purchaser of stock a written guarantee to redeem the same in two years' time, if the holder thereof desires. The question will naturally arise in every mind: "Why do we get non-assessable stock issued to us by paying ten cents on the dollar?" that is to say, why do we receive a certificate that we have fully paid for a share of the common stock, calling on its face for one hundred dollars, by paying one-tenth of that sum? The answer is very simple and plain. The Company has borrowed nine-tenths of the cost of the road at the East, and each share of the comomn stock, or the property of the Company which it represents, is therefore mortgaged for nine-tenths of its value. The stockholder therefore buys it subject to the mortgage, and there is only ten dollars due thereon, or in other words there is a credit of ninety dollars on each share, represented by the bonds the Company issues, and the stockholder purchases, knowing that the stock is pledged for 90 per cent. of its value, and for 7 per cent. interest per annum thereon.

STATEMENT OF FACTS.

The Directors of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem, incorporated April 22d, 1867, impelled by a desire to give correct information to all interested, which is due to the public, and also as an act of simple justice to themselves, and the enterprise they represent, proceed to notice for the first time, publicly, the misrepresentations that have been industriously circulated, by certain parties, to their prejudice, and to defeat that enterprise. This explanation and vindication requires of us a statement of facts, as to the organization of this corporation, the character and progress of our negotiations, and our present prospects; and it is necessary that we present plainly and briefly a statement of those obstacles thrown in our way by certain persons who were determined the great work we have in view should not proceed, if it did not obey their interested motives, and pay tribute to their mercenary views.

The Oregon Central Railroad Company was projected by a number of the present directors in the fall of 1866. Proposals from foreign capitalists, looking to the construction of a great trunk railway that should connect the waters of the Columbia with those of the Sacramento, were received by them, and the eminent names attached thereto induced the belief that such an enterprise was practicable, and that an Oregon corporation should be formed, with a view to consider such proposals as might be offered, and secure such aid from the general and State Governments, as would be necessary, and could be legitimately granted to aid so important an enterprise. Steps were taken to complete such an organization according to our State laws, not for the purpose of acceding to the proposal already made, but of making the best terms possible with foreign capitalists for the building of the Road. The gentlemen alluded to, feeling that the enterprise, when successful, should recognize and reward those who had been its earliest advocates, invited to their counsels an individual who had no personal claims upon them, but who, they thought, had devoted much time and effort to the consideration and advocacy of such an enterprise. They allowed him to draw up papers of incorporation, with the understanding that certain persons should compose the Company; they were assured by him, and the same assurance was made to the Legislature, that the articles of incorporation were completed, and properly filed October 6th, 1866, and they labored through the session of the Legislature, then being held, to secure a recognition from the State that this Company, organized at that date, should be entitled to the land granted by Congress for the construction of such a Road, and should also receive substantial aid from the State. Such a recognition was made, and a bill was passed to grant the desired aid. Joseph Gaston, the individual referred to, who drew up the papers, and obtained the signatures thereto;—who had given assurances that they had been properly signed, and filed with the Secretary of State and County Clerk, according to the Incorporation law, failed to so legally complete such papers, or to so put them on file on the 6th of October, or at any time previous to the passage of the Resolution of the State Legislature, recognizing such Company as entitled to the land granted by the General Government, and the Act to otherwise aid the same, by the State of Oregon. Acting in good faith, the majority of the original incorporators had, according to law, designated two of the incorporators as empowered to open stock books for the Company. A meeting of Incorporators was held, at which J. Gaston was present, and he thereat presented a copy of the pretended Articles of Incorporation, which at that time—about the 7th of November—was still incomplete, as the signatures were not acknowledged. He learned then that a majority of the names thereon had designated persons to open books, and gave his assurance, that he would, as a Notary Public, immediately complete the certificates of acknowledgment, and place the same on file, as required by law. The next information that was had of Gaston's proceedings, was through private sources, to the effect that he was combining with certain parties in the city of Portland to secure the control of the franchise, and divert it to the use and profit of a few persons, who bound themselves, in a compact, as to the manner in which they would use and dispose of the same to their mutual advantage. For this purpose Mr. Gaston procured additional signatures to the Articles of Incorporation, of persons who had no desire or intention to maintain a permanent connection with the enterprise, but who signed as a matter of accommodation to Gaston, and at the same time signed a paper designating him as the person to open stock books. He only ceased getting such signatures when a majority of the names signed had so designated him to receive subscription, so that he, and the persons who conspired with him, could easily go through a form of subscribing the stock, and so own and control the franchise, and turn the same to their own private uses. Private information of this conspiracy induced the persons whose interests were thus being betrayed, to execute and file, on the 17th day of November, 1866, Articles of Incorporation in the name of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, by which means the efforts to subvert their interests were foiled, for these being the first Articles of that name on file, had the prior claim to the name, and to any rights and privileges pertaining thereto. Mr. Gaston filed his papers, signed by 18 persons, on the 21st, and all but the last three names on the same were acknowledged before him as Notary Public, and on that account were void and illegal, because he was not, at the time of making the certificate, a Notary Public, his commission having expired, and therefore his certificate of acknowledgment was null and void.

In the Spring of 1867, S. G. Elliott and T. R. Brooks visited Oregon, to arrange with an Oregon corporation to construct a railroad of 150 miles, from Portland, south through the Willamette Valley. With a full knowledge of all the facts in the case, the Articles of Incorporation, filed Nov. 17, were abandoned, because they were not deemed sufficient for the purposes of the enterprise in view, and in preference to amending them, it was deemed advisable to execute and file new Articles, that should exactly express the objects the Company had in view. New Articles were filed April 22d, 1867, and and soon afterwards the Company entered into a contract with Mr. Elliot, as attorney for A. J. Cook, to construct 150 miles of road from Portland south, for $35,000 per mile, to be fully equipped for operation. The same name was adopted, inasmuch as we thought the title appropriate, and believed that the papers acknowledged before, and filed by Gaston, were null and void. (And it seemed to us, that being the projectors of the enterprise then already publicly known as the Oregon Central Railroad Company, we were justly entitled to it).

The origin of this enterprise dates back to the year of 1863, when S. G. Elliott, a Civil Engineer, organized an engineering corps in the interest of a California corporation, which intended to construct a road from Marysville north, to the Oregon line. After reaching Oregon, having a good corps of engineers at work, and a full set of instruments, Elliott concluded to continue the survey into the Willamette Valley. It was owing to the energy and enterprise of Mr. Elliott that the original survey was made, and Mr. Gaston owed it entirely to him that he (Gaston) was then known in connection with it, and he also owes it to Mr. Elliott's influence that we requested him,—though with a reluctance after events justified—to take part in the incorporation and formation of the Oregon Central Railroad Company. Mr. Elliott was fully satisfied, from the information gained in his survey, that the project of constructing a railroad from the Sacramento to the Columbia could be accomplished, and from that day to this, for five years, he has directed his efforts to secure its construction. As Chief Engineer of the California and Oregon Railroad Company of San Francisco, he has been employed in negotiations at the East, where he has had several pamphlets published and circulated, giving information of the resources of our country, and of the value of the railroad enterprise in question. During that time he has spared no efforts to interest capital in this scheme. It was due mainly to his earnest efforts, that, against the determined opposition of interested parties, Congress passed the Act granting 12,800 acres per mile of public lands to aid the enterprise, and when he came to Oregon in April, 1867, he felt sanguine that he had obtained such financial aid as would secure its success, and sought to carry it on in connection with an Oregon incorporation, which should command the confidence of Eastern capitalists, as a safe vehicle for them to operate through and with.

It was plainly understood, then, that a certain amount of aid must be derived from the people of Oregon, and the Company was urged to immediately canvass the State to secure it. But we were confident that the great advantages to result would secure a reasonable amount of help at home, and therefore have ever declined to make any appeal to the public until they could see the work commenced in earnest, and so not lay ourselves liable to any just assaults, or charges that we were either unjustifiably asking aid, or giving the people cause to entertain expectations that might not be fulfilled. Mr. Elliott returned East to complete his negotiations, having matured his plan of action with the Company here. Our transactions were soon embarrassed by a suit commenced and prosecuted by Gaston, asking an injunction against our use of the Company's name. He having in the mean time made a change of base, and induced people west of the river to believe he could insure the completion of a road from Portland south, on the west side of the valley, and that we were wrongly and feloniously using their name and franchise. This suit was decided in our favor, Judge Boise ruling that there was no conflict of name shown, as the Companies were organized in different years, and one was located at Salem, and the other at Portland; nor did they show that our Company made any claim to their franchise, or rights and privileges. These legal proceedings caused a suspension of operations at home, and deferred the commencement of the work. In the mean time Mr. Gaston was no less busy endeavoring to injure the progress of our negotiations at the East by writing letters addressed to every prominent man he thought we could negotiate with, and finally by sending printed circulars to all the principal cities, and through the financial circles, signed by himself as President of the O. C. R. R. Company, which acts would lay him liable, as a common slanderer and defamer, to be mulct in damages, if he was in any sense personally responsible for his words and acts. We give the following extracts from a letter, written by him, to the editors of the Railroad Journal, a copy of which was returned to us by a friend, to whom it was shown. After modestly claiming that by his individual efforts he had secured legislation for the payment of interest on a million dollars of bonds, in the following language: "I, at that time went before the last session of our Legislature, and secured from the Legislature, &c.," and failing to state that the grant of land by Congress was secured by the efforts of Mr. Elliott, he says:

"This grant of course made our franchise worth something, so much so that black mailers were tempted to incorporate another Company."

After detailing the operations of our Company in making a contract with A. J. Cook & Co., (Pencil notation on margin as follows: "afterwards proved to be a fictitious concern") he made the following statement, which was entirely false:

"The operators have printed several million dollars of bonds, and actually signed and sent on about $500,-000 in their bonds to New York."

In that letter he misstated the position of leading men towards the Company, and the objects of our Company; the character of prominent members of the Company were libelled, the facts throughout were falsified, and he winds up with asking the publication of a notice warning "Bankers, brokers and investors" against any investment in the bonds of the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem, Oregon.

Persistent and unmitigated falsehood had the effect to delay and embarrass Mr. Elliotts' plans, until information could be had as to the character and intention of their author, for the persons to whom he (Gaston) referred the public, immediately denied any knowledge of the statements they were to corroborate.

A circular issued from Portland, January 1st, 1868, signed by J. Gaston, President, and W. C. Whitson, Secretary, O. C. R. R. Co.,—unauthorized, as we are informed, by either Mr. Whitson or the Board of Directors,—was extensively circulated, which denounced our Company as swindlers, and referred all interested to Messrs. A. E. & C. E. Tilton, N. Y., for corroboration, but these gentlemen, and Mr. W. S. Ladd, their partner in Portland, deny having any disposition to corroborate such statements, or even having authorized the use of their names in such a manner. In a private note which accompanied one of these circulars, he adds:

"No stone will be left unturned, either in the courts or in the next Legislature, to compel these arrogant, franchise stealing gentlemen, to observe the rules of common honesty and decency."

It is will enough, in this connection, to state that a large proportion of the gentlemen who were to constitute the original incorporators of the Company, in fact all those who were expected to take part in its permanent organization, with one exception,—Gen. Palmer, who expresses himself friendly to our enterprise—are now members of our Company, and harmoniously working for its success, while not a single one of those who took part in it at the time, and adopted the name Oregon Central Railroad Co., is now connected with Gaston in his enterprise and in his claim that we are usurping both the name and the franchise of their corporation. Those who are connected with him are probably unaware of the frauds that have been practiced by him on his early associates.

The charge has been extensively circulated that we are seeking to defraud the West side of the river of a valuable franchise—of State and Government aid—in answer to which we have only to say, that we recognize that the Act of Congress granting lands, and the Act of the last Legislature of Oregon, are both inoperative, from the fact that the terms and stipulations of those Acts have not been, and cannot be, complied with. Any aid to be granted railroad enterprises in Oregon must be re-enacted by both the State and General Government, and we have no hesitation in affirming that we claim no grants, privileges, or rights for our Company, we do not desire also extended to the West side of the valley. Our Company has never entertained or expressed any hostility to the West side road, or deemed its progress an obstacle in our pathway, but on the contrary, we have often expressed to members of the West Side Company a desire to harmonize our interests, and work to mutual advantage. But this harmony would not suit Joseph Gaston, though but for his misrepresentation we believe it could easily be effected, and but for him both enterprises would now be further advanced than they are.

A committee has been appointed to consider and report upon the branch roads necessary to connect the main route with all parts of the Willamette Valley; the contractors having made proposals to construct such roads at a very reasonable sum. Some of these proposed roads are laid down and described on the map of the Company, generally circulated, and whatever road may be built on the West side we intend to construct branches to bring the Oregon Central into connection with every valuable district of the valley, and interest every county in our success.

There are at the present time two law suits pending. One commenced by Gaston last fall, to invalidate our Corporation, and the other, in self defence, lately commenced, to test the legality of the Gaston Company, which, if it goes to trial, will draw out fully the particulars of proceedings we have here briefly alluded to, and will, we have no doubt, prove the frauds we have intimated. The possession of the name we deem of no vital consequence, save as we have already made large contracts under it, and have recently issued bonds bearing the title. Our Company is known under it in financial circlest East. It has already a standing and importance, gained by purchase and shipment of large quantities of material, and the employment of laborers in the process of its operations. Therefore, as the Courts have decided our right to use the name, we shall not resign it, and the inconvenience of its use, if any exists, will only affect the Company that comes later into the financial field and claims it, when we are already successfully operating it. Besides, we respectfully suggest that the name O. C. R. R. Co. is a misnomer for the Company of which Mr. Gaston is now president. They have ordained irrevocably in their organization that their road shall never cross to the East side of the river. How can such a road be called Central? Any suitable change in their name would occasion them little or no inconvenience, or expense; and as we have already shown, we are fully entitled to the name, on the score of priority.

The people of Oregon will, bear in mind that we have not heretofore called on them for a dollar. Every incidental expense we have borne ourselves. The people have met no portion of the preliminary expenses, and they can now see for themselves that the work progresses. We deemed this policy preferable to collecting money and levying assessments before any satisfactory proof was given that the work would be done.

We expect you to aid us to the amount we have promised to raise, for your own benefit, but it is our design—in the future as in the past—to protect your interest, and preserve our own good name, by every reasonable guarantee. If we had entered upon this work with any design of speculating upon the public credulity, and deriving a profit from the general anxiety for a railroad, we could, in imitation of others, have got subscriptions to stock, and levied assessments, and so have derived means for payment of salaries and incidental expenses, but we determined to remain clean-handed, and deserve public confidence and respect by disinterested action. We considered ourselves the custodians of a great enterprise, in which all Oregon is interested, and we are, and ever shall be, ready and willing to render an account of our doings and progress, and consult the best interests of the State and the public, while the charge of this great enterprise remains in our hands.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

RELATIVE TO THE

INCORPORATED, APRIL 22, A. D. 1867

And reasons why such company is entitled to the benefit of the land grant given by Congress in aid of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland, Oregon, southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River Valleys, to the Central Pacific Road, in California, passed July 25th, 1866, and also why no other company has any legal or equitable right thereto.

SALEM, OREGON.

IS IT ENTITLED TO THE CONGRESSIONAL LAND GRANT OF JULY 25th, 1866.

——oOo——

The Oregon Central Railroad Company—a corporation incorporated and organized under the laws of the State of Oregon, at Salem, Oregon—claiming, as it is, to be entitled to the control and management of the land grant given in aid of a railroad and telegraph line in Oregon, by virtue of being designated as such corporation by joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Oregon, in October, 1868; and another corporation having also made claim to such land grant, we, the undersigned, Directors of such corporation, deem it but just, and proper, both to the Departments at Washington and the people of the State of Oregon, to make a statement of facts relative to the incorporation and organization of the two companies, and give the reasons why the claim of the company we represent is valid; and also why the claim of the other is without even the slightest foundation of right.

And before proceeding to such statement, and reasons why, let us have a clear and distinct understanding as to the nature of the grant, and also as to the steps necessary to be taken, in order that any corporation can legitimately make claim thereto.

The grant consisted of 12,800 acres of land per mile, to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Portland, Oregon, southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River valleys, to connect with the Central Pacific Railroad in California; the land to be taken by alternate sections, on either side of the line of the road, within a certain distance. The evident object of the grant, therefore, was, not merely to aid in the construction of a short line, or side road, in Oregon, but the purpose clearly was to aid in the construction of a grand central road, running centrally through Oregon, and on through the whole of Northern California, to the Central Pacific; thus constituting a mighty arm in that grand system of railways now spanning the continent.

At the date of the passage of this act by Congress (July 25, 1866,) there was a corporation already in existence in the State of California, organized under the general incorporation law of that State, in anticipation of the passage of this act by Congress, and for the purpose of receiving the grant, so far as it related to that State. This was the "California and Oregon Railroad Company;" and, consequently, the name of this company was inserted in the act of Congress, and it was by the terms of such act designated as the corporation to take the grant of lands, so far as they lay in the State of California. (See sections 1st and 2d

In Oregon, however, there was not at the date of the passage of this act any company in existence to take the grant; consequently, the Congress, instead of designating by name a company to take and manage the grant in Oregon, provided that the grant, so far as it related to this State, should go "to such company organized under the laws of Oregon as the Legislature of said State shall hereafter designate." (See section first of such act.)

It is very evident, therefore, from the language used, that before the Legislature could designate any company, such company must be organized, or at least in existence, by having done those acts essential to corporate, being "under the laws of Oregon," as the Legislature could not designate a company not in esse at the time of such attempted designation, or in any manner clothe with power an unborn corporation any more than a person in being could make a grant to an unborn child that would be effectual. The very most that could possibly be claimed in favor of such a proposition in the absence of any requirement in the act of Congress to the contrary, would be this, that the Legislature might possible (and we even deny this power), by using language relating to the future, grant certain rights or privileges to a company to be organized in the future, but in such case their language would necessarily relate to the future, and be conditioned upon such contemplated organization. A designation in the present tense, as was attempted in the joint resolution of 1866, hereinafter referred to, pre-supposes that the company designated is already in existence, for a present designation of a company not in existence is a legislative impossibility and a futile act. In such a case the designation is fictitious, and it must be presumed that the Legislature was either mistaken or imposed upon by others.

Having said this much in relation to the nature of the grant, and the acts necessary to be done before the Legislature could possibly designate any company to receive it, we will ask the question:

By what authority do the two companies referred to, claim that they are entitled to the grant? Neither of them was designated or named in the act of Congress as the one that should receive it. Both admit that before either can rightfully claim it, it must be designated by the Legislature of Oregon as the one to which it shall go. And, therefore, both companies are now claiming that they have been so designated. The company we represent claim that they were legally designated by the joint resolution of the Legislature of October 20th, A. D. 1868, and that there never was any legal designation prior to that date; while the company known as the Gaston or West-Side Company, claim that they were legally designated by the Legislature of 1866, by joint resolution of that body, of date October 10th, A. D. 1866, and they claim that by virtue of that designation, they acquired vested rights which cannot be taken away by the action of any subsequent Legislature.

Now, we freely admit that if the Gaston or West-Side corporation was organized, or in being at the date of the adoption of the joint resolution of October 10th, A. D. 1866, and such resolution referred to such corporation, then in existence, that then the claim of that company, as to vested rights, might be good; provided, it was free from fraud; and, provided further, such company had adopted a route in accordance with the requirements of the act of Congress, which they did not, as we we shall subsequently show. But here, at this point, is a prominent, stubborn, insurmountable fact, established and confirmed by the Record, that at once deprives this West-Side Company of the benefit of any such claim; and that is this, which we assert without fear of successful contradiction:—

There was not at the date of the passage of the joint resolution of October 10th, A. D. 1866, any "Oregon Central Railroad Company" in existence, or incorporated, in the State of Oregon, much less was there any such company then organzed; nor was there any such company in existence at any time during the whole session of that Legislature.

Now, we shall insist, if we make this proposition good by proofs, that we at once dispose of every claim legal and equitable, which the West-Side Company make to the grant in question.

Before proceeding to the proof of this proposition, let us premise by a clear statement of the acts necessary to be done under the laws of Oregon, in order to create a corporation. For this purpose we quote from the general incorporation law of Oregon, as follows:

"Sec. 1. Whenever three or more persons shall de-"sire to incorporate themselves for the purpose of engag-"ing in any lawful enterprise, business, pursuit, or occu-"pation, they may do so in the manner provided in this "act."

"Sec. 2. Such persons shall make and subscribe "written articles of incorporation in triplicate, and ac-"knowledge the same before any officer authorized to "take the acknowledgment of a deed, and file one of such "articles in the office of the Secretary of State, another "with the Clerk of the county where the enterprise, busi-"ness, pursuit or occupation is proposed to be carried on, "or the principal office or place of business is proposed "to be located, and retain the third in the possession of "the corporation."

Section 5 of the same act is in these words: "Upon "the making and filing of the articles of incorporation, "as herein provided, the persons subscribing the same "are corporators, and authorized to carry into effect the "object specified in the articles, in the manner provided "in this act; and they and their successors, associates "and assigns, by the name assumed in such articles, shall "thereafter be deemed a body corporate, with power," etc.

Now, it is clear that no corporation can, under the laws of Oregon, be created, or have a being until they have complied with the requirements of the foregoing sections. That is, the persons wishing to incorporate must "first make and subscribe articles in triplicate." They "must acknowledge them before some officer authorized to take the acknowledgment of the deed." But even this is not enough, for they must file these articles, "one in the office of the Secretary of State, another with the Clerk of the county where the enterprise, business, pursuit or occupation is proposed to be carried on," or where "the principal office or place of business is proposed to be located," and retain the third in possession of the corporation. When all these things are done, and not before, they, in the language of section 5 of such act, "shall thereafter be deemed a body corporate, with power," etc.

What are the facts with reference to the Gaston or West-Side Company? When did they file their articles of incorporation? Was it before or after the adoption of the joint resolution of October 10th, 1866, designating the "Oregon Central Railroad Company" as the one to receive the grant? If before, and they before that date had organized by the election of a Board of Directors, then in case there had been no fraud, and they had complied with the act of Congress in establishing the line of their road, we are ready to concede their right to the grant; if not until after, then we deny their right in toto, even if there had been no fraud.

Upon this subject let the record speak for itself, showing as it does that their articles were not filed either in the office of the Secretary of State or in the office of the County Clerk of Multnomah county, until over one month after the Legislature of 1866 had adjourned.

The following is a certified copy of the articles of incorporation of the Gaston or West-Side Company, as certified by the Secretary of State, under the great seal:

COPY.

2d. The object and business of the corporation shall be, to construct and operate a railroad from the city of Portland through the Willamette valley to the southern boundary of the State, under the laws of Oregon, and the law of Congress recently passed, granting land and aid for such purpose.

3d. The corporation shall have its principal office in the city of Portland.

4th. The capital stock of said corporation shall be five million dollars, divided into general and preferred interest bearing stock, in such proportions as the Incorporators or Board of Directors may deem proper.

5th. The amount of each share of the capital stock shall be one hundred dollars.

6th. The termini of the railroad proposed to be constructed by said company, shall be, for the northern end, at the city of Portland, and for the southern end, at some point on or near the southern boundary of the State, as may be hereafter determined by actual survey.

Where, then, we ask, is the right of the West-Side Company to the land grant, when they did not have an existence, either in corporate capacity or as an organized company, until over five weeks after the adoption of the joint resolution of October 10th, 1866, from which alone they make claim.

But not only so—these articles of incorporation are so infected with fraud, that it would be useless to dispute the proposition when viewed in the light of the facts in the case, and the circumstances connected with their existence.

Let us look to these facts and circumstances.

On or about the 29th day of September, A. D. 1866, the following named gentlemen, whose names appear as part of the corporators in the West-Side Company, conceived the idea of associating themselves together as a corporation under the name of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company." The purpose being to construct a railroad and telegraph line in accordance with the act of Congress of July 25th, 1866; and with the intention also of going before the Legislature of Oregon, then in session, and receiving the designation, as in the act of Congress required. In pursuance of this agreement, the present articles of the West-Side Company were drawn up, all except the certificates of acknowledgment, and were signed in triplicate by the corporators before referred to, namely: J. S. Smith, I. R. Moores, H. W. Corbett, J. H. Mitchell, E. D. Shattuck, Jesse Applegate, F. A. Chenoweth, and Joel Palmer—eight in all. These articles, when so signed, were given to J. Gaston, the present President of the West-Side Company, who was then, to-wit—September 29th, 1866—a Notary Public, for the purpose of having him take the acknowledgments, and attach his certificate of acknowledgment to the same and file them as required by law, in order to create the corporation existence. All this Gaston, as such Notary Public, agreed to do, and took such articles in his possession, and soon afterwards stated to several of the before named corporators that he had filed them as required by law, and the aforesaid corporators believed they were so filed. After this, and about the 10th of October, 1866, this man Gaston went before the House Committee on Railroads of the Legislature and falsely represented that a corporation had been duly incorporated and organized under the name of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," by the hereinbefore named gentlemen as corporators; and the said corporators, also, relying upon the statements of Gaston, that he had attached his certificate of acknowledgment to, and filed the said articles, and believing, as they did, that the same had been done, represented to the said Legislature that they were so incorporated, and asked of such Legislature to be designated as the corporation to receive the land grant.

In pursuance of such representations, and relying on the same as true, the House Committe on Railroads, on the .... of October, 1866, made a lengthy report to that body on the subject of railroads generally, wherein they referred also specifically to the land grant and to a corporation, which it is evident they supposed to be in existence at the time, composed of the persons before named. In this report the committee use this language, under the head of "The Oregon Central Railroad:"

"We come now to consider a definite proposition. "Through the efforts of a few of our citizens, acting in "conjunction with some railroad capitalists of Califor- "nia, and aided by the Pacific coast delegation in Con- "gress, a grant of twenty sections of public land per "mile has been secured from Congress to aid in con- "structing a line of railroad from Portland, Oregon, "to the Central Pacific Railroad in California. It is "made the duty of this Legislature to designate the "company which shall receive and manage so much of "this land grant as lies within the State of Oregon. "In view of these facts, the following named gentlemen "have incorporated themselves under the general incor- "poration law of this State, to-wit: J. S. Smith, I. R. "Moores, J. H. Mitchell, E. D. Shattuck, Jesse Apple-

"gate, Edward R. Geary, S. Ellsworth and H. W. Cor"bett, under the name and style of "The Oregon Central "Railroad Company," for the purpose of receiving the "said grant of land and using it, so far as it may go "towards the construction of the proposed railroad, pass"ing through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River
"valleys."

(See House Journal of Session 1866, of Oregon Legislature, page 256).

It will be observed from this report, and a comparison of it with the articles of the West-Side Company, that by the one, the report, the company was supposed, by the committee, to consist of eight corporators, and those eight the same persons who had originally signed such articles, and who supposed they were incorporated, with the exception that the name of E. R. Geary was substituted for that of F. A. Chenoweth; and that of S. Ellsworth for the name of Joel Palmer; whereas the present articles show the same to have been incorporated by eighteen corporators, instead of eight. How then did all this occur? We answer by a most palpable and unpardonable fraud, practiced by J. Gaston and others, who afterwards, together with him, surreptitiously and without the knowledge or consent of the original corporators, save and accept, perhaps, that of one or two of them, signed said articles of incorporation, as additional corporators, and for the purpose of entering into a secret fraudulent agreement to secure the control and management of its organization, and for the purpose of directing the route of the road to the west side of the river from the central course intended by the original corporators, and which is required by the act of Congress; and which secret and fraudulent arrangement they did enter into, and are still attempting to carry out. And the Legislature, being thus imposed upon, as herein stated, adopted the following joint resolution, under which the West-Side Company claims title to the land grant:

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION NO. 1.

Relating to the Railroad Land Grant from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, Oregon.

WHEREAS, The Congress of the United States at its last session passed an act granting land to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, Oregon, and made it the duty of the Legislative Assembly, of the State of Oregon, to designate the company organized under the laws of Oregon, which shall receive that part of said land grant lying within the State of Oregon; therefore,

Be it Resolved by the House, the Senate concurring, That the "Oregon Central Railroad Company"—a company organized under the general incorporation law of Oregon—be, and the same is hereby designated as the company which shall be entitled to receive the land granted, and all the benefits of an act of Congress, approved July 25th, 1866, entitled "An act granting land to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph, from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, Oregon," so far as said land grant applies to the State of Oregon.

Adopted by the House and Senate, October 10th, 1866.

I certify the foregoing to be a true copy of the resolution passed that date.

SAMUEL E. MAY,
Secretary of State.

This man Gaston, instead of attaching his certificate to said articles, as he had promised and agreed to do, and as it was his duty as such officer of Notary Public to do, and instead of filing the same in the office of Secretary of State, as he agreed to do, put said articles in his pocket, doing neither, and retained them there until three days after the adjournment of the Legislature (it adjourned October 20th, 1866), to-wit: October 23d, when, without the knowledge or consent of the original eight corporators, except, perhaps, one or two of them, he solicited and obtained the signatures of the following named persons as additional corporators to such articles, and at the date and places hereinafter stated, as shown by the certificate of Gaston's attached to such articles, to-wit: M. M. Melvin, at Salem, on the 23d of October; Geo. L. Woods, at Salem, on November 10th; R. R. Thompson, J. C. Ainsworth, S. G. Reed, John McCraken and C. H. Lewis, at Portland, on November 16th; and B. F. Brown and Thos. H. Cox, at Salem, on November 20th; and to cap the climax of base infidelity to his trust, J. Gaston, on the same date, November 20th, attached his name as an additional corporator; and, on the 16th day of November, 1866, he attaches his certificate and seal as Notary Public, for the first time, to said articles; and, on the 21st day of November, 1866, he, for the first time, files one of the triplicates of such articles in the office of the Secretary of State; and, on the 23d day of November, 1866, files another in the office of the County Clerk of Multnomah County. (See certificate of Benj. L. Norden, Clerk, before cited.) And for the purpose of showing the manner in which Gaston obtained the names of at least two of the ten additional corporators to the articles of the West-Side Company (or rather to the articles which were intended for the company we now represent, but which he fraudulently carried off and appropriated to his fraudulent purpose), we insert the following affidavits of T. H. Cox and B. F. Brown:

We, Thomas H. Cox and B. F. Brown, being duly sworn, severally depose and say, that on or about the 20th day of November, A. D. 1866, Joseph Gaston requested us to sign articles of incorporation of "The Oregon Central Railroad Company," assuring us that several names more were needed to properly complete and organize said company; that with the view of assisting to complete said incorporation, we did sign the same, and also a paper appointing said Gaston general canvassing agent for the company, with a salary; that we have taken no part in the said company otherwise than as above. The foregoing statement is to the best of our knowledge and belief.

It is well, also here, to remark that the commission of J. Gaston, as Notary Public, expired on the 10th day of October, 1866, and he then ceased to be such Notary Public; and from that date, at no time until November 20th, was he a Notary Public, or authorized to take the acknowledgment of deeds, or of articles of incorporation, or to use a Notarial seal. Upon this point, we will permit the Record to speak for itself:

CERTIFICATE OF SAMUEL E. MAY, SECRETARY OF STATE.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,)
November 10th, 1868.)

I, Samuel E. May, Secretary of State for the State of Oregon, do hereby certify that the commission of Joseph Gaston, as a Notary Public for Marion County, State of Oregon, expired on the 10th day of October, A. D. 1866, at which time he ceased to be such Notary; and that at no time after the said 10th October, 1866, during the remainder of the month of October, 1866, and until the 20th day of November, 1866, was he, the said Joseph Gaston, in commission as a Notary Public for said State, or authorized to do business as such officer.

Witness my hand and the seal of said State, the day above written.

Secretary of State.

But the object of the refusal of Gaston to attach his certificate when he should have done it, and file the articles, will be still more clearly apparent when it is known that he—Gaston—on or about the 16th day of November, 1866, fraudulently confederated with (and they with him) five of the ten persons whose signatures he surreptitiously and fraudulently obtained to said articles after the adjournment of the Legislature, and for the purposes heerinbefore stated, entered into a written agreement with them, of which the following is a copy:

SECRET, FRAUDULENT AGREEMENT.

"We, the undersigned, part of corporators in the Oregon Central Railroad Company, of Portland, Oregon, for the purpose of controlling the organization and future management of the said corporation, and to make money and business thereby, do hereby bind ourselves together, in the following contract, as equal partners:

1st. Each person here subscribing shall own, have, and be entitled to receive one-sixth of all the profits, dividends, and moneys which can be made by and out of the ownership, contract and management of the said corporation, its franchises and other property.

2d. That each of the parties hereto shall always be entitled to a place in the Board of Directors.

3d. That the managing officers and agents shall always be selected from the parties hereto.

4th. That this contract and agreement shall not be known to the public as are other partnerships, (the italics are ours) and in no case shall any one or more of the parties hereto have any right or power to bind the other parties to this contract in any matter of indebtedness, or pecuniary liability, without their previous consent or subsequent ratification, and any attempt to do so shall forfeit the entire interest of said party in this contract to his other partners.

5th. No assessments, charges, or expenses of any kind, shall ever be levied or collected by the Board of Directors, upon any of the stock held by any party hereto, nor upon any of the persons or interests herein named without the unanimous consent of all the parties hereto. (Italics are ours).

6th. It is hereby agreed that one-half of the capital stock of said company—to wit: Two million five hundred thousand dollars, shall be subscribed by one or more of the parties hereto, upon the condition of this agreement, and a Board of Directors, elected, and each person to this contract shall have an equal interest in said stock, to be by him held and owned.

7th. That, as a consideration to the other stockholders in said company, to be public, and to said corporation, the parties hereto agree to do all in their power to develop the property of said corporation, and to go forward in the matter with as much speed and energy as the circumstances will allow.

Dated Salem, November 16th, A. D. 1866."

Signed by J. Gaston and five others of the ten corporators who signed the articles of the West-Side Company, after the Legislature of 1866 had adjourned.

The foregoing agreement was read before the Senate of the State of Oregon at its late session, in September last, while the matter of the Congressional land grant was under consideration, and it was there proven to have been executed as herein stated, by the testimony of Judge F. A. Chenoweth, who testified that Gaston had admitted its execution as herein stated, when the same was read before a public meeting in Corvallis, in July last; and even Gaston himself, when the same was read before the Senate, did not attempt to deny it; besides, of the execution of this agreement, as herein stated, there is abundant other proof in existence, should the same be disputed.

On the 17th day of November, 1866, two of the eight original corporators, residing at Salem, to-wit: J. S. Smith (Representative elect in Congress) and I. R. Moores—on discovering the fact, that the articles which they supposed had been duly filed, had never been placed upon record; and that there was no "Oregon Central Railroad Company" in existence; and that, therefore, the Legislature had been imposed upon, and their action was a nullity, immediately, in conjunction with E. N. Cooke, prepared, executed, and filed new articles of incorporation, in which articles they adopted the name of "The Oregon Central Railroad Company." Their articles were duly filed, as required by law, on the 17th day of November, 1866, which was the first railroad corporation incorporated in the State of Oregon under that name; this being four days prior to the filing of the articles of the West-Side or Gaston Company.

The following is a true copy of such articles, as certified to from the record by Samuel E. May, Secretary of State:

In this situation matters remained until in April, 1867, neither of said companies having up to that date, April 22d, 1867, had any stock subscribed, or organized, or attempted any organization. At that date, parties representing capitalists in California and the East, came to Oregon, being the same persons referred to in the report of the House Committee in 1866, before cited, and desired to enter into a contract for the construction of the road provided for by the act of Congress giving the land grant.

Upon examination it was found that the articles filed first, by Messrs. Smith, Moores and Cooke, did not fix the capital stock at an amount adequate to the contemplated enterprise; and, regarding the articles filed by Gaston as illegal, fraudulent and void, for the reasons hereinbefore referred to, it was thought best by corporators in said company, first incorporated, as well as by a majority of the eight persons who first signed, as hereinbefore stated, to merge said corporation in a new company, by filing new articles, that might be in all respects legal, and free from fraud, and with a capital stock adequate to the magnitude of the enterprise. Accordingly, on the 22d day of April, 1867, the following articles of incorporation were duly executed and filed, and under which the company we represent was duly organized, and under which it is now proceeding to construct its road in accordance with the act of Congress:

ARTICLE 1. This corporation shall be known as and do business under the name of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company."

ART. 2. The enterprise, occupation and business for which this company incorporates, is to construct a railroad, with all the necessary branches, fixtures, buildings and appurtenances, from Portland, in Oregon, southerly, about three hundred miles to the California line; to maintain the said road in good condition and repair, and to employ the same in the transportation of passengers and freight.

ART. 3. The principal office for the transaction of the business of the company shall be kept at Salem, Marion county, Oregon.

ART. 4. The capital stock of the Oregon Central Railroad Company shall be fixed at seven millions, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($7,250,000).

ART. 5. The number of shares of the capital stock shall be seventy-two thousand five hundred (72,500), and the amount of each share of the stock shall be one hundred dollars ($100).

ART. 6. The period of time during which the company shall remain in operation, is not limited as to duration.

Secretary of State.

Under these articles the capital stock was duly subscribed and taken in April, 1867, and in the same month "The Oregon Central Railroad Company," of Salem, Oregon, was duly organized by the election of a Board of Directors, and a contract was also entered into at that date with parties representing California and Eastern capital for the construction and equipment of the first one hundred and fifty miles of the road, which contract was subsequently transferred by the original contractors to Ben. Holladay & Co., who have agreed in writing, with this company, to perform the same in every particular, including, also, a second contract, subsequently entered into with the original contractors, for the construction and equipment of the balance of the road in Oregon, running through the Umpqua and Rogue River Valleys, to the California line, which latter contract has also been transferred to Ben. Holladay & Co., and they have agreed in writing, with the Oregon Central Railroad Company, to perform the same in every particular. After all these things had taken place and when it was supposed by every person cognizant of the fact, that the West-Side or Gaston corporation had died from the poisonous fumes of the illegality and fraud in which it was conceived, and with which it was surrounded, Gaston in May, 1867, without the ability to pay any sum whatever—notoriously so—in pursuance of the fraudulent agreement hereinbefore cited, subscribed in his own name, and took to himself the whole of the one-half of the capital stock in this West-Side Company—the whole capital stock being five million dollars. He (Gaston) taking two millions five hundred thousand dollars. He then gets a few persons, enough for Directors, to subscribe a share each, and thus organizes the West-Side Company, by the election of himself and others Directors, and himself President.

Thus it was, that the obscure Notary Public, of Salem, Oregon, who was called upon simply to take the acknowledgments of eight persons to articles of incorporation, succeeded through a most palpable and unblushing fraud, in becoming the owner of the whole corporation; and thus holding in his own pocket the votes necessary to control a corporation with a nominal capital of five millions of dollars, he disposes portions of the other half of the capital stock to the unsuspecting farmers of Oregon, and for it receives their money, to be used in the construction of the road, on which the only work that has yet been done has been confined to a distance of five miles, and the grading for that distance is not yet completed, while his two million five hundred thousand dollars of stock remain in his hands unassessable, and upon which he has never paid a cent, and upon which no assessment has ever been levied. These facts Joseph Gaston was himself compelled to reluctantly admit, as a witness before the Senate, of the State of Oregon, in the recent investigation of this matter before that honorable body.

It will be observed, therefore, that "The Oregon Central Railroad Company" proper, which we represent, was organized by the subscription of its stock, and the election of its Board of Directors, about one month prior to the organization of the Gaston or West-Side Company. The East-Side Company being organized in April, 1867, and the West-Side in May, 1867.

And upon this point we would attract special attention to the act of Congress, of July 25th, 1866, making this land grant, The grant was to go to a company, not merely incorporated under the laws of Oregon, but to "such company organized under the laws of Oregon, as the Legislature of said State shall hereafter designate." The terms "organized" and "organization" when used in reference to corporations, and especially under the general incorporation law of Oregon, have a technical, well defined meaning, and include the subscription of stock and the election of a Board of Directors. When, therefore, the Congress of the United States passed the act of July 25th, 1866, and provided that it should be received and managed by "such company organized under the laws of Oregon, as the Legislature might hereafter designate," they intended that there should be more than a mere naked corporate existence, without a dollar of capital stock subscribed, and without any head whatever, save mere corporators, who, until they have subscribed for, or taken stock, are not responsible for a cent. They intended just what they said, that the company should be organized; that is, that one-half, at least, of the capital stock should be subscribed, which, under the law of Oregon, must be done before an organization can take place, and a Board of Directors elected; and that this should all be done before the Legislature proceeded to designate such company, in order that the Legislature might the better determine whether or not it was a bona fide company, and one composed of men to whom should be entrusted the management and control of a Congressional grant of lands, worth over five millions of dollars.

Under the general incorporation law of Oregon, a company may be duly incorporated by three or more persons, no one of whom resides within a thousand miles of Oregon, and no one of whom is worth a cent; whereas, a company to be organized, must have at least a majority of the Directors residents of the State, and one-half of the stock bona fide subscribed.

(See General Incorporation Law of Oregon.)

Did Congress, therefore, intend to give this grant to an irresponsible company, such as the former? or, did they not rather intend that it should go to a bona fide, responsible company, such as the latter?

Admitting, therefore, for the time being the argument, and merely for the sake of the proposition, that although no company was organized at the time of the adoption of the joint resolution of October 10th, 1866, that it would have the effect of passing the grant to the company that might thereafter be first organized. Even then, the company we represent, being the first one organized after the adoption of that resolution, would be the company in which the grant would vest.

But suppose, for the argument, that the Legislature had the power to designate a company not in esse, and that the effect of such attempt would be to vest the grant in the company that might be thereafter incorporated; then, if such a thing were at all possible, it most certainly would vest in that company that was first incorporated under the name designated by the Legislature. And in this view, the grant, in this instance, could not possibly vest in the West-Side Company, for the reason that the company composed of J. S. Smith, I. R. Moores, and E. N. Cooke, was duly incorporated under the laws of Oregon, assuming, as they did, the name designated by the Legislature—the "Oregon Central Railroad Company"—on the 17th day of November, 1866, four days prior to the incorporation of the West-Side Company. And it would be no answer to say, that such corporation lapsed for want of organization, for in that event the grant would fail with the company in which it vested, and the designation would fail.

But we deny that the action of the Legislature of 1866, had any vitality whatever; it was a mere mullity, in every sense of the word; a legislative hydatid, superinduced by imposition and fraud, that fell still-born upon the statute book.

And to this conclusion, also, did the managers of the Gaston Company come, as we will show from their own Record. When a person has a deed for the land on which he lives, from the former legal owner, he is not very likely to apply for a second one. So in this case. If the West-Side Company had the land grant by virtue of the action of the Legislature of 1866, then, why, we would inquire, did they seek to obtain a designation from the Legislature of 1868? The truth is, that Company knew full well that they had no corporate existence, much less an organization, at any time while the Legislature of 1866 were in session; and that they had no claim whatever to the Congressional grant, by virtue of any former action of the Legislature; and for proof of these statements, we refer to Joint Resolution No. 14, introduced at the late session of the Legislature, October 7th, 1868, by Doctor J. R. Bayley, Senator from Benton county, the champion of the Gaston Road in the late investigation in the Oregon Senate, which resolution had for its purpose the designation of the Gaston or West-Side Company.

See Senate Journal, Session 1868.

Herewith we give the full action of the Senate upon such resolution, as certified from such journal:

Mr. Bayley moved,

That the resolution be adopted,

Mr. Hendershott moved,

That the resolution be made the special order for Friday, at 11 o'clock.

Which motion was lost.

Mr. Cochran moved,

To refer to Committee on Railroads.

Which motion was lost.

Mr. Hendershott offered

S. R. No. 14.

Resolved, by the Senate, That the Secretary of State be requested to furnish to this body, as soon as possible, copies of all entries, filings of papers, etc., of the Oregon Central Railroad Company on file in his office.

Mr. Adams moved to amend by striking out all after the words "Secretary of State," and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Be respectfully requested to immediately bring before this Senate the original papers purporting to be articles of incorporation of 'The Oregon Central Railroad Company,' or companies, and memoranda of filings thereof."

Mr. Hendershott accepted the amendment.

The resolution as amended was then adopted.

The Secretary of State then appeared, in compliance with the resolution, and read the papers called for therein.

Mr. Hendershott offered the following resolution:

S. R. No. 15.

Resolved, by the Senate, That one attorney representing the East-Side, and one representing the West-Side Railroad Company, be permitted to make a statement of the merits of their respective roads; provided, they shall not occupy to exceed one hour each.

The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Stout moved.

That the rival Railroad Companies be allowed until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning to appear by attorney, in accordance with the resolution.

Carried.

And on motion of Mr. Huston, the further consideration of S. J. R. No. 14, was postponed until tomorrow morning at 10-½ o'clock.

Thursday, Oct. 8—10-½ A. M.

Mr. Cornelius offered

S. R. No. 16.

WHEREAS, The Secretary of State has read before the Senate the articles of incorporation of the Oregon Central Railroad Companies; therefore, in order to have full information of the organization of said companies,

Resolved, That said companies be invited to produce their original stock-books for the inspection of the Senate.

Carried.

Upon invitation of the President, J. K. Kelly, attorney for the West-Side Railroad Company, and J. H. Mitchell, attorney for the East-Side Railroad Company, appeared within the bar of the Senate, and proceeded, in pursuance of S. R. No. 15, to present the claims of their respective companies, and in offering evidence (which consumed the entire day).

Friday, Oct. 9th.

The President announced that the hour had arrived for consideration of S. J. R. No. 14, which, on motion of Mr. Huston, was resumed, and the remainder of the morning session was consumed by the arguments of the attorneys.

IN THE AFTERNOON.

Pending the motion to adopt the resolution,

Mr. Stout offered S. J. M. No. 2.

And thereafter Senate adjourned until to-morrow, 9 A. M.

Saturday, Oct. 10.

On motion of Mr. Cornelius, S. J. R. No. 14 was made the special order for Saturday, October 17th, at 10 o'clock A. M.

Saturday, Oct. 17th.

Mr. Ford moved that S. J. R. No. 14 be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Cornelius moved to amend by postponing the whole subject matter of the resolution.

Mr. Ford accepted the amendment.

Which was lost.

Mr. Bayley asked leave to withdraw the resolution.

Which was carried, and S. J. R. No. 14 was withdrawn.

From this record, therefore, showing, as it does, the whole proceedings of the attempt of the West-Side Company to obtain a designation under the false, but most transparent assumption, that they already had some kind of equitable right, it appears, that after a full and complete investigation before the Senate, when it became so apparent that even former friends of the Gaston Company would not have the courage to stand up in the Senate, and in the face of the most glaring frauds and illegality with which it was surrounded, and involved by the testimony adduced, vote to designate it as the company to receive this valuable grant, Doctor J. R. Bayley, the aforesaid champion and Senator from Benton, asks leave to withdraw the resolution, and so Senate Joint Resolution No. 14, of the session of 1868, having for its purpose the designation of the West-Side Company, expired in the arms of its friends, and returned lifeless to the Doctor, who presided over the ceremonies of its birth.

This occurred in the Senate, October 17th, 1868. On the same day Senator Miller, of Jackson county, offered Senate Joint Resolution No. 16, to designate the Oregon Central Railroad Company, of Salem, Oregon, the one we represent, as the company to receive the land grant. And here we present a certified copy from the Journals of the Senate and House, giving this resolution in full, and also the action of the Senate and House thereon, and to which we call special attention:

Mr. Miller, of Jackson, offered S. J. R. No. 16.

WHEREAS, The Congress of the United States, by an act approved July 25th, 1866, entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph from the Central Pacific Railroad to Portland, in Oregon," did grant certain lands in the State of Oregon, and confer certain benefits and privileges upon such company organized under the laws of Oregon, as the Legislature of such State should thereafter designate;

AND WHEREAS, The Legislative Assembly of Oregon, at its Fourth Regular Session, did adopt a joint resolution known as "House Joint Resolution No. 13," designating in terms "The Oregon Central Railroad Company," as the company entitled to receive the land granted by, and all the benefits and privileges of the said act of Congress;

AND WHEREAS, At the time of the adoption of the said joint resolution, as aforesaid, no such company as "The Oregon Central Railroad Company" was organized or in existence, and the said joint resolution was adopted under a misapprehension of facts as to the organization and existence of such a company;

AND WHEREAS, The designation of the company to receive the lands in the State of Oregon granted, and the benefits and privileges conferred by the said act of Congress yet remains to be made; therefore,

Be It Resolved by the Senate, the House concurring, That the Oregon Central Railroad Company, a corporation organized at Salem, on the twenty-second day of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, under and pursuant to the laws of the State of Oregon, be, and the same is hereby designated as the company entitled to receive the lands in Oregon, and the benefits and privileges conferred by said act of Congress.

And moved its adoption.

Mr. Stout moved the previous question.

Mr. Trevitt moved that the Senate take a recess until 1-½ o'clock this afternoon.

Which motion was lost.

The previous question was ordered.

YEAS—Messrs, Bayley, Brown, Cochran, Crawford, Cyrus, Dribblesbly, Ford, Hendershott, Miller of Marion, Miller of Jackson, Powell, Stout, Thompson and Trevitt—14.

NAYS—Messrs. Adams, Cornelius, Herman, Holsclaw, Huston, Ison, Persbaker and Mr. President—8.

So the resolution was adopted.

Before the resolution was announced, Mr. Bayley gave notice he would move a reconsideration of the same.

Mr. Trevitt moved that the Senate take a recess until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Hendershott moved a reconsideration of the vote by which S. J. R. No. 16 was adopted.

Mr. Stout moved that the motion to reconsider be indefinitely postponed.

Which motion prevailed.

I certify the foregoing to be a correct abstract of the proceedings in Senate, relating to the adoption of S. J. R. No. 14 and 16, taken from the Journal of said Senate, now on file in my office.

(SEAL OF STATE) SAMUEL E. MAY,
Secretary of State.

After a full and complete investigation, of this matter, in relation to the land grant, during nearly the whole of the session, the Legislature of the State of Oregon, to whose care this important trust was committed, decided by a majority of six, in a Senate composed of twenty-two, and by a majority of ten, in a House composed of forty-six, that, too, without regard to party, which so frequently rules in similar cases, that the West-Side or Gaston Company is not entitled to the Congressional land grant; and that "The Oregon Central Railroad Company, of Salem, Oregon, is entitled to it.

Another fact, or two, in this connection, might serve to throw still more light upon the controversy relative to this land grant, and especially upon that branch of it wherein the West-Side Company claim that they were designated in October, 1866, These facts are as follows: As before stated, the West-Side Company came before the last Legislature, praying of that body to designate them as the company entitled to the grant, and so very anxious were they to succeed in this particular, that they, in order to secure certain votes in the Legislature, were willing to barter away the one-half of the Congressional grant to another company incorporated during the sitting of the Legislature, in pursuance of an understanding between the West Side Company and the three corporators of this new organization. Consequently, on the .... day of September, 1868, three persons filed articles of incorporation under the name of "The Willamette Valley Railroad Company," wherein they proposed to build a railroad from Portland, Oregon, on the east side of the river; the same to cross the river at one of the several points named in such articles.

Upon the date of the filing of these articles, and before any organization had been effected, a meeting is held between the Directors of the West-Side Company and the three corporators of the "Willamette Valley Railroad Company," at which meeting a writing was drawn up and executed by the President of the West-Side Company, Joseph Gaston, by and with the sanction of the Directors, wherein they agreed substantially that the one-half of the Congressional land grant, so far as it related to the Wilalmette Valley, should go to and be owned by the said "Willamette Valley Railroad Company;" and wherein, also, the West-Side Company agreed to convey such lands to said irresponsible company, incorporated, as it was, unquestionably for the purpose of a private speculation, and in pursuance of a previous understanding with the President and Directors of the West-Side Company.

This attempt, however, to purchase a designation at the very great expense, and still greater impropriety, of attempting to divert the Congressional grant from the true purpose of its creation—a great public benefit—to that of a mere individual speculation, did not succeed with the Legislature of Oregon. These facts were proven before the Senate in the recent investigation, and cannot now be successfully denied by the President or Directors of the West-Side Company. Thus it was that this company, which talks of vested rights, by reason of the action of the Legislature of 1866, were willing to give away the half of such grant, in order to secure a designation by the Legislature in 1868.

But say they, the Gaston or West-Side Company filed its assent to the grant in the office of the Secretary of Interior, within one year from the date of the passage of the act of Congress, as required by that act. But we would inquire this: If you have never been designated by the Legislature of the State of Oregon as the company to receive the grant, which it must be admitted by every candid person acquainted with the facts here presented, that you never have, then, how, or by what authority, could you file your assent? Can a person accept a thing that has never been even offered to him? Can a corporation file its assent to a grant that has never even been tendered it? As well might one child out of a whole family of children undertake to take possession of his father's estate, under the pretence that he has a right by devise, while his father is yet alive, and before his will is made. The claim, therefore, that the West-Side Company have rights, because they have filed their assent, is simply preposterous, and without shadow of claim even to further consideration.

But it is said, although there was no company organization during the sitting of the Legislature of 1866, yet there were certain articles of incorporation drawn up and presented to the Legislature; and although they were not fully incorporated, the Legislature supposed they were, and, therefore, an equity of some kind was raised. We deny most emphatically, as a matter of law, that any equity could arise, as this was a transaction in relation to trust property, and the Legislature in disposing of the grant must proceed in strict accordance with its terms. But suppose an equity could arise? That equity would be in favor of the company we now represent. Suppose articles of incorporation were "presented to the Legislature" and the "grant solicited," as stated in Senate Joint Resolution No. 14, introduced by Senator Bayley at the late session, who, we would inquire, were the corporators whose names were then signed to those articles? How many were there? Were there eighteen, the number whose names now appear to such articles as corporators, or were there but eight? Gaston's certificate as Notary Public to those articles, answers all these inquiries. From that certificate it appears, as we have already shown, that there were but eight names to those papers at any time during that session, and that ten, a majority of whom have from the first owned and controlled the company, were added afterwards, without authority. If any equity could arise at all, it most certainly would be in favor of that company which is now composed principally of the men whom the Legislature supposed at that time were incorporated. Whom did they suppose formed the "Oregon Central Railroad Company" in October, 1866, when they undertook to designate that company? We answer, unquestionably, the eight men whose names were then signed to such articles, and a majority of these eight men have not only never had any interest in the West-Side Company, save to sign the articles as corporators, which were afterwards smuggled from them by fraud, but they are now either stockholders or Directors, and some of them both, in the company we represent, while at least four of the ten added corporators to the West-Side Company, including the present Governor of the State, have, upon discovering the frauds practiced, long since refused to have further connection with it.

But suppose the Legislature intended to give the grant to a company composed of the eight names appearing in the report of the House Committee on Railroads, in 1866, how, then, would the matter stand? Not one of those eight persons ever participated in the organization of the West-Side Company, nor has any one of them ever taken any part in such company; while four of them are now active members of the company we represent, and have been from the date of its incorporation. In the light, therefore, of these recorded facts, we would invoke the candid judgment of every impartial mind to an agreement with us in the proposition that in no possible view can the West-Side Company rightfully claim the grant in question, but that the same, by every rule legal and equitable, is in the company we represent.

But there is yet another reason, and an important one, why the action of the last Legislature is right, and that is this:

The object in view by Congress in passing the act of July 25th, 1866, was to aid in the construction of a central road, "Beginning at the city of Portland, in Oregon, and running thence southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River valleys, to the southern boundary of Oregon." This is the language of the act, and no company can take this grant, whether they be designated by the Legislature or not, unless they run their road from Portland, southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River valleys. This is an essential, a requirement that must be met; and, in this most material matter, is the West-Side Company found wanting. Their route, as laid down on their maps, and on which they have comemnced their work, instead of starting at Portland and running thence southerly through the Willamette valley, runs some two or three miles southerly from Portland, and thence takes a northwesterly course, running near thirty miles in such direction before taking a southerly direction, as required by the act, and then running, not through the Willamette, but through the Chehalem valley. The road is emphatically what its name would indicate—a West-Side Road, flying off in a tangent from the route laid down by Congress. It courses its way along the foot of the eastern base of the coast range, missing every important town in the State, including its Capital, and leaving the broad valley of the Willamette, the finest and one of the most fertile in the world, with its millions of productive acres, with its thriving cities, and its rich farms, to be bisected, as it were, by "The Oregon Central Railroad," of Salem, Oregon, which, in accordance with the act of Congress, starts at the city of Portland the great comemrcial emporium of the Northern Pacific Coast, and "running thence southerly through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River valleys." It penetrates their very centers, and taps every city and important town in the State. Upon this road the work has, since its commencement in April last, progressed with a rapidity scarcely excelled in the construction of the Union and Central Pacific, when we take into consideration the scarcity of labor in this State. There are at this time about seventy miles in all ready for the ties. Two saw-mills of immense capacity, with planers and other machinery attached, are now running, and have been for some time past turning out ties and materials for cars and depot buildings in great quantities; while still another, a third, mill, is in progress of erection.

We have thus presented at some length the main facts, amounting, as they do, to a history made up principally from Record evidence relating to Railroad Companies in Oregon, and more particularly for the purpose of answering the question as to what company, if any, is in law and equity, entitled to the Congressional land grant. It is an old Roman maxim, as true now as in the days of that ancient empire, that "Jus et fraus nunquam cohabitant"—right and fraud never dwell together. And applying this truthful maxim to the West-Side Company, in the light of the evidence here presented, to say nothing of the gross illegality of their proceedings, we believe that every candid mind must at once concede that the claim of such company, that they are entitled to this grant is illegal and unjust.

We do, therefore, feeling implicit confidence in the enterprise in which we are engaged, and in the justness of our claim to the Congressional land grant, most respectfully submit this statement of facts, and reasons why "The Oregon Central Railroad Company," of Salem, Oregon, is entitled to the grant referred to, to the exclusion of all others, to all persons, and to all officers and Departments of Government, that may be interested in relation to the same, in having justice and right prevail.

IS THE OREGON CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY OF PORTLAND, OREGON, ENTITLED TO THE CONGRESSIONAL LAND GRANT OF JULY 25th, 1866?

Before answering the above question, we beg leave to notice the reason for issuing this pamphlet. It is not the desire of the officers or directors of said Company to engage in any dispute before the public. Acting solely upon the defense, we have long forborne to answer false charges against our Company, from a reluctance to engage in disputes which can alone be settled in Courts of Justice. The Oregon Central Railroad Company of Salem—commonly known as the East Side, or Holladay Company, have recently issued their second pamphlet, and like the one issued by them in May, 1868, is burdened with unfair and untruthful charges against the legality of our corporation and the standing and reputation of our officers and directors. Further forbearance has ceased to be a virtue; and we now propose to make such a statement of the inside history of both of these Corporations as will not only be interesting to several officers and directors in the Holladay Company, but make a valuable document for future reference. High places will furnish no excuse for further silence, nor will we hesitate to call things by their right names; and,

"Nothing extenuate,
Or aught set down in malice."

We most urgently ask and desire a thorough and careful investigation at the hands of the public, and promise to show to the satisfaction of every impartial man, that all the charges of fraud and illegality made against our Company are not only false and utterly groundless, but that each and all of them, have been so decided, either direct or indirectly, by courts of Justice in the State of Oregon.

As a foundation to the examination of the above question, we briefly state, what is not disputed by any one, that the Act of Congress of July 25th, 1866, granting lands to aid in the construction of a Railroad from Portland, Oregon, to the Central Pacific Road in California, required that the Oregon Legislature should, designate the Company to receive the land in Oregon, and also that the Company designated should file its "Assent" to such Act of Congress, with the Secretary of the Interior, within one year from July 25th, 1866. It is also a fact, not disputed, that the Oregon Legislature of 1866, on the 10th day of October, passed "House

Joint Resolution No. 13, which "designated" the "Oregon Central Railroad Company," to receive the benefits of said land grant.

Two Corporations, (The O. C. R. R. Co., of Portland, and the O. C. R. R. Co., of Salem) are now claiming said land; the first by virtue of the designation by the Legislature of 1866, the latter by virtue of the designation by the Legislature of 1868.

First. We claim that the first (old) Company, (the Oregon Central Railroad Co. of Portland) is legally and equitably entitled to the land, by virtue of its prior designation, and its exclusive filing of an "assent", received by the Secretary of the Interior.

The only answer which the Holladay Company can make to this, is, that "There was not at the date of the passage of the Joint Resolution of October 10th, 1866, any "Oregon Central Railroad Company" in existence or incorporated in the State of Oregon, (page 6 of their pamphlet).

This statement is untrue, and proven so by the evidence of the Secretary of the State of Oregon, and the certificate of the Clerk of Multnomah County hereinafter submitted.

But there is higher and better evidence than the statements of any officer. By House Joint Resolution No. 13, adopted by the Legislature of 1866, that Legislature then solemnly declared, by a large vote in both Houses, that the "Oregon Central Railroad Company" was "a corporation organized under the laws of Oregon." Could anything be more explicit or emphatic; and yet the Holladay Company has the temerity to declare that the Legislature of 1866 did not know what they were about. It does not lie in the mouth of any citizen to dispute facts declared by the Legislature; nor even can the Supreme Court nor a succeeding Legislature, declare, as did the Legislature of 1868, that the former Legislature "acted under a misapprehension of the facts." If such a rule in legislation is to be countenanced, then the Legislature of 1870 may declare that the Legislature of 1868 "acted under a misapprehension of the facts," and give the land to some other Corporation, and thus the confusion and uncertainty would destroy the value of the grant entirely. But to go into details:

What does the General Incorporation Law of Oregon require to constitute a Corporation? Condensing Sections 1, 2 and 5 into one paragraph, the whole law reads as follows:

"Whenever three or more persons shall desire to incorporate themselves for the purpose of engaging in any lawful enterprise, such persons shall make and subscribe written articles of incorporation in triplicate, and acknowledge the same before any officer authorized to take the acknowledgement of a deed, and file one of such articles with the Secretary of State, another with the Clerk of the County where the enterprise is to be carried on, and retain the third in the possession of the corporation; and upon the making and filing of the articles of incorporation, as herein provided, the persons subscribing the same are corporators, and authorized to carry into effect the object specified in the articles, and they and their successors, associates and assigns, shall THEREAFTER be deemed a body corporate, with power &c., (here the law gives all the powers of a corporation.)

By noting the words italicized in the above, the reader will discover six things, and only six, necessary to legally create the "Oregon Central Railroad Company.

1st. Three persons must make and subscribe written articles of incorporation.

2d. There must be three original copies signed and asknowledged by each subscriber.

3d. They must be acknowledged before an officer authorized to take the acknowledgement of a deed.

4th. One copy must be filed with the Secretary of State.

5th. Another copy with the County Clerk.

6th. And the third copy retained by the Corporation.

On the 29th day of September, 1866, eight persons made, subscribed and acknowledged the three original copies of the articles of Incorporation of our Company before a Notary Public. That disposes of the three first requisites. The statement of Secretary May, hereto appended, shows that the President of this Company gave him the papers for filing on the 6th day of Oct., 1866, and he then pretended to file them. If filing in ink in a clerkly manner was not then made by the Secretary, it cannot destroy any rights this Company claims, as it was no fault of the Corporators. This disposes of the 4th requisite.

The certificate of Mr. Norden shows a pencil filing of October 6th 1866, on the copy in the County Clerk's office. This disposes of the 5th requisite.

The third copy is now, and has ever been since its making, in the possession of this Company. That disposes of the 6th requisite, and makes a perfect legal corporation of this Company on the 6th day of October 1866, four days prior to its designation by House Joint Resolution No. 13 in the Legislature of 1866.

But it will be objected that the Notary Public had not certified the acknowledgments when the articles were filed, October 6th, 1866. That is not one of the requisites to the Corporation. The Statutes of Oregon lays down one rule for a deed and a different one for Articles of Incorporation. The rule for acknowledging deeds (Sec. 10 page 648 Oregon Statutes) is as follows: "and the officer taking such acknowledgment shall endorse thereon a certificate of the acknowledgement and the true date of making the same, under his hand." But the Statute has not required such certificate in the case of Articles of Incorporation. While it is usual to attach such certificates of acknowledgement, the Statute has not required it. Even in as solemn acts as deeds, these certificates of acknowledgment are not necessary to pass the title. Chief Justice Williams (now Senator Williams) held in the case of Moore vs. Thomas, page 201, Oregon Reports, that "A deed unacknowledged and unrecorded is good between the parties." And in this case, the parties in the East Side Company all had full notice of the prior existence and claims of the West Side Company, and were and are nothing but seceders from the West Side Company, and not entitled to claim anything. Taking the claim of Moores & Co. as set up in their last pamphlet, that they were the original members of the West Side Company's Articles of Incorporation, they show that they have left it, and in April 1867, long after the due and legal incorporation of the West Side Company, they set up a new corporation in the same name. They can claim none of the rights and franchises of the old Company.

"If any portion of the members of a corporation secede, and are even erected into a new corporation, the corporate property will not be transferred or distributed in consequence of the separation." (Angell & Ames on Corporations, Sec. 194.)

We now submit the statement of Secretary May, the certificate of the Clerk of Multnomah County.

State of Oregon, Secretary's Office, Salem,

Jan. 5, 1869.

Hon. Addison C. Gibbs, Portland, Oregon.

Dear Sir.

I have no personal knowledge of the filing of papers in this Office by Mr. Gaston, on the 6th of October, 1866, more than this: that about the date named (Mr. Gaston says it was the 6th) he presented me an envelope which he said contained Articles of Incorporation of the Oregon Central Rail Road Company, on which envelope I marked the date in pencil (Mr. Gaston says that I marked the document instead of the envelope, but I have not seen the paper since, hence my impressions are that I marked the envelope.) I did not examine the contents, did not formally file the paper. Mr. Gaston wished to retain it in his possession for a short while, but for Legislative purposes desired to say it had been presented for filing, to which I could see no objection.

I had forgotten the foregoing circumstances altogether, until about the middle of Nov. 1866, Hon. J. S. Smith made application to see the Articles of Incorporation of the "Oregon Central Railroad Company." I turned to the usual depository for such documents, but not until after I had made thorough search did it occur to me that the Articles referred to were not in my possession.

Your Obedient Servant,

SAMUEL E. MAY,

Secretary of State.

(By reference to the history of the Company hereinafter, the discrepancy between the statements of May and Gaston will be more apparent. May insists that the papers were not filed until Nov. 21st, 1866, while he somewhat evasively admits their presentation and actual filing in pencil on Oct. 6th, 1866, and so strong was his impressions of filing at the last date, that he made thorough search for them for Mr. Smith. Salem influences and East Side locality will excuse May for good certificates in the East Side pamphlet and the reverse for the West Side.)

I, B. L. Norden, County Clerk of said Conuty and State, do hereby certify that upon the Instrument endorsed "Articles of Incorporation of Oregon Central Railroad Company," filed Nov. 23rd, 1866, by H. C. Coulson, Clerk, and upon the reverse side of said filing, there appears in pencil these words: Oct. 6, '66," erased with ink, as nearly as possible like unto the pencil entry and ink erasure on the 3d line above this line.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and official seal this 9th day of January, A. D. 1869.

But if there had been no possible part of corporation then formed, if one was "designated" then we claim, if such inchoate Corporation afterwards filed its "Assent" to the Act of Congress, according to the Law, it would take the land; and both the Act of Congress and the State Legislation of 1866, according to the desision of Justice Boise of the 3d Judicial Dictrict of Oregon would confer the grant in this way. (See following statement of Boise's decision).

Portland, Oregon, Jan. 7, 1869.

J. Gaston Esq.

President Oregon Central Railroad Company.

Dear Sir:

Your note of this morning asking me for information in regard to the suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Marion between the Company of which you are President, and the Company commonly known as the East side Company, is before me.

The suit was commenced in behalf of the Company of which you are President, for the purpose of restraining the use by the other Company of the name, "The Oregon Central Railroad Company," upon allegations of the prior incorporation of your Company under that name, the subsequent assumption of the name by the other Company, the right of your Company, by virtue of joint Resolution No. 18, passed by the Legislature of Oregon Oct 10, 1866, to have the benefit of the land grant proposed by the Act of Congress entitled "An Act granting lands to aid in the Construction of a Railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland Oregon," Approved July 25th, 1866, and the depreciation of the Stock of your Company by reason of representation by the other Company that it, and not your Company, was the Company entitled to the benefit of said Act of Congress.

A demurrer was filed by the East side Company, defendant, and argued at the last June term of the Court, mainly upon the question whether the Resolution of the Legislature could take effect as a "designation" of the Company, plaintiff, under the Act of Congress, assuming that the plaintiff, was not duly incorporated until after the Resolution was passed.

Hon. R. P. Boise, Chief Justice, delivered the opinion of the Court, overruling the demurrer; and in that opinion he used the following language which I took down in writing at the time:

"At the time the Act of Congress was passed, neither of the rival Companies was in existence, and the objection made to the Resolution of the Legislature could be made with equal force to the Act of Congress; but I think the language of both the Act and the Resolution may as well refer to a Company yet to be incorporated as to one already organized. * * * The plaintiff says in its bill that the defendant, through its agents and officers, has represented that it, and not the plaintiff, is entitled to the benefit to be derived from a compliance with the Act of Congress, to the injury and depreciation of plaintiff's credit. The defendant must be required to answer whether these things be true."

I also transmit as requested the certificate of M. F.

Mulkey, late District Attorney in regard to the other case spoken of in your note.

Most respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

W. LAIR HILL.

But we not only claim the benefits of the land granted by Congress, upon the basis of a perfect de facto corporation to receive a grant under the Statutes of Oregon, at the date of the passage of the Joint Resolution by the Legislature of 1866; but we claim that the East Side Company is totally mistaken, when they assert that it was necessary to the reception of the grant, at that time, that the Company be perfectly organized. They misunderstand and misrepresent the plain import of the Act of Congress of July 25th, 1866. And on this point, in addition to the foregoing opinion of Judge Boise, we here submit a brief statement from the pen of W. Lair Hill, Esq., one of the best Corporation and real estate Lawyers in Oregon.

"This Land Grant act of Congress was not like the Oregon Donation Law of 1850, a grant of land to this Company. It was merely an agreement to grant to such Corporation as the Legislature should "designate," upon compliance with certain specified conditions, namely, filing an "assent" prior to July 25th, 1867, and building twenty miles of Railroad and Telegraph line; and upon certain other terms directly beneficial to the United States. Neither was it in the power of the Legislature of this State to grant the lands to any corporation; that body could only say what Company should have the right to accept the terms, perform the conditions, and afterwards receive the grant proposed by Congress.

This is not an artificial construction of the language of the Act of Congress, but its plain import and intention —an interpretation which would always be given to it by a court—and the only interpretation of which it will admit.

There is then nothing in the wording of the law, nor in the subject matter, inconsistent with the idea that Congress intended to include and did include in the provisions of the Act, as well a Corporation not in esse, as one already organized, provided the State Legislature should "designate" such Corporation, and it should afterwards organize and perform the required conditions. If this is not the meaning of the Act of Congress, then neither of the Companies can take the benefit of the grant, for neither of them was in existence when the Act was passed.

Exactly the same thing may be predicated of the Resolution of the Legislature of Oregon passed in 1866, "designating" the West Side Company. Admit, for the argument (though we do not admit it as a fact,) that this Corporation was not in existence at the time this resolution was passed, and what follows? If the Resolution was intended, or could be construed, under the Act of Congress, as a grant, the objection that the grantee was not in being, might be at least plausible;

but this was not the intention nor within the scope of the resolution. The only power of the Legislature was to appoint a Corporation to take the grant upon performing the conditions—not in praesenti. The sole advantage of appointing a Corporation already organized would be that it would be more conveniently identified, by using its corporate name, while if the Legislature should attempt to designate a Corporation thereafter to be organized confusion might arise by reason of uncertainty in the description of the appointee. But all the questions that could arise out of such uncertainty, would necessarily be simply questions of identification, and would be settled and all difficulties removed the moment any means could be devised to ascertain with certainty what Corporation was intended by the Legislature. The question of capacity to take the grant relates solely to the time when the grant is to be made—that is, after the conditions have been complied with. No valid contract can be made with a child in ventre sa mere, because it can not assent to the transaction; but a devise for the benefit of such child, is valid, and the child upon coming of age can take the premises: Co. Litt. 36; 1 Williams 329, And this notwithstanding its idiocy, or incapacity; but if there be a condition precedent annexed, to be performed by the child upon coming into being, and it never acquires capacity to perform, then, and only then, the transaction fails, and the grant never takes effect; not because of any defect of parties at the time of the original transaction, but because of a failure of capacity to perform the conditions precedent to the final consummation. This has been uniformly held from the earliest times.

Now this matter of identity never has been a question in the present case. The promoters of the Corporation of the Oregon Central Railroad Company (West Side) had already prepared its Articles, had them duly signed and acknowledged by a large number of the corporators (more than was necessary under the Statutes of the State) and filed, and in this condition they were read before the Legislature, in both Houses, and thereupon the Resolution was passed, designating the Company, by the corporate name assumed in the Articles so read, as the Corporation to perform the conditions required by the Act of Congress and take the grant afterwards. And there was no other Corporation, organized or incipient, within the State having the same, or even a similar name, till five months after this Resolution was passed. And this Corporation, went on without opposition and perfected its organization, upon the same Articles read before the Legislature, and still prosecutes its enterprise of building the road, upon these Articles, without altering a word or letter; while a minority of the Corporators, having seceded from the original Corporation, have attempted to organize a rival Corporation under the same name. But this second Company has never had the temerity to dispute or even question that the Resolution of the Legislature passed in 1866 referred to the West Side Company.

The West Side Company, and they alone, having accepted the terms proposed by the Act of Congress, as required, having been designated, identified, pointed out, by the Legislature of 1866—having filed their "assent" within the year—having gone on in the performance, on their part, of these terms—will be entitled to the grant whenever they have performed the conditions annexed; and any attempt by Congress to confer the benefits of the Act of 1866 upon any other Company, would be, in law as well as in fact, a denial and repudiation of its own agreement."

EQUITABLE RIGHTS OF THE WEST SIDE COMPANY.

Having shown the right of the West side (or Gaston Company or the opposition term it) we will now show a just and Equitable claim to the land grant of July 25, 1866, so strong that none but a member of the East side Railroad Company, would deny. Our equities depends upon the following facts.

1st. The West side Company was identified by the Legislature of 1866.

2d. The East side Company were aware, when they incorporated, that the West side Company claimed both the land grant and the Corporate name, "The Oregon Central Railroad Company" one of their Incorporators and now one of their Directors, John H. Moores, was notified by the President of the West side Company, not to incorporate in the same name, as it would be resisted, and litigation would result from any such action.

3d. The West side Company has Uniformly and publicly claimed the land, ever since by virtue of that designation.

4th. The East side Company uniformly and publicly denied in Oregon, any claim for themselves to the land, from the day of their incorporation until Oct. 10 1868, a period of nearly two years. They did not have the temerity to set up any claim to the Land grant in the face of their oft repeated disavowals, and they never intimated in Oregon, an intention to claim it, until compelled by the Lash of Ben Holladay, they turned around upon their own declarations and deliberately stultified themselves before the people of Oregon. So that the East side claim to the Land grant is really a claim by foreigners against the claim of our own Citizens.

5th. The West side Company filed their "Assent" within the year, with the Secretary of the Interior, as the law provides, and the East side Company made no claim, by neglecting to file papers or make any acceptance of the Grant within the year.

6th. The Sec. of Interior received the "Assent" of the West Side Company, and gave them credit by reason of this, so that the public relied upon such facts and invested money in West Side Road; while he expressly refused to file papers for East side Co. and declared to them and the public, that it was the West side Co. that was entitled to the land, as witness the following letter to the Vice President of the East side Co.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,

Washington, D. C. July 17, 1868.

SIR—I have received your letter of the 16th inst., and accompanying paper, purporting to be an acceptance by the Oregon Central Railroad Company of the grant made by the act of July 25th, 1866.

By law the company was required to file an "assent" to its terms and conditions, within one year. That time expired July 25th, 1867, and this paper, if sufficient for that purpose, could not now be received.

I state, for your information, that J. Gaston, President of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, within the time prescribed in that act, filed an assent, which was received.

In compliance with your request, I inclose a copy of my letter of the 8th instant, to Mr. Gaston, in regard to maps to be filed in this Department.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

O. H. BROWNING, Secretary.

A. M. LORYEA, Present.

7th. The West side Company, and they alone solicited of Congress an extension of the time limited in the grant for the Construction of the road; and if it had not been for this extension (thanks to the Oregon delegation in Congress) the land would all have been forfeited. As witness Senators Williams and Corbett and Representative Mallory, of Oregon, and Representative Hubbard of West Va.

8th. With all these facts before the public, continually brought to the attention of the East Side Company, by publications in the newspapers of Oregon, of the letters of the Secretary of Interior, O. H. Browning, to the West Side Company, and in the public statements of the President of the west Side Company and other speakers at the commencement of the work April 15th, 1868, and in the published Annual Report of the West Side Company, May 25th, 1868, the East Side Company not only remained silent, making no claim to the land grant, but they even publicly disavowed any claim of any kind to the land, until long after the date when the land would have been forfeited, had it not been for the diligence of the West Side Company in filing the "Assent" required by the Act of Congress. With all these facts before the public, the East Side Company stood by until the City of Portland recognized the claim of the West side Company and pledged to them the interest for twenty years on $250,000; while Washington County recognized our claim, and pledged interest on $50,000 for same time; while Yamhill County recognized our claims and pledged interest on $75,000; and while the citizens of Oregon subscribed and paid into the West Side Company, on the faith and credit of this land grant, and the facts above stated, seventy five thousand dollars in cash and much more in land and other property. This money has been expended, and judiciously expended, in the construction of the West Side road, while this East Side Company was silent and disavowing any claim to the land grant of July 25th, 1866.

We claim to the Oregon delegation in Congress, and all other members of Congress, to all government officers, and to the people of Oregon, that these acts of the Holladay or East Side Railroad Company, is a complete estoppel of all claims of theirs, set up at this late day, to this land grant; and that these facts make a case so strong in equity and justice, in favor of the West Side Company, that any attempt to divest the land from them, would be nothing less than legalized robbery.

THE EAST SIDE COMPANY HAVE NO LEGAL OR EQUITABLE RIGHTS: WHY?

1st. The first and best reason is, that all the legal and equitable rights are in favor of the West Side Co.

2nd. The East Side never claimed any right to the grant, nor offered to file an acceptance of it within the time provided in the Act of Congress; nor did they use any efforts to get an extension of the grant in order to save it to the State.

3d. The East Side Company have no legal corporate organization or existence, and cannot therefore take any grant, or administer any trust. They have no legal corporate existence, because one half their capital stock was not subscribed before an election of Directors, and has not been yet subscribed. Their claim to a corporate existence is a fraud upon the public. In order to avoid any responsibility, the projectors of this East Side

Co. subscribed six shares in a capital stock of seventy two thousand five hundred shares—six hundred dollars in a capital of seven millions two hundred and fifty thousand dollars and then these ingenious gentlemen passed a resolution authorizing Governor George L. Woods, as Chairman of the little coterie, to subscribe seven million dollars for the Company, before the Company has a legal existence. The Statute of Oregon requires that one half the capital stock (which would be in the case $3,675,-000) shall be subscribed before an election of Directors. This East Side has a Board of Directors, and the public are therefore warranted in believing that the sum of $3,675,000 has been subscribed by a person or persons who can be sued for that amount, as stockholders. And this is the responsibility which the law attempts to provide to the creditors of the Company. Now in this case, if a creditor fails to find property of the Company, he can only find six hundred dollars of subscribed stock liable to pay his debt, instead of the sum of $3,675,000; and in this dodge of the East Side, we see a deliberate attempt to deceive the public, if not defraud it.

In proof of the above we are permitted and authorized to refer to the late Vice President of the East Side Company, Dr. A. M. Loryea, of Portland, Oregon, and to ex-Gov. Gibbs, of the same place, and to Col. James K. Kelley, of Dalles City, Oregon, all of whom have read said Company's stock book.

It may be replied that the Courts have passed upon this organization and pronounced it good, in an attempt to test the same by action of Quo Warranto. We deny that the Court pronounced their organization good. "Leave" was asked of the Circuit Judge of the third Judicial District, to bring such an action, and the Judge having the "discretion" to grant or refuse the "Leave," refused the same, but did not pass upon the legality of the East Side Organization. He dismissed the application for "Leave," by stating "The public interest does not require the East Side Company 'to be broken up,'" very plainly intimating a defective corporate organization. This refusal for "Leave" was then taken to the Supreme Court, and that Court decided that "it was not an appealable question," and said nothing about the corporate organization of any Company.

The East Side Company have no corporate organization that will stand an examination in court, and cannot even "appropriate" the right of way through any man's land, if resisted; and hence they have passed over so much land on their line without grading their road, the right of way having in such cases been refused.

The only fact on which they can base any claim, is their designation by the Legislature of 1868. This they refer to with every trumpet. It amounts to nothing. It comes too late. It is evidence of nothing. It is well-known to the people of Oregon that that designation was purchased.

As to equitable rights, they have not a particle. Their concern is not an Oregon Institution. The people of Oregon have repudiated them, as witness the following facts:

1st. They tried to get the endorsement of the City of Portland, in the way of a pledge of interest on $250,000 of their bonds, similar to West Side Company, and the people and the City Council repudiated them.

2d. They tried a similar move at Oregon City, for interest on $50,000, and the people and City Council there repudiated that.

3d. They tried a similar move at Salem, the headquarters of their Company, for interest on $100,000, and that met with a similar death.

4th. They tried a similar move at Eugene City, for interest on $20,000, and that was killed.

5th. They tried ten cent subscriptions (ten per cent. only to be asked for on their stock) all along their route, and that was a disgraceful failure.

They have got nothing from the people of Oregon. Their whole concern has been regarded with suspicion and distrust from the first. What work that has been done, grading in spots here and there over a level country and completing nothing, has been done with the money of Ben Holladay. It is his speculation, his venture, and if it fails to-day, not a single Oregonian would lose a dollar by crediting the East Side Company themselves as no person in this State has ever been willing to trust them as a Corporation.

They parade a long list of "Honorables" as Directors. This is no badge of a business concern. They are put in only to create local and political sentiment in their favor, and not for pecuniary aid or business services rendered. Not one of them have contributed a dollar towards the actual construction of a Railroad in Oregon, but stand off at a safe distance and hurl their pamphlets at men in the West Side Company who have paid out their money by hundreds of thousands of dollars for the development of the State.

THE ROUTE OF THE ROADS.

The East Siders take exception to the route of the West Side Road; and as usual misrepresent it. Our Road commences in the City of Portland, our first bridge being inside the City limits and costing twelve thousand dollars; thence southerly three miles, thence West about twenty-five miles, in order to turn the southwest end of the Chehalem mountains; thence nearly due South, "through the Willamette, Umpqua and Rogue River Valleys" to the State line. The East Side pamphlet asserts that our line "runs through the Chehalem and not through the Willamette Valley." This statement was intended for Eastern consumption, and presumes on great ignorance at that, and is a fair specimen of their entire pamphlet. The Chehalem valley is a little valley in Yamhill County, ten miles long and two or three wide, varying; and our road does not pass through it, but at right angles to and near the head of it, but not in it at any point. The Chehalem is a part of the great Willamette valley, just as any one of the thousand little creeks which run ino the "Father of Waters" is part of the Mississippi valley; and this statement of the East Siders about the Chehalem valley betrays either gross ignorance of Oregon or such a weakness in the discussion, as places them in the position of drowning men grasping at straws. What would they think if we should assert that their road does not run through the Willamette valley because it runs up Mill Creek?

The East Side road does not comply with the route of the Act of Congress, because it commences at East Portland, across the Willamette river, instead of "Portland," on the West side, and which river cannot be bridged except by special license from Congress, and then create an obstruction to the navigation of a magnificent river, in the very harbor of the City of Portland, the only commercial depot in the State, a result Congress never intended to bring about by the Act of July 25th, 1866, granting the land.

The West Side road is located on the best and most practical route, southerly from the City of Portland. It might be constructed up the West side of the Willamette river, through the Chehalem mountains, but at a cost impractical at the present time; and then it would be carried as far West in forty miles as it is when it turns due South near Hillsboro. The Willamette valley bears to the West, from the City of Portland, and Salem on the East side, touched by the East Side Road, is actually twenty miles West of Portland. Both East, and West side roads bear to the West from the City of Portland, because the course of the Willamette valley compels them; but the difference is this: the West Side Road makes its "westings" soon after leaving Portland, while the East Side Road runs West more gradually. The West Side has this advantage, that the first twenty miles take it into the heart of the rich Tualitin valley and prairies, and gives it a monopoly of the trade of a vast region of not less than one million acres, and also gives it two hundred thousand acres of land yet vacant, worth, according to the estimate of the County Surveyor of Washington County, ample enough to pay for the first twenty miles of road; while on the other hand, the first thirty miles of the East Side Roads winds along the banks and around the projecting rocks of the East bank of the Willamette river, and through a rough and unproductive region not developing a single acre of land, and in constant competition with a river always navigable, and not within available distance of any public land, and this last item may be applied to both roads the whole distance through the Willamette valley; both items showing that the West Side Road has a paying route, and offers a good and safe field for the capitalist and investor, while the East side does not.

The West side of the Willamette river contains half a million acres more surveyed agricultural lands than the East side, and the West Side Road runs through the heart of the great Willamette valley—the "Chehalem" valley to the contrary notwithstanding.

THE EAST SIDERS ADMIT OUR RIGHTS AND PRIOR ORGANIZATION, AND TRY TO CAPTURE THE SAME BY CORRUPT MEANS. TESTIMONY OF JAMES P. FLINT AND J. H. MITCHELL.

James P. Flint, Esq., of San Francisco, of the firm of Flint, Peabody & Co., of San Francisco and Boston, at one time owned a tenth interest in the East side enterprise. Being a man of business, and seeing the importance of getting control of the West Side Company, in February, 1868, he wrote the following letter to Mr. N. P. Perine, who also owned a tenth interest, and who had come up to Oregon from San Francisco, to look after their interests. The following is the letter, italics being ours:

San Francisco, February 22d, 1868.

Mr. Perine—

Dear Sir:—You have two most important points to make on your visit to Oregon, first to get possession of the original organization of the Oregon Central Rail Road, either by disorganization, or it would be far better to have that assigned to your Company, this is most important. Second, to harmonize all parties in the State in favor of your Company, even if you have to buy them. I have told Mr. Reed that I should advise an amount of stock to be given to such parties as are most influential; he named preferred stock, but I told him that could not be given as it was required to build the road, as much so as the Bonds. I do not think it necessary for you to give one dollar of the preferred stock, but the common stock you can afford to give, and to the right parties I should do so most liberally. You can easily showthat the preferred stock must help and must be kept especially for the raising of funds to help build the Road. I think I have satisfied Reed of this. You must hold up the idea of the value of the stock and that it will pay in a year or two, after the Road is completed, and I think he feels that it will be so.

You ought to have the help and good feeling of the whole State to go on smoothly; you will want the assistance of the next Legislature beyond a doubt, and this must be had.

Truly I remain yours,

JAMES P. FLINT.

In obedience to this letter, we soon thereafter find the East Siders giving away their stock "most liberally;" fifty thousand dollars to a single person, for the bare "use of his name" being but a trifle to the liberal East Siders; and their modest! Board of Six Directors soon expands into the colossal proportions of a "Mississippi scheme" with twenty-one Directors, (equally divided in politics,) having subscribed each one hundred dollars, and receiving in return $50,000 stock, and not "out" a farthing. Oh! how precious are their equitable rights.

We add, that Mr. Flint and his Oregon colleagues did not "get possession of the original organization of the Oregon Central Railroad," either by "disorganization" or "assignment," although they sought to do so with lawsuits and "common stock" "most liberally".

On this point, we will now offer the testimony of J. H. Mitchell, their Attorney, the author of their last pamphlet, and principal "spokesman." When the East Siders were about incorporating their Company, the President of the West Side Company wrote to Mitchell, as one of the original Incorporators, apprising him of the facts. The East Siders also wrote to him, pressing him to go into the Company then forming by them in April 1867. The promoters of the East Side Company had told Mitchell all their objections to Gaston, "the obscure Notary of Salem," and the West Side Company, and all the pretended frauds about which they now howl in their pamphlet. They thought it important to have Mitchell with them, and of course used all means, including offers of stock "most liberally" to secure him; and after all their letters and personal statements from Elliot and others, all the pretended frauds in the West Side having been committed, Mitchell wrote a letter to "the obscure Notary," Gaston, April 26th, 1867, of which the following is an extract:

"I have been pressed hard to gointo the new organization. I have not done so, nor do I intend to. I must confess I do not see the necessity at present for a new company, and I have so distinctly stated to those engaged in getting it up."

Now then, with all the facts of the old organization, all the charges of its enemies, the Salem clique, before him, and after making this positive statement, how does it come that J. H. Mitchell does go into the East Side Company and become its chief advocate. That is explained by himself as follows: About the first of May, 1867, "Gaston, the obscure Notary," went to Portland to see J. H. Mitchell and others about this Railroad business. While there Mitchell repeated to Gaston the above statement in his letter of April 26th, and also stated that Elliot, Moores and Gov. Woods had all been to see him and to press him into their new Company, saying they had made him "large offers," and wound up the conversation by declaring that he "would go into the company in which he thought he could make the most money." "Inasmuch as the West Side Company had no unassessable stock to offer, (and did not consider his name or services worth any if they had,) Mitchell yielded to the "pressure" of "common stock, most liberally," and was thus enabled to "see the necessity for a new company"—and thus we track up one by one, the traitors to the old Company, and find them deserting the peace, prospects and interests of the State, consistent only in the one selfish motive of getting "common stock" "most liberally" in the East Side Company, without rendering to the country or the corporation one single valuable consideration therefor.

BAYLEY'S RESOLUTION NO. 14.

The East Siders attempt to make capital out of this Resolution, introduced into the late Oregon Senate by Senator Bayley, of Benton County. While they pretend to give a copy of the Senate Journal in relation to this matter which is duly certified by Secretary May to be all of the Journal, they leave the Resolution itself out. The play of Hamlet, with Hamlet left out, would not be a worse specimen of unfair garbling than this. The rules of evidence will construe such suppressions against the party making the reference; and so it is in this case. When the Resolution is presented, it shows that the West Side Company asked the passage of Bayley's Resolution for the mere purpose of settling doubts in the public mind, and not for the purpose of securing thereby any legal or equitable rights. The West Side Company did not admit that the Legislature of 1868 could confer any rights in this matter at all, as the following copy of the Resolution itself shows. After reciting the Act of Congress and the subsequent Legislation in Oregon, and the progress of the Company after their designation by the Legislature of 1866, in a Preamble, the Resolution says:

"Therefore, in order to remove all doubts in the public mind, it is hereby resolved by the Senate, the House concurring that the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland, Oregon, is and was the Company designated and intended to be designated by said House Joint Resolution No. 13, of 1866, and that this Legislative Assembly does hereby re-affirm said designation, and does re-designate and re-affirm them, the said Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland, Oregon, to receive all the benefits and lands granted by said Act of Congress, so far as the same relates to the State of Oregon."

SECRETARY MAY'S LEGAL OPINION—Among the thousand and one reckless charges made by the Salem Company, is the one that Gaston was not a Notary Public, Nov. 16th, 1866: and Secretary May is swift to give his decision in the matter. Inasmuch as May is neither the dispenser of charters nor the expounder of laws, his judicial opinion will not generally unsettle corporate rights in Oregon. The East Side Company stirred up an action of Quo Warranto on this very small point, and when Judge Upton of the 4th Judicial Circuit, decided that the filing of the Notarial oath and bond, was a material part of the Notarial office, and not having been done until Jan. 1864. (facts which Sec. May forgets (?) to certify to), it was more than probable that Gaston's term of office commenced in January and not in October, and therefore the East Side, Lawyers dismised their own case at their own cost, (see Gov. Gibbs certificate hereto attached). I might here introduce the legal opinion of Judge Chenoweth, one of the Directors of the East Side Co. given in a letter to our "Dear Governor," dated Dec. 17th, 1866, in which Chenoweth asserts that all of Gaston's acts as Notary, in the organization of our Company, were perfectly good and valid, if his opinion was worth the room it would take to write it down.

GASTON'S UNASSESSABLE STOCK—The East Siders have kept up an immense howl about this for the past two years. The statement is absolutely false, and the East Side directors know it. There is not a single dollar of unassessable stock in the West Side Company—but there is two millions of such stock in the East Side Company, without the authority of law—and the President of the East Side Company dare not deny it.

"WILD CAT BONDS"—While on the subject of East Side unassessable stock, we may here call the attention of capitalists and investors to the condition of their Bonds and Mortgage. Up until Oct. 1868, the Mortgage to secure the East Side Bonds had not been recorded in Oregon, according to law, and when asked about the matter, S. N. Terry, one of their Trustees, had no knowledge of the mortgage whatever, showing that no means whatever had been used to protect the Bondholders. But far worse that this, we are informed by Dr. Loryea, their late Vice President, that their business had got into such confusion that neither their Secretary nor President could tell how many bonds had been issued; and that there were hundreds of these Bonds scattered around, one parcel with a Banker in Portland, Oregon, another at a Bank in New York, (names will be furnished on application to Dr. Loryea,) over which the Company had lost the control, and had not a dollar to show for them, owing to their reckless manner of issuing.

Let capitalists and investors in Oregon Railroad Bonds, be careful they do not dabble in anything labeled at Salem, Oregon.

MERGER OF NO. 2 AND 3.—The East Side pamphlet shows that they have incorporated two Companies in the same name, in addition to the West Side Company. In this last pamphlet it is claimed that No. 2 and 3 were, merged in these words: "regarding the Articles filed by Gaston as illegal, fraudulent, and void, it was thought best by the corporators in said Company (No. 2) to merge said corporation in a new Company, by filing new Articles, that might be in all respects legal and free from fraud." In their pamphlet issued in May, 1868, they refer to the same matter, and there they say, "with a full knowledge of all the facts in the case, the Articles of Incorporation filed Nov. 17" (No. 2) were abandoned, because they were not deemed sufficient for the purpose in view, and in preference to amending them, new Articles were filed April 22d, 1867, (No. 3).

Now which statement is to believed? They state one truth in each. It is true that they abandoned No. 2, as stated in their pamphlet of May 1868; and it is also true that it (No. 2) was an illegal and fraudulent filing of papers as unwittingly admitted in their pamphlet of Nov. 1868, as was also their subsequent Articles of April 22d, 1867, for the reason, that every man in the concern well knew at the time of their action, that the corporate name and franchises of the Oregon Central Railroad Company justly belonged to another and prior organization, and they were engaging in a venture, not for the public good, but for the express purpose of breaking down another corporation and appropriating its rights and benefits to their own selfish aggrandizement.

AMOUNT OF WORK DONE,—The East Side Company boast wonderfully of the amount of work they have performed. This is immaterial in the settlement of the rights of the rival parties. But if the facts were important, we could prove by Engineer's estimates that the West Side Company has peformed the most work: but it is not spread along for fifty miles, and nothing finished. Parties in the East desiring to be informed on this point, are respectfully referred, to P. C. Brinck, Esq., Vice President of the National Iron Co., 410 Walnut St., Philadelphia, as Mr. Brinck passed over the work of both roads in Oct. 1868.

SECRET FRAUDULENT AGREEMENT, AND OTHER HORRIBLE FRAUDS, GOVERNOR WOODS ON THE STAND; WITH CERTIFICATES OF MESSRS. GIBBS AND MULKEY.

The East Side Company have for a long time kept up an incessant clamor, of the "Stop thief" style, about a certain agreement which was entered into between "This man Gaston" and five others about the time of organizing the Company. By reference to the history of the Company, hereinafter, it will be seen that none of the men connected with the East Side Company were willing to advance a dollar to promote the enterprise. Their plan of a Railroad through Oregon, from Secretary

Sam Clarke, down to Lawyer Mitchell and President Moores, was wholly and entirely a paper affair, got up on "Wild Cat" principles, which should first pay them one million dollars preferred unassessable interest bearing stock, without a farthing consideration therefor, and then "tear" into the bowels of farmers of Oregon, and such gudgeous as they might deceive with their Bonds in the Eastern States, to get funds to make their "crib" valuable. Acting on this principle, they actually printed Bonds for many hundred thousand dollars, purporting on their face to be secured by a mortgage on a Railroad through the Willamette Valley, and had the hardihood to ask ev-Gov. Gibbs and W. S. Ladd Esq to certify to this arrant falsehood; but failing in this, and finding two other men who would certify, they put their Bonds on the money markets of the East, without having their mortgage recorded or ever delivered to their trustees.

Believing that such a course of conduct was not legitimate, and that money was necessary to build a Railroad, I resolved to give any capitalist a chance to invest his money in the enterprise, if so disposed. By reference to the history of the Company, hereinafter, the reader will see the circumstances which took me to Portland about the 12th of Nov., 1866. Here I found four capitalists who were willing to invest their money in the enterprise, and put in money enough to secure the construction of twenty miles of railroad during the summer of 1867, provided they were allowed to control their investment. Glad to find men who were willing to do something more than talk about "unassessable stock," and believing I was doing the best thing for the enterprise and the country, I made an agreement with them, giving them the control of their investment, and obliging them to advance a large amount of money to push the work. It was deemed best to keep the matter from the knowledge of the Salem party, who were so hungry for unassessable stock, as their aim would be to defeat it, and with it the enterprise itself, and for this purpose only was the matter not made public at the time, the propriety of the course being more than justified by subsequent events.

This was the substance of this agreement, which was abandoned and destroyed before the organization of our Company. If it had not been thwarted by the malign efforts of the Salem party, twenty miles of Railroad would have been constructed in 1867, and ere this the cars would have been running to the head of the Willamette Valley. But the matter coming to the ears of the Salem party, they set to work to defeat the arrangement by getting up their first Company (O.C.R. R.Co. No. 2): "and thereby hangs a tale" which I now propose to tell.

During the progress of the Railroad legislation in 1866, one of the Incorporators of our Company, a man with a little political success, and just placed in a position of influence, had occasion to go from Portland to Salem, and by courtesy, was carried up in the private carriage of a leading capitalist of the former City. Along the way the conversation naturally fell upon legislative matters, and then upon the proposed Railroad legislation. And during this conversation our political friend, used the following words, in substance (which I have had license to use to their author,) by the way of a proposition.

"Now I have been elected to the office of Governor and shall hold the office for four years, I have never yet had an opportunity to make any money, but my position and influence with the Legislature would enable me to do so. But I have no money myself, and will have to connect myself with men who have money, and if any public enterprise comes up, I want you (the capitalist) to understand that if there is any money in it, I can and will use my influence to make money for myself and those with whom I am connected."

Whether his traveling companion assented to this proposition to "sell out" the interests of the State to make money for this hungry politician, I do not know; but I do know that the same politician about Nov. 10th gave me letters of introduction to this capitalist in Portland. And further, this same politician agreed with me that if I secured a contract to construct the Railroad, on my visit to Portland, he should be a party and I should write him or telegraph him to come to Portland to sign any papers; and that after I secured the agreement above, I wrote to this politician to come down and sign the contract, and he took my confidential letter and showed it to I. R. Moores, and Moores immediately incorporated Co. No. 2, and after I returned to Salem, this politician, who had infamously betrayed his friends in the exhibition of their private letters, went with me in the Counting room of Dodd's Hardware store, and after carefully reading the agreement, signed his name thereto, willing to pocket the money of the men who were relying on his honor, but whom, he was at that very time conspiring with their enemies, to rob. (I am particular to give a detailed account of this, because the gentleman has told Gov. Gibbs, Judge Hill and others, that he signed the paper in his office without reading it.) This is the "inside" history of this terrible secret agreement, secret only to the enemies of the Railroad and the author of it, the traitor to it, and the man who has shown himself devoid of all honor, willing to both rob and betray his friends, that man is George L. Woods, one of the Incorporators, the first President, and now a Director in this East Side Holladay Railroad Co. which issues a pamphlet denouncing his own acts to be the fraud of others. Such a chapter of perfidy can be scarcely found in the annals of infamy; and if I cannot, when he reads this paragraph, shame him into some remorse for his dishonorable course in this matter, I will at least."

"Put a whip in every honest hand
To lash him naked through the land."

The East Side Company have this, another traitor to the old Company, and the benefit of his treachery, and they are welcome to both. The contract they publish in their pamphlet is neither a full copy nor a truthful one, and it has never been so admitted at Corvallis, or anywhere else.

From this conduct of Woods, (bought up with the "common stock, most liberally") the public can see what kind of a party it is that has issued the last East Side pamphlet, charging frauds upon others. It would probably be too severe a compliment, and might subject the author to an action of libel to be mulct in heavy damages, to say that Woods is a fair sample of the East Side Directors who have issued their pamphlet, but really with this statement, unchallenged, and it dare not be, I should think some of them would think of following the example of Loryea and others, and resign.

All the pretended fraud and illegalities charged by the East Side Company, have been by themselves brought into Court, and they have ignominiously backed our from an investigation of their own vile slanders, and for the proof of which I refer the reader to the following official statements of Messrs. Gibbs and Mulkey:

STATE OF OREGON)
) SS COUNTY OF MULTNOMAH)

Jan. 6th, 1869.

I hereby certify that in April, 1868, I was the District Attorney of the Fourth Judicial District of the State of Oregon, and it was my duty as such officer, to prosecute all actions against private corporations, to dissolve their corporate existence. That at that time, J. H. Mitchell, as Attorney for the so-called East Side Railroad Company, applied tome tohave an action commenced against the Oregon Central Railroad Company of Portland, (or West Side Company) and presented as a basis for such action, a complaint subscribed and sworn to by I. R. Moores, President of the East Side Company; which complaint charged that the West Side Company was illegally acting as a corporation, and charged gross frauds, irregularities and illegalities in the incorporation of said West Side Company, among other things specifying the "Secret, Fraudulent Agreement," substantially as set forth in the pamphlet of said East Side Company, dated November 25th, 1868; and charged that J. Gaston was not a Notary Public at the time he certified the acknowledgment to the West Side Company's Articles of Incorporation; and that one-half of the capital stock of the West Side Company had been fraudulently subscribed by J. Gaston. Upon this complaint I commenced the action to dissolve the corporate existence of said West Side Company, in the Circuit Court for the County of Multnomah, as District Attorney, and the said J. H. Mitchell, Attorney for the East Side Company, appeared with me, and conducted the action for the prosecution. And that within a few days after the commencement of said action the Attorneys of the West Side Company met the said Mitchell before the Judge of said Court at Chambers in my presence and then and there proposed to investigate the said charges in said complaint immediately, or as soon as the prosecution could get ready for trial, WHICH PROPOSITION MR. MITCHELL DECLINED. That at the expiration of my term of office, July 1st, 1868, I turned said action over with the other business of the office to my successor, A. C. Gibbs.

(5 cts. Stamp) M. F. MULKEY

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

I have been shown the above statement of M. F. Mulkey, late District Attorney, dated Jan. 6th, 1869, in relation to an action brought in the name of the State against the Oregon Central Railroad Company (West Side) and add: that I was one of the Attorneys for the "West Side" Co. before I was elected District Attorney, and that I know the above statement of M. F. Mulkey is true. That J. H. Mitchell was acting in behalf of the State, and as Attorney for the East Side Co. in said Action, and that I continued to act for the "West Side" Co. That after said action was commenced, and answer filed, a very large number of dilatory motions were filed by Mitchell, and at last he made a motion to continue the case, which motion, Defendant's Attorneys being ready for trial, opposed, and said motion was overruled, whereupon Plaintiff's Attorney, Mitchell, dismissed the action at cost of Plaintiff. Throughout the pendency of the action, the "West Side" Co. continually demanded and pressed for a speedy and thorough examination of the charges alleged; and in my opinion, the Plaintiff's Attorney Mitchell, would not have dismissed said Action if he had not been satisfied by the decision of the Court upon the demurrer to the answer, and upon the motions referred to, that the Plaintiffs had no possible chance of maintaining their action upon the final hearing.

ADDISON C. GIBBS,
District Attorney.

It was not evident from this, that the action referred to was nothing more than a "malicious prosecution," while the ignominious retreat from an examination of their oft repeated charges against the West Side Co. shows them to be utterly without foundation.

HISTORY OF THE ORGANIZATION OF THE OREGON CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY.

The Salem Company pretends to give a history of the organization of the West Side Company. They say that "a number of gentlemen conceived the idea of associating themselves together as a corporation under the name of the Oregon Central Railroad Company." The facts are as follows, and to be truthful and intelligible, require a degree of personal history not allowable under any other circumstances. After seeing the provisions of the Act of Congress granting lands, the undersigned resolved to organize a corporation to receive the grant.

He is the author of the name "Oregon Central Railroad Company," and drew up the Articles of Incorporation. They were presented first to J. S. Smith and I. R. Moores, on Sept. 29th, 1866, who signed them at once, as with these two gentlemen, but with no others signing, there had been some previous consultation. They were presented next to J. H. Mitchell, who at first declined to have anything to do with the matter, on the ground that he was unable to aid it with money, but afterwards signed with the express agreement that he was not to be asked to contribute any money. Judge Shattuck then signed them, with the same agreement as to money, and with the stipulation that I would get John McCracken, Mr. Ladd in Portland to sign them. Jesse Applegate, F. A. Chenoweth and Joel Palmer then signed. I then presented them to Hon. H. W. Corbett, U. S. Senator. I had several interviews with Mr. Corbett, and he hesitated long before taking hold of the matter, on the ground that he did not want to go into matters which might fail, and he had doubts of this. He also objected to a secret agreement (explained hereafter,) which Mr. Moores and Sam. Clarke were proposing; but on my assurances that this secret agreement should be repudiated, and that W. S. Ladd, J. C. Ainsworth, R. R. Thompson, S. G. Reed and Henry Failing of Portland, should be requested to go into the Corporation, as they were capitalists interested in the country in whom he had confidence, he signed the Articles.

On the 6th day of October, 1866, four days before the passage in the Legislature of the Joint Resolution, No. 13, designating the Company to receive the Land Grant, I took the Articles of Incorporation to Samuel E. May, Secretary of State, handed them to him in his office, and requested him to file them according to law. He took one copy and wrote a filing of that date in pencil on the back of it, instead of filing it in ink. I told the Secretary I desired to have other names added. He handed me back the papers. I told persons that they had been filed; the Secretary of State told other persons the same thing—and they were filed in fact and in law, Oct. 6th, 1866.

Mr. Melvin was requested to sign the papers because he was an active working man, and had some experience in Railroads. Gov. Woods was allowed to sign the papers because he desired to do so, and requested that privilege.

Soon after the adjournment of the Legislature, I had talk with I. R. Moores, (the present President of the East Side Company,) in relation to organizing the Company. Mr. Moores opposed any canvass among the people before electing Directors, as wholly useless and absurd. I proposed a meeting of the Incorporators, and for that purpose suggested a notice in the Oregonian, calling a public meeting of the Incorporators. Mr. Moores did not favor it, and I could not understand his motive. Soon after I learned from letters from two of the Incorporators that Mr. Sam. Clark had privately written to all the Incorporators to get their proxy to Mr. Moores to open the Stock Books. If successful, this move would have given Clark and Moores control of the Corporation. I wrote to the Incorporators in relation to the matter and General Palmer, and some others of them withdrew their proxies, leaving Clark and Moores without power to do any harm; and here was the commencement of the war waged by Moores, Clark and others in the East Side Company against myself for the past two years.

As soon as I learned (about Nov. 7th") that Moores and Clark were engaged in this underhand game to get control—Commenced and pushed by them while they knew the exact condition of the Articles of Incorporation, as Moores was himself Assistant Sec. of State—I went to Corvallis and had a conference with F. A. Chenoweth, now a Director in the East Side Co. and Chenoweth, assisted in preparing a power of Attorney authorizing myself to open the stock books, being the first man to sign the document. Coming back to Salem, I called Mr. Moores into Gov. Wood's office and asked him to sign my authority. He declined on the ground that he was opposed to the "Barry Survey," which this document proposed to pay for with stock. Having some words at that time, it was agreed that we should meet in the Governor's office that evening Nov. 10th. We met, I. R. Moores, J. S. Smith, Sam A. Clark, Gov. Woods and myself being present. Considerable talk had. The condition of the Articles of Incorporation were referred to. Gov. Woods and myself favored taking into the Company, the Portland men named by Senator Corbett. The others did not favor it and Clark violently opposed it. But it was then and there agreed that I should go to Portland the next day and see the Portland men "and get them" "interested" in the Company. I did not go the next day, as the Agent and representative of all the persons then in the Corporation; and without instructions as to the way the "Portland men" should become "interested." Gov. Woods had prior to this, got up a scheme to interest them which has been explained under the head of "Secret Fraudulent Agreement." The Governor gave me letters to a Portland Capitalist, and I made arrangements with certain of the Portland Incorporators to advance a large amount of money to start the enterprise, got their signatures to the Articles of Incorporation, returned to Salem and handed the papers to Secretary May at the Post Office on the morning of Nov. 21st, and he went to his office and unlawfully filed them of that date instead of leaving his original filing of Oct. 6th, stand.

While I was absent in Portland, Mr. Moores, Smith and E. N. Cooke (a new man) filed Articles for Company No. 2, and when I discovered it an explanation was demanded, and I was told by Mr. Moores they had filed "them" in order to preserve the rights of the Corporation, as they had been informed that I had destroyed the original Articles in Portland, and got up new ones." This they discovered to be false from the replacement of the original papers, and a meeting of all the old and new Incorporators was called to meet at Salem on Dec. 18th, 1866. At this meeting I. R. Moores, Sam Clark, J. S. Smith, E. N. Cook and myself were present. I had also proxies of the Portland Incorporators, including J. H. Mitchell, and could have "run" the meeting if so pleased—but nothing was done at all.

Mr. Smith and Cooke were then on the eve of going to Europe, and as it seemed impossible to get the Salem men to do anything, I prepared to open the Stock Books and canvass the valley for stock. Fourteen of the eighteen Incorporators authorized me in writing, about Jan. 1st, 1867, to open the Stock Books, and of these fourteen, six were of the first ten known to the public, to wit: H. W. Corbett per W. S. Ladd, proxy, J. H. Mitchell, S. Ellsworth, Joel Palmer, F. A. Chenoweth and E. R. Geary; and of these six, three only of the first ten have been induced by unassessable stock to go into the Holladay or East Side Company.

Thus matters stood until April, 1867, when I had prepared printed posters and subscription Books, proposing to the people of both sides of the Willamette valley, to take stock generally, and the side of the river which should subscribe the most should have the road. This coming to the ears of I. R. Moores, he came to me and threatened to issue his "Protest" against the whole matter, and went all around and circulated that he believed I was trying to swindle the people. (We will show Mr. Moores presently where the "swindle" comes in).

About the same time, April 15th, 1867, Mr. S. G. Elliot and T. R. Brooks appeared at Salem, and going to Moores and Clark, they soon got up Company No. 3, now known as "The Holladay or East Side Company." Learning their intention of getting up a new company, I went to J. H. Moores of Salem, one of their Incorporators and now a director, and expostulated with him as to the propriety of such a course. I then told him that if they would wait until I could consult the Incorporators of the old Company, I would abandon it if they so advised. I also told Mr. Moores that if the other Incorporators would agree, Mr. Elliot could use the old organization for his purposes; but not to do anything without some arrangement of the matter, as the organization of a new Company in the same name would result in all the strife, litigation and injury to the State which has since come to pass.

After this, I. R. Moores came to me and offered to take me into the new Company, give me an office in the concern and a share in "some other things," if I would throw away "the old papers." All this I declined to do, unless directed by the Incorporators of the old Company; and I therefore notified all parties of these proceedings; and Mr. Moores, instead of getting in all the old Incorporators, got up his Company with but four names, to wit: I. R. Moores, J. H. Moores, Samuel A. Clark and George L. Woods, two only being Incorporators in the old Company, and he using the names of Smith and E. N. Cooke, who were then in Europe, and S. Ellsworth who was at Eugene City, and filing no authority for using the names of these absentees.

It being necessary to legally organize our Company to enable it to protect its rights from the infringements of this third Company, I took the responsibility of subscribing one half the capital stock in a legal manner, and a Board of Directors were elected. Soon after I commneced canvassing for Stock on the West side of the river, and the Salem Company commenced their war of slander and vituperation, to prevent the people supporting my efforts, and to "crush Gaston," as they expressed it, but the crushing process has not yet proved a success. Instead of their "conceiving the idea of forming the Corporation, and giving me the Articles to certify," it was the reverse. Not a man in the East Side Company ever had the Articles in his possession, save at the moment of attaching their signatures; and not a single man in that Company would ever agree to give me one dollar to defray even contingent expenses, saying nothing of aiding otherwise, to save this Land Grant to the State of Oregon. They wanted nothing to do with it unless they could "grab" a million dollars of unassessable Stack, to be made valuable by the labor and money of others. The entire expense of securing all the legislation of 1866, of all the printing, traveling expenses, and of getting up the Corporation, devolved upon, and was paid by the President of the West Side Company, while Moores, Mitchell & Co., would pay nothing, but now turn around and ignobly talk about "poverty" and "obscurity".

Their pamphlet shows that it was S. Ellsworth, who moved its adoption by their Board, making all these false statements, and it may be interesting to the public to see just how much interest, and at whose solicitation Mr. Ellsworth's name was connected with the enterprise, and for that purpose I submit the following letter:

Eugene City, September 26th, 1866.

J. GASTON, Esq.,

Dear Sir:—Of Course I cannot know the details of your plan of R. R. Bill; but placing confidence in you, I have no objection to your making use of my name as Incorporator if you think best, in connection with such names as your own and those you designate in your letter, and to that end, I hereby authorize and empower you to use my name as if personally present and acting in that behalf.

Yours very respectfully,

S. ELLSWORTH."

(The italics are ours.) How does that compare with Mr. Ellsworth's charge that "they conceived the idea and gave me the Articles?" Mr. E. was then willing to be associated with "the obscure Notary Public of Salem," and permit him to use his name, and even designate all the other Incorporators, which last thing the "obscure Notary"did, receiving counsel from no man but Senator Corbett and Judge Shattuck; and Messrs. I. R. Moores, J. H. Mitchell, George L. Woods, S. Ellsworth and F. A. Chenoweth, who now lead in making those charges of obscurity, and claim themselves to have originated this Corporation, owe it entirely to the " obscure Notary of Salem," that they were ever named in connection with the enterprise. The origin of the enterprise dates farther back than the Articles of Incorporation of our Company. The President of the West Side Company has devoted a great deal of his time to the matter since September 1868, as Ex-Senators Harding and Nezsmith, and Senators Williams and Corbett of Oregon, and Ex-Representatives McBride, of Oregon, and Bidwell of California, and Senator Cole, of California, are well aware. On this point, S. G. Elliot, one of the leading spirits in the East Side Company furnishes his testimony in a letter to Gaston, dated March 19th, 1866, in which Mr. Elliot says, "as you were the only reliable active man moving in the matter in Oregon, and not being able to travel abroad, our Company (the Cal. & Ogn. Co.,) concluded to take some steps &c." Gov. George L. Woods, another East Side Director, claiming the credit of originating this enterprise, and denouncing "obscurity" on others, recommended the "obscure Notary" of the West Side Company, in a letter of introduction to a capitalist of Portland, Nov. 10th, 1866, as "a gentlemen who had been engaged in pushing this enterprise for several years, and had done more than all others to secure the present prospects of success &c." The Governor having availed himself of the services of "this man Gaston" to write his Railroad Message to the Legislature of 1866, had at least one reason for bestowing an unasked for compliment, and one reason why he should not now turn upon the "obscure Notary of Salem," to cowardly denounce him with poverty that "worst of crimes."

Another Director of this East Side Company engages in this crusade against the "obscure Notary," with very little excuse—the Rev. J. H. D. Henderson. Mr. Henderson will remember that when he was a candidate for Congress in 1864, the "obscure Notary" was then Editor of the Jacksonville Sentinel; and this Railroad question, then in its incipiency, was sought to be made a question against him in Southern Oregon. I had then committed myself to the project and desired that the candidate I favored should be my friend on this Railroad question, if elected. Mr. Henderson then pledged me his support in this matter. He afterwards furnished me the statistics for Lane County, for "Barry's Railroad Report," which was published by myself. Mr. H. knows full well that the origin of this Railroad is not with his colleagues in the East Side Company; and in addition to the cause of truth and justice, which ministers of the Gospel are supposed to serve, he had the further reason of accepting the "obscure Notary's" hospitality, his political support and seventy dollars in gold coin as a gratuity from him at Jacksonville, to have induced him at least to have withheld his voice from this East Side pamphlet. The Parson has also doubtless forgotten his letter of Jan. 24th, 1866, from Washington City, addressed to the "obscure Notary" while Editor of the Oregon Statesman, in which he recounts his many valuable services to his country, including his labors for the railroad, as an inducement why the "obscure Notary" should use his efforts to secure Henderson's renomination to Congress. Life is indeed a checkered path, and it is refreshing to see Parson Henderson pocketing Gaston's money at Jacksonville to pay his traveling expenses, from very poverty, begging his influence for a re-nomination, and then (Alas! for the weakness of human nature) turning upon his old friend charge to him with obscurity and poverty in order to get "Common Stock" in the East Side Company "most liberally".

The "obscure Notary of Salem" cares nothing for the supposed credit of originating this enterprise, and would not refer to it or notice the contemptible flings of "poverty and obscurity," were it not that these East side gentlemen, who are entitled to no credit whatever in the matter, now seek to make their accidental connection with the Company an equity in favor of the East Side or Holladay claim to the Land Grant. This is a full history of the origin and organization of the Oregon Central Railroad Company and this is the "sum of my offending."

ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF THE HOLLADAY COMPANY.

This is O. C. R. R. Co. No. 3, now operating on the East Side of the Willamette river, and called the Holladay Co. because Ben Holladay owns the concern in toto, and directs all its affairs, locates its Railroad where he pleases, and its twenty-one Directors have no more voice in it than so many wooden men.

I have heretofore referred to the "Secret Agreement" proposed by Sam Clark and Moores and so bitterly repudiated by Senator Corbett. This was the inciting cause or moving force which produced Co. No. 3. That agreement was prepared in San Francisco by the joint labors of S. G. Elliot and the above Clark; and it provided "that a Railroad Company should be gotten up in Oregon to secure the Land Grant, State Aid and all the aid possible from the people. That this Oregon Corporation should execute a power of Attorney to S. G. Elliot authorizing him to let a contract to build the Road, and that said Company should issue two million dollars of unassessable stock to certain Californians for their good will in the matter, and then these Californians would transfer back to the Oregonians getting up the Company one million dollars of the unassessable stock for their trouble in getting up the Company; and no man was to pay a cent," I opposed this scheme from the first, and this is the cause of the war against myself and the West Side Company.

The two millions were issued to A. J. Cooke & Co. one million transferred back to the Directors of the East Side Co. and for a long time lay in the safe of E. N. Cooke at Salem, who was told to hold it in trust for the Honorable Directors until it would become valuable. While J. H. Mitchell and I. R. Moores were perambulating the Country, with salaries of four and five thousand dollars per year beseeching the people to purchase their ten cent stock, they declare that this two millions of unassessable stock was all given to the contractors A. J. Cooke & Co. as a bonus to induce them to take the contract at $35,000 per mile over a level country; but they denied that they (the Directors and managers) hold any of this stock, when they each had $50,000 apiece in the safe of Mr. Cooke; while the people were besought for their hard earnings to to build the Road, make this stock valuable, they would pay nothing. Does Mr. Moores and his twenty Directors discover any fraud or deception here?

After they had incorporated their Company, they organized on the false, fraudulent and illegal subscription of stock, set forth on page 13, electing a Board of Directors and other officers when they had but six hundred dollars subscribed in a capital stock of seven million two hundred and fifty thousand. They then let a contract to build their road, to A. J. Cooke & Company. And who were A. J. Cooke & Company? Nothing more than a man of straw, a fiction, a cheat, fraud, swindle,—There never was such a firm. Mr. Elliot used that name to contract with the Salem Company, while he represented them to be Railroad Contractors in the East of immense wealth, and the Salem dupes gave out that Jay Cooke & Co., (the great Bankers,) were the men backing them, and kept up this delusion in Oregon until persons in Portland received letters from Henry D. Cooke, of the last named firm, denying any connection with the concern. While Mr. Elliot represented here, that A. J. Cooke & Co., were such wealthy men in New York and Boston, he represented there, that A. J. Cooke & Co., were wealthy contractors in San Francisco, and sohe and his Oregon dupes when pressed to give the P. O. address of the great Contractors, would always locate them, like the milk sickness, "over in the next county." After this humbug contracting firm was exposed and denounced in the Oregon newspapers, one of their Directors, F. A. Chenoweth, declared to a public meting at Corvallis, that A. J. Cooke & Co., were "an association of capitalists in the East, any one of whom was able to construct their Railroad" and named as members of the firm Judge Sawyer, of Sandusky, Ohio, and a member of the U. S. Senate from Ohio;" and J. H. Mitchell, at a subsequent meeting at the same place took a safer course and told the people "it was none of their business to know about A. J. Cooke & Co." Prior to that Judge Hill, of Portland, had told Mitchell that Cooke & Co. was a swindle, and that he (Mitchell) knew it, and told Mitchell to get out of it. Long prior to this, in May 1867, the East Side Company had sent their Vice President, (Dr. A. M. Loryea,) to the East to see Cooke & Co., but after searching all through New York, Boston, Baltimore and Sandusky, Ohio, could find nothing of the contractors, and Mr. Elliot could give no account of them; and finding himself grossly deceived by Elliot, he returned to Oregon to expose the whole concern and withdraw from it, which he did, and for the truth of all this we are authorized to refer all persons desiring information, to him at Portland, Oregon.

The point I make here, is this: That after the character of this A. J. Cooke & Co. had been publicly exposed, and denounced in Oregon, and brought to the knowledge of the President and Directors of the East Side Company, by letters from Dr. Loryea in the East, they went around the country, personally and by Agents, J. H. Mitchell, and others, soliciting the people to purchase the common stock of their concern, nominally worth one hundred dollars per share, at ten cents on the dollar, and offering the purchaser as an inducement the written obligation of A. J. Cooke & Co., on the back of the stock, to refund the amount paid for it within two years, they then knowing the true character of A. J. Cooke & Co. Putting all the facts of the case together, can any fail to conclude that both the President and Directors of the East Side Company attempted to "obtain money under false pretenses," and attempted to perpetrate upon the farmers and others of Oregon one of the most disgraceful frauds and infamous swindles ever spawned upon any community? Does Moores now see where that swindle he charged on Gaston to the citizens of Spring Valley, comes in?

It may be replied, that Cooke & Co. could not have been a humbug, because they (Elliot) spent some money in Oregon. We understand all that. Elliot (Cooke & Co.) commenced grading &c., on the East side of the river with twenty thousand dollars advanced to him by three or four men in Portland, (names could be given if necessary) who he deceived and humbugged with the idea that Cooke & Co. were a reality, and that he could get iron, rolling stock, &c., to lay track. When the twenty thousand dollars run out, he was compelled to sell the Locomotives, "George L. Woods," and "I. R. Moores," named for the East Side Presidents, then at San Francisco, to the Central Pacific Railroad Company, and use the proceeds; and these locomotives he purchased in Boston with the Bonds of their Company, with the fraudulent representations that Company was entitled to the Land Grant and State aid. The concern then being in the condition of the dying man administering on his own estate, Ben Holladay swooped down on it, and took it all in—contracts, Directors, hide and hair; and they are now his property.

Passing over the volumes of false statements with which this Company deluded the people of Oregon during the years 1867 and 1868, about the vast amounts of iron and rolling stock they had sent here, but which has never yet appeared, we now leave this history of the East Side Railroad Company, which assumes to act the censor upon the acts of others. Neither the "Unassessable Stock Swindle," nor its mate, "the A. J. Cooke & Co. cheat," can or even will be explained to the public by the parties here connected therewith, and in their last pamphlet they confess the disgrace of it by total silence on these subjects. But like Banquo's ghost, it will not down at their bidding.

The character of this East Side Company, is such that Ex-Governor Gibbs, and W. S. Ladd, the principal Banker of Oregon, refused to act as Trustees in their Mortgage Bonds, after their names had been printed in the Bonds; and in September, 1868, Dr. A. M. Loryea, their Vice President, Hon. Phillip Wasserman, and Hon. Hamilton Boyd, Mayor of the City of Portland, then acting as Directors in said Company withdrew therefrom, on account of its equivocal character.

CONCLUSION.

In concluding the unpleasant duty of making reply to the many and oft-repeated false statements of the East Side Company, we desire to call attention to the fact that our Company has acted solely in self defense. Ours is the old, the original Oregon Central Railroad Company, the Corporation recognized and designated by the Legislature of 1866. We have not now nor never had, any feeling to oppose the construction of a Railroad upon the East side of the Willamette river, and it was even never decided that our Company would not have located their road upon that side of the river, had we not been forced away from such a choice by the course of the Salem party.

Whatever of discord, contention, litigation, strife and damage to the material interests of Oregon, which may have grown out of this contest between these rival Companies, it is all justly chargeable to Moores, Mitchell & Co. of the Holladay Company. They got up the second Company, they got up a third Company, both usurping the Corporate name of our organization, and in this first act of theirs, they betray their designs, commit the first assault, and declare war upon our prior rights and corporation—and this they did with full notice of our rights and claims, and in the face of the olive branch then tendered them.

Our Company has always been ready and willing to co-operate with any corporation, or even the East Side Company, to promote railroad interests on both sides of the river, on the sole condition that such Company should not use our corporate name; and in all candor, we claim to have offered both generosity and justice. And ever willing to heed the verdict of enlightened public opinion, we are content to submit our cause to such arbiter, awaiting the decision in its "sober second thought."

Respectfully submitted,

REMONSTRANCE

Against extending the time for filing assent to the act granting lands to the Oregon Central Railroad Company.

To the Honorable the Congress of the United States:

The undersigned respectfully represents that Congress granted lands for a railroad to such company as the Legislature of Oregon should designate. The Legislature designated the Oregon Central Railroad Company. The company filed its assent to the act, and located, and is now construcing, the road, having already expended about $100,000, and contracted for the completion of one hundred and fifty miles of road. The line of their road is located on the west side of the river which divides the Willamette Valley into about equal parts. After the act of designation. another company was organized under the same name, to build a road on the east side of the river.

The latter company had three months remaining within which to file an assent to the act of donation, but failed to do so, and until recently the men in charge of it publicly disclaimed all pretensions to the grant. But at the last session they applied to the Legislature to be designated as grantee, on the pretence that the former designation was made under a mistake of facts, and was therefore void. There being a majority of "east-siders" in the Legislature, the application was successful.

They have sought to file an assent to the act of Congress, but the Secretary of the Interior refuses to receive it, on the ground that the time has elapsed, and that the west-side company had filed in time. They now ask to have the time extended; and against such extension the undersigned, on behalf of the west-side company, which he represents, respectfully remonstrates.

The basis of the second designation is that the first was nugatory, because it proceeded on the false assumption that the company was a legal corporation. The facts were, that the articles of incorporation were signed and acknowledged before a lawful officer, and filed with the Secretary of State, as the law requires. Thereupon the Legislature resolved, "That the Oregon Central Railroad Company, a corporation organized under the laws of Oregon, be and is hereby designated," &c. Now, it is true that the Secretary did afterwards permit one of the corporators to withdraw the articles, and procure other names to them, and they were not refiled until after the designation was made, The memorandum of the first filing was replaced by another of the latter date. The undersigned claims that the withdrawal of the paper from official custody was without authority of law, and did not destroy the corporate existence of the company.

But it is not necessary that the company receiving the grant should be a corporation; it only needs to be "a company organized under the laws of Oregon." Congress could as easily have said a corporation organized, as a company organized, if it had a choice between them. It cannot be successfully maintained that company means corporation, nor that laws of Oregon mean statute laws, nor that organized can only be predicated of corporations. A joint-stock company or co-partnership, formed or organized in accordance with common law, as it prevails in Oregon, fills all the requirements of the act of Congress; and when the Legislature describes the company as a corporation organized, it is immaterial whether those descriptive words are true or false. It is not a jurisdictional fact, necessary to make the designation lawful; nor is it, as a descriptive fact, necessary to identify the company intended. The name was sufficient to identify the company, since no other of the name existed. To strike out this surplusage does not affect the legality or certainty of the designation, but it does sweep away the pretext for attacking the rights of the company.

Even if the grant were confined by the act of Congress to a corporation, and to a corporation whose stock should be subscribed and officers elected, it still would only be necessary that the organization should be complete at the time the grant took effect, namely, when the assent was filed. It was not the designation, but the assent, which vested the franchise. The designation, or pointing out, of the company, had the necessary foundation for its support, namely, a company so far organized under the laws of Oregon as to be capable of identification as the legislative choice; and the assent had its necessary foundation, even according to the most captious claim, namely, a completely organized corporation capable of accepting the offered franchise.

But again, if the unauthorized act of the Secretary, in temporarily parting with the custody of the record, destroyed or suspended the corporation, or if any other irregularity intervened, whereby, in technical law, the organization was defective, the Legislature was in possession of all the facts, and acted upon that knowledge, and their act became public law, and as such is conclusive upon all parties. If it is true of a private act of Parliament, predicated on a fact which induced its passage, that it may be set aside, or the right reclaimed by the king, if the fact was false and fraudulently imposed upon Parliament, it is not true of a public law, even in England; and much less will such a doctrine apply where, as in this case, the facts are part of the public records of the country. No facts are alleged to be wanting to this corporation but such as the laws of Oregon require to be evidenced by official records, and concerning which the Legislature could not be ignorant or deceived; and it is is not competent for one Legislature to reclaim, or declare void, a right acquired by a public act or resolution of a former Legislature, upon the pretense that such former Legislature were ignorant or deceived respecting such facts. If the State has changed its mind, it nevertheless is chargeable with knowledge of the condition of its own records, and of any defects in those records, and it cannot deny the truth of its own assertion, that the company was a corporation duly organized, and thus destroy the rights of those who have invested their money and bound themselves by contracts on the faith of that declaration.

For another reason the Legislature had no power to make this second designation; the time for any company to file an acceptance of the grant had expired, and the grant had lapsed. To appoint a grantee after the offer of the grant had ceased, was simply void, and left the matter exactly where it was. The Legislature which designated the west-side company had jurisdiction of the subject; the one which designated the east-side company had no jurisdiction. If the former failed for want of regularity, the latter failed for want of power. Which of them should Congress aid?

The west-side road is thus far built by the contributions of citizens along the line, in the full belief that, when their sacrifices shall have completed twenty miles of road, patents will issue for the land, which will insure the continuance of the work. The east-side road is being built with foreign funds, raised on the company's bonds, with a full knowledge and open avowal that they had no land grant. Ought the former to be cheated of their just expectations, for the purpose of gratifying the covetous afterthought of the latter? If this company had not been designated, the stock would not have been taken and the contract let. To withdraw the land-grant is to devolve upon the stockholders personally a burden which will crush them. They cannot meet their engagement, and the money already expended will be wholly lost. It is no answer to say they may defend their rights at law. It was not a lawsuit they were promised, but land for a railroad. To give them the lawsuit instead of the land is to delay, if not to defeat, the bounty of Congress, and punish innocent persons for their faith in the Government. The right is in the company deriving its title from the Legislature which had jurisdiction; and if a curative act is necessary, it ought to cure a defective exercise of power rather than a usurpation of power.

The undersigned therefore prays that, instead of the pending bill, an act may be passed confirming what the first Legislature had the right to do, and tried to do, and supposed they had done.

S. G. REED.

Proposed substitute for the pending bill.

A BILL.

Explanatory of the act of July 25, 1866, granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland in Oregon.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the joint resolution of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, of October 10, 1866, designating the Oregon Central Railroad Company to construct the railroad mentioned in the said act of July 25, 1866, was a lawful execution of the power vested in the said Assembly; and that the said company, by filing their assent to the said act on the 6th day of July, 1867, acquired the rights granted by the said act.

OBJECTIONS

PASSAGE OF SENATE BILL NO. 94

To amend the Act entitled "An Act granting Lands in aid of a Railroad and Telegraph Line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland In Oregon," approved July 25, 1866.

OBJECTION

Is made to the passage of this bill, (S. 94) as an infringement of the rights of the "west-side company", first appointed to take and apply this land grant. Not that their rights can be destroyed by legislation; but a solemn act of Congress, upon full discussion, will have such weight in shaping opinions and moulding results, that, potentially, it will decide the case against them; if in no other way, by the destruction of their credit, and forced abandonment of the work.

THE BILL,

In form, is very fair. It authorizes any company heretofore designated, to file its assent to the act of Congress within a year. Apparently, both companies may avail themselves of its provisions. But the west-side company filed its assent within the original time, and not only needs not to repeat that act, but to do so would confess the first assent to be void. The bill, therefore, applies only to the east-side company, which has never filed an assent, and cannot without a new law. It offers food to the one and poison to the other. This impartiality is more apparent, when it is observed that the predicate and basis of the bill is, that the designation of the west-side company was void. If it was a good designation, no one doubts their right. That it was void and conferred no right, is the theory of the bill; and if the bill passes that will be the decision of Congress, no matter what the members, in their minds, intend, and that as surely as if expressed in words; for only on that theory can it rightfully pass. The committee say Congress ought not to decide. But the bill decides, as much as Congress can, that the first company has no rights, and grants the land anew to the second company, which confessedly has none until conferred by this bill. The committee say it is a judicial question. It will be, if the bill passes. Without it, none but the United States can question the rights of the first company.

THE LETTER

Of Mr. Browning is the chief argument. It accords with the bill. It says the grant has lapsed, and the bill is necessary to revive it. It can only have lapsed because the west-side company has not, in contemplation of law, been designated. Therefore, to revive it to any company heretofore designated, is to revive it, or rather to grant it anew, to the east-side company; for, according to Mr. Browning, that is the only company heretofore designated.

But Mr. Browning's conversations, written or verbal, prove nothing. When the Secretary of the Interior shall perform or decline performing an official act, such act or refusal will have a legal meaning, and the party aggrieved may either submit, or may appeal to the President and obtain the opinion of the Attorney General. The company could not have appealed from that letter, if they had known of its existence. It cuts no figure, except as the opinion of Mr. Browning, or of the railroad clerk of the Interior Department who probably prepared it. Its value is in proportion to its accuracy. Its only point, the

LOSS OF THE LAND,

As an aid to the building of the road, is proved inaccurate by the terms of the grant itself. The act declares that either the Oregon or California company, on completing its part of the road and finding the other part incomplete, shall have the right to proceed, with the consent of the State, until the whole is completed. Oregon has already given that consent by its general incorporation law, the terms of which any corporation can easily comply with. This likewise disposes of the

REPORT

Of the committee, which assigns no reason for the passage of the bill, but the groundless fear that the road will lose the land.

of the company first designated depends on its being, in fact, the one intended by the Legislature, and on its having filed its assent within the time; both of which are conceded. It depends not all, as has been supposed, on its having at that time performed each and every formal act necessary to acquire the legal quality of a corporation.

The king, in 1761, granted the town of Pawlet, N. H., in sixty-eight shares, to persons and institutions named, and among them, "One share for a glebe for the Church of England, as by law established." In 1802, a society of Episcopalians was organized in the town, and the parson commenced to take the rents of the glebe. After the Revolution, the State undertook to divert the land to another use. A law-suit resulted, in which the Supreme Court of the United States held that the Church of England was not a corporation, nor was the grant made to it, but to the local church in the town of Pawlet, which did not then exist; that the grant passed the title out of the crown, but not into any grantee, because there was none; that when the town came to be sufficiently settled, and a church was organized, the title vested in the parson, a corporation sole, having been, in the mean time, forty-one years in abeyance. The court admitted the general rule that the title does not pass out of the grantor unless there be a grantee in whom it can vest; but it recognized these semi-public objects as exceptions to the rule. Pawlet vs. Clark, (9 Cranch, 292.)

The objection of want of grantee goes to the act of Congress, which contains the grant. The resolution of the legislature only selected a grantee to take a previous grant. That previous grant was void from the beginning if a grantee in being was necessary to its validity. If the grant was good until the grantee was chosen, why not until he qualified himself to take? The objection goes not to length of time, but to any time. Is not an act of Congress which departs from the common law an alteration of the latter for that case and to that extent? And is not this likewise true of an act or resolution of the legislature? And do not such statute laws put aside, for the occasion, all common law obstructions, just so far and just so long as necessary to allow the act or resolution to effect its object? This has never before been questioned.

But here has been no departure from the common law, even if the rule were applicable to a grant like this. On the contrary, the act of Congress expressly requires that the title of this land remain in the United States until the road shall be built in sections of twenty miles. It is then to be conveyed by patent. The rule cannot be invoked until the patent issues, and it then must be applied as between the grantor and grantee of that instrument.

THE MISTAKE

Said to have been made by the Legislature, in supposing that the company had completed its corporate organization, was therefore a mistake of an immaterial fact, which, being true or false, could not affect the validity of the resolution.

But a legislature cannot be mistaken, ignorant, or corrupt. Whatever may be true of some or all of the members, no such allegation is admissible against the legislature, as such. Its acts and resolutions are the will and law of the State, as applied to the facts existing or assumed, regardless of prior laws, common and statutory. Facts, declared or assumed by the law, are, for the purposes of the law, a part of the law itself. At least the State, and those claiming through the State, cannot deny such facts. McKinnon vs. Bliss, (21 N. Y. Rep. 206).

The State of Georgia authorized by law the sale of certain lands; and they were sold accordingly. A subsequent legislature declared the act void, because its passage was procured by dividing part of the property among the members, as bribes. But the Supreme Court of the United States held the law to be in no way affected by the reasons which induced the members to vote for it. Fletcher vs. Peck, (6 Cranch, 87.) That, however, was long ago. If it had occurred just now, and in Oregon, that statute would have been assailed as a violation of the common-law rule that fraud vitiates everything it touches. Still, it is likely that case will be followed whenever a law is impeached in a court for the ignorance or mistakes of members respecting facts material or immaterial. And yet such a mistake is all that has been objected against the rights of this company.

If that question were not concluded by the law, but could be tried as a question of fact, the mistake might be disproved by two kinds of evidence: First, the record. Corporations are created in Oregon by record in the office of the Secretary of State; and neither the members individually nor the Legislature as a body could be heard, nor could anybody claiming through them be heard, to deny a knowledge of the condition of those records. The record proves not only what the facts really were, but that everybody knew them. Second, oral evidence that a designation of this company to receive the grant, and a guarantee of interest on its bonds, were asked and granted, as conditions necessary to induce a completion of the organization and subscription of the capital stock, whereby personal liability was to be created.

THE FACTS

Are, that a sufficient number of men had signed and acknowledged articles of incorporation, assuming a corporate name, and defining the object to build this road. Others were ready to sign and subscribe the stock, if only assured of this grant and a guarantee of interest on the company's bonds. Thereupon the Legislature designated the company, by its corporate name, to receive and administer this bounty, and passed an act guaranteeing the interest on a million of its bonds. Others then signed and acknowledged the articles, and they were filed, and constituted the company a corporation in law. The stock was then subscribed, the officers elected, the assent filed, and the work commenced; and up to this time the company is not in default.

THE IDENTITY

Of the company, intended by the resolution of designation, has never been disputed. The name, in the then absence of any other of that name, was a sufficient identification. The additional words, "A company organized under the general incorporation laws," are to be understood to mean the facts as they existed; the organization so far as it had then proceeded; or, if they mean that the company was already a corporation in law, that fact is not now disputable. And if that statement in the resolution, whatever it means, could be denied and disproved, it is, at last, only surplus description of a company already identified with certainty by the preceding words, and as such would, by a court, be disregarded.

THE EAST-SIDE COMPANY

Was organized under articles filed five months after the first company had been designated and had filed its articles. They had still three months in which to file their assent, if they intended to claim the grant; but failed to do so. That they had not been designated is no excuse, for the act establishes no order of priority between the designation and assent. The designation might be made at any time, if only the assent were filed within a year. But to designate a company which had not performed that condition, after the time for its performance had expired, was idle and void, since there was no possibility for such a company to take. Therefore, as the case stands, that company has no color of right. Neither has it any equity; for it knew it had no rights under the act of Congress, and did not claim any. Its claim was, that neither company had a right to the grant.

It did not expend money believing it had rights. If it laid out another road, and, as the report says, expended money believing the other company had not been legally designated, it is in the predicament of a trespasser who has expended money in the belief that he had found a flaw in the owner's title.

THE EQUITIES

Are with the first company. They have not sought to appropriate the estate of another, by astuteness in detecting defects of title, but have applied themselves to improving their own, with full confidence in their rights. Their faith in those rights, based on a solemn act of the Legislature, passed at the instance of Congress, entitles them to other treatment than this bill proposes. The committee say that because the east-side company organized and expended money, relying on a technical defect in the title of the other, they ought to have the benefit of the law according to which they made their investment. Exactly so. Let them abide by it. It is only themselves who object to that rule. They alone ask a new law. The committee think that if the flaw in the title exists, the new company should have the land, because they expended money believing in the flaw, though the company which was prior in time expended its money believing in its title. It is for Congress to determine whether it will adopt the committee's rule of equity.

THE EXTENSION,

By the last Congress, of the time within which to complete the first twenty miles of road, overrides all questions, and decides the case. At the time of the passage of that act but one company had been designated. The second company was as much a stranger to the grant, and outside the purview of the act of extension, as was the Hudson's Bay Company. The act of extension was not addressed, as this bill is, to a company as yet outside of the case, but to the company which had been designated by the Legislature as the grantee, and had filed its acceptance of the grant; and it said to that company, "If you will construct twenty miles of road within the extended time, you shall have a patent for so much of the land."

Here was a new bargain, waiving and ignoring all vices and defects hitherto, and putting the rights of the company anew upon a single condition. Relying on that new promise, the company has since invested a large amount of money, which it before had feared to do, in performing their part of the contract. It is now proposed that Congress withdraw from the agreement, and give the land, so far as Congress can, to a stranger.

If the Legislature, as the agent of Congress, stumbled in executing the power of appointment, and Congress, instead of setting it aside before money had been expended, deals with the appointed company as its grantee, by making with it a new agreement, and thus draws on the grantee to expend money on the faith of such new agreement, it requires but little knowledge of jurisprudence to perceive that Congress cannot afterwards set aside the appointment for defects existing prior to the ratification. But an act to do this directly would be more creditable to Congress and less injurious to the company than this bill, intended, as the committee say, to let in another company to litigate for the rights thus granted and confirmed, and that upon a technicality of older date than the confirmation. Either method of accomplishing the object in simple repudiation. And,

FINALLY,

Why should that appointment be repudiated? If the company was not then a corporate being, it became such in time to perform, and did perform, the first corporate act required—the filing of an acceptance of the grant. An earlier completion of its organization could have served no useful purpose, and was required by no law, common or statutory. The case was but a repetition of many similar ones, wherein Congress has granted lands for like objects to companies to be afterwards organized. It was not a departure from the common law, for there was no present grant requiring a grantee in being. Even if title passed by the grant out of the United States, it afterwards vested in the corporation when it came into being, according to the Pawlet case. And besides, the grant was made by act of Congress and supplemental resolution of the Legislature, both statute laws, which, for the occasion, put aside every prior law that stood in the way, and against the validity of which nothing can be averred but constitutional limitation of power, and the truthfulness of which, respecting facts, cannot be denied by those claiming from the same source. At the worst, it was but an innocent mistake, and injured no one; and, Congress, who alone had the right to take advantage of it, declined to do so, but made a new bargain with the company for further time to earn the land, and the company is making heavy expenditures to comply, and expects to comply with this new bargain. Notwithstanding which, the bill says, that if the appointment was defective, the land shall be given to another company; and it actually gives it to that other company if it will go to law and beat the first company upon the technicality which Congress has forgiven. The second grant in the Georgia case had a better moral aspect; but Chief Justice Marshall denounced it as "a mere act of power, which must find its vindication in a train of reasoning not often heard in courts of justice."

For the company,

Agent.

APPENDIX.

S. 94

In the Senate of the United States, March 10, 1869,

Mr. Williams asked, and by unanimous consent obtained, leave to bring in the following bill; which was read twice, referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

A BILL

To amend an act entitled "An act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad, in California, to Portland, in Oregon, approved July twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty-six.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section six of an act entitled, "An act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific railroad, in California, to Portland, in Oregon," approved July twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to allow any railroad company heretofore designated by the legislature of the State of Oregon, in accordance with the first section of said act, to file its assent to such act in the Department of the Interior within one year from the date of the passage of this act; and such filing of its assent, if done within one year from the passage hereof, shall have the same force and effect to all intents and purposes as if such assent had been filed within one year after the passage of said act.

In the Senate of the United States, March 22, 1869,

Mr. Williams made the following report, (to accompany bill S. No. 94.) The Committee on Public lands, to whom was referred a bill entitled "A bill to amend an act entitled 'An act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific railroad in California to Portland, in Oregon,' approved July 25, 1866," respectfully report:

That on the 25th day of July, 1866, Congress passed an act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line through the State of Oregon, in which it is provided that the lands shall go "to such company organized under the laws of Oregon as the Legislature of said State shall hereafter designate."

On the 10th of October, 1866, the Legislature of Oregon adopted the following house joint resolution:

Whereas the Congress of the United States at its last session passed an act granting land to aid in the construction of a railroad, and telegraph from the Central Pacific Railroad in California, to Portland, Oregon, and made it the duty of the legislative assembly of the State of Oregon to designate the company organized under the laws of Oregon, which shall receive that part of said land grant lying within the State of Oregon: Therefore company organized under the general incorporation law of Oregon, be, and the same is hereby, designated as the company which shall be entitled to receive the land granted, and all the benefits of an act of Congress, approved July 25, 1866, entitled "An act granting land to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland, Oregon," so far as said land grant applies to the State of Oregon.

On the 20th of October, A. D. 1868, the legislature of the State adopted the following Senate joint resolution:

Whereas the Congress of the United States, by an act approved July 25, 1866, entitled "An act to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph from the Central Pacific Railroad to Portland, in Oregon," did grant certain lands in the State of Oregon, and confer certain benefits and privileges upon such company organized under the laws of Oregon as the legislature of such State should thereafter designate;

And whereas the legislative assembly of Oregon, at its fourth regular session, did adopt a joint resolution known as House joint resolution No. 13, designating in terms the Oregon Central Railroad Company as the company entitled to receive the land granted by, and all the benefits and privileges of, the said act of Congress;

And whereas at the time of the adoption of the said joint resolution, as aforesaid, no such company as the Oregon Central Railroad Company was organized or in existence, and the said joint resolution was adopted under a misapprehension of facts as to the organization and existence of such a company;

And whereas the designation of the company to receive the lands in the State of Oregon granted, and the benefits and privileges conferred by the said act of Congress, yet remains to be made; Therefore,

Be it resolved by the Senate, (the House concurring,) That the Oregon Central Railroad Company, a corporation organized at Salem, on the twenty-second day of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, under and pursuant to the laws of the State of Oregon, be, and the same is hereby, designated as the company entitled to receive the lands in Oregon, and the benefits and privileges conferred by said act of Congress.

Different railroad companies are described in these resolutions, though both are designated by the same name.

One, the company described in the first resolution, is a railroad company whose articles of incorporation were filed on the 21st of November, 1866, and whose line of road is located on the west side of the Willamette river, and may, therefore, for convenience be denominated the "West Side Company."

The company described in the second resolution is one whose articles of incorporation were filed on the 22d day of April, 1867, and whose line of road is located on the east side of the Willamette river, and may, therefore, be denominated the "East Side Company."

Both of these companies are contending for the grant.

Section six of the said act of Congress provides that the company designated by the Legislature shall file its assent to the grant within one year from the passage of the act.

The West Side Company filed its assent within the required time; and if it was designated according to the act of Congress, there seems to be no necessity for any further legislation upon the subject.

Bearing upon this point, however, is a correspondence, of which the following is a copy:

Senate Chamber, Washington, January 19, 1869.

Sir: I respectfully invite your attention to section 1 of an act entitled "An act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland, in Oregon, approved July 25, 1866," providing for the disposition of the lands granted by said act in the State of Oregon.

Enclosed please find a pamphlet entitled "Stateemnt of Facts" which fully sets forth the rights and claims of a company designated by the Legislature of said State in October, A. D. 1868, commonly called the "East Side Company."

. Enclosed also please find a paper, signed by nine members of the Oregon Senate, protesting against the action of said Legislature in October, A. D. 1868, in which the rights and claims of a company designated in October, 1866, commonly called the "West Side Company," are fully stated.

I have nothing to say as to the rights or claims of either company, but in view of the fact that the articles of incorporation of the west-side company were not filed in the office of the Secretary of State until after its designation by the legislature in 1866, and in view also of the fact that the east-side company cannot file its assent as required by the sixth section of said act, I am apprehensive that the benefits of said act will be wholly lost to the State, unless something is done to prevent it. Will you be good enough to advise me if there is anything in the action of your department, or the views you entertain of this matter, making unnecessary the proposed legislation?

Yours truly,

GEO. H. WILLIAMS.

HON. O. H. BROWNING,
Secretary Interior, Washington, D. C.

Department of the Interior,

Washington, D. C., January 20, 1869.

Sir: I have received your letter of the 19th instant and the accompanying copy of Senate bill 776, to amend

"An act granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland, in Oregon approved July 25, 1866," with other papers relating to the subject.

Said act of 1866 required the Legislature of Oregon to designate a company organized under the laws of the State, to locate and construct so much of said road as was in Oregon, and that the company so designated should file its "assent" to the act of Congress within one year after its passage.

By a resolution adopted by the legislature October 10, 1866, the Oregon Central Railroad Company was designated to locate and construct said road in Oregon. Two companies called the "Oregon Central Railroad Company" claim to have been so designated. These, it appears, are locally called the "east-side company" and the "west-side company".

At the date of the adoption of said resolution by the legislature, neither company had been organized as required by the laws of Oregon. The west-side company, however, filed its assent in this department within a year.

By a resolution adopted by the legislature in October, 1868, the east-side company was designated. The purpose of the bill, as understood, is to authorize this company to file its "assent" without prejudice to the rights or interests of the other company, and you ask for an expression of my views as to whether there is any necessity for the proposed legislation.

In reply, I have the honor to state that, as the matter now stands, the grant, so far as the portion of road in Oregon is concerned, has lapsed, while the grant for that portion of the road situate in California is still in force, and some legislation by Congress is necessary to revive the grant for the Oregon portion of the road.

The proposed bill, if it becomes a law, will in my opinion accomplish that purpose.

On the 13th instant, I declined to act upon maps filed by the west side company, "in the absence of a judicial decision as to the rights of the claimants, or some action by Congress upon the subject." I enclose a copy of said letter.

The papers which accompanied your letter are herewith returned.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

O. H. BROWNING, Secretary.

HON. GEORGE H. WILLIAMS,

United States Senate.

Department of the Interior,

Washington, D. C., January 13, 1869.

Sir: I have received your letter of the 11th instant, asking that certain maps, filed by J. Gaston, Esq., under the act approved July 25, 1866, as showing the location of the railroad from Portland, in Oregon, to the northern line of the State of California, may be accepted by this department.

In reply, I have to state that, as there are two companies of the same name claiming, under the laws of the State of Oregon, the benefit of the grant made by said act of 1866, I must decline, in the absence of a judicial decision as to the rights of the claimants, or some action by Congress upon the subject, to comply with your request.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

O. H. BROWNING, Secretary.

S. G. REED, ESQ.,

Care Hon. H. W. Corbett, United States Senate.

Looking at the above decision of the Secretary of the Interior, and the action of the Oregon Legislature in 1868, taken upon evidence submitted and arguments made by the respective companies, it is evident that the State of Oregon is in great danger, at least, of losing the grant altogether, without some legislation in effect reviving it.

Congress ought not to decide between the two companies, because the questions involved are judicial in their nature, and the object of the accompanying bill is to provide so that both companies may have a standing in the courts of Oregon, and there have their legal rights and equities fully examined and adjudicated.

To declare by act of Congress that the east-side company shall have the grant would be unfair, for it may turn out upon investigation before the courts that the west side company was legally designated in 1866, in which event that company, for aught that can now be seen, would be entitled to the land.

To declare by act of Congress that the west-side company shall have the grant would be equally unfair, for it appears that the east-side company was organized and made large expenditures upon the ground that the other company was never legally designated, and it ought to have the benefits and advantages of the law in accordance with which it was organized and invested its money.

It has been suggested that the proposed legislation is unfavorable to the west-side company, but the bill has been framed so as to obviate that objection as far as practicable.

If the west-side company was legally designated in 1866, and it has since done what the act of Congress requires, it has a vested right to the grant, which the bill, if it becomes a law, will not and cannot disturb; but it is unreasonable to insist that because that company has failed to secure the grant, the State ought therefore to lose it.

Both companies claim, and it may be that both have been designated by the Legislature, and if both are allowed to file their assent, as required by the sixth section of the act of Congress, it is made certain not only that one of the companies will get the grant, but that it will be used for railroad purposes, in which the State has more interest than in the fortunes of either company.

Reciprocal charges of fraud and irregularity in the formation of the companies have been made, but your committee propose to refer these, with all questions growing out of the legal rights and equities of the parties, to the courts of Oregon; and the accompanying bill, the passage of which they recommend, is only intended to protect the interests of the State, and provide for a judicial settlement of the controversy between the two companies.

Latham, Faxon D. Atherton and William Norris, Trustees as aforesaid, the price or sum of one and one-quarter dollars, lawful money of the United States, for each and every acre of said lands and premises hereby conveyed to the party of the second part, be the same more or less. It is further covenanted and agreed by the said parties of the first part, that they will notify, in writing, the party of the second part at San Francisco, from time to time, as they receive the same, that they are prepared to deliver to the party of the second part, the plats or surveys of the lands and premises hereby sold, or intended to be sold, as the same may be hereafter duly segregated from the public domain, and set apart to the Oregon and California Railroad Company, party of the third part hereto, pursuant

AND it is also further stipulated, covenanted and agreed, by and between the parties of the first and second part hereto, that the said parties of the first part having notified in writing as aforesaid, the party of the second part at San Francisco, California, that they are prepared to deliver to the party of the second part any of the said surveys, plats, patents and other evidences and muniments of title relating to or designating said lands, as the same may from time to time be issued by the United States to the said Oregon and California Rail Road Company, under the Acts of Congress already passed, or which may hereafter be passed, in aid thereof, or supplemental thereto, the said party of the second part at any time before the expiration of ten years from the day of the receipt by said party of the second part of the said notice relating to said documentary evidence of location of and title to said lands, may and shall receive actual possession of said patents, and of the lands therein described, upon paying to the parties of the first part the said price of one and one-quarter dollars per acre of such lands, but without interest on the said price of the same for the said period of ten years. IF, however, such lands shall for any cause be not all paid for within ten years from the time the said party of the second part shall be notified by the parties of the first part as aforesaid, that said surveys, plats, patents, and other evidences and muniments of title are ready to be delivered by the said parties of the first part to the said party of the second part as aforesaid, then the parties of the first part shall charge, and the party of the second part shall pay interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, upon said purchase price of one and one-quarter dollars per acre of said lands, for the period after said ten years, and up to and including said first day of April, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine, during which said lands shall not be paid for by the party of the second part, as hereinbefore provided; it being the intent of this stipulation and covenant, that the party of the second part shall have ten years within which to make payment for and take possession of or sell to others, the lands hereby conveyed, without paying interest on the said purchase price of said lands, for any portion or the whole of that time, but that after said lands or any part thereof shall have been at the disposition of the party of the second part under the covenants of this indenture for the term of ten years, it shall thereafter pay to the parties of the first part interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, on the purchase price of all the lands so at the disposition of the party of the second part which may not for any reason have been paid for by said party of the second part within such period of ten years. But the said surveys, plats, patents, and all other evidences and muniments of title from the United States to said Oregon and California Rail Road Company relating to said lands hereinbefore conveyed, shall remain with, and the possession of the lands and premises therein described shall always remain in the said parties of the first part, anything hereinbefore contained to the contrary notwithstanding, until said party of the second part shall pay the parties of the first part for the same, or such part thereof as it may from time to time desire to obtain possession of under this conveyance, the said price of one and one-quarter dollars per acre of said lands and such rate of interest thereon as is hereinbefore provided for. IT is further expressly covenanted and agreed by and between the parties, hereto, each with the other, that in case the total amount of the indebtedness of the party of the second part created under this indenture shall at the time of the execution and delivery of these presents or at any future time exceed the amount of the capital stock of said party of the second part actually paid in, the parties of the first part in consideration of the premises and of the sum of one dollar to them in hand paid by the party of the second part, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, hereby covenant, promise and agree that they will, and they do hereby remise, release and discharge the Trustees of the party of the second part, under whose administration such excess may be or is hereby created, from all and every liability, joint or several, in their, or either of their individual and private capacities to the parties of the first and third parts, for the amount of such excess of said indebtedness over the amount of capital stock of the party of the second part, actually paid in at the time of the execution and delivery of these presents; and said parties of the first part, for the consideration aforesaid, do hereby waive, surrender and abandon any and all claim, demand or right at law or in equity, or existing or to exist by operation of the statute creating undivided and private liabilities of Trustees of corporations, organized under the laws of California, for debts or liabilities incurred in excess of the amount of capital stock actually paid in.

AND the said party of the third part hath covenanted and agreed, and doth hereby covenant and agree to and with the parties of the first part and the party of the second part, that it has duly authorized, empowered, directed and required the said parties of the first part, as Trustees as aforesaid, to make, execute and deliver this Indenture to the said party of the second part in manner and form, and upon the terms and conditions hereinbefore expressed. AND the said party of the second part by and through its President, he being thereunto and for that purpose duly authorized and empowered, this sale and conveyance, and every part thereof, hath fully and completely ratified, approved and confirmed, and by these presents doth fully ratify, approve and confirm the same.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the said parties of the first part have hereunto set their respective hands and seals; and the said party of the second part hath also caused these presents to be subscribed by its President, and its corporate seal to be hereto affixed and attested by its Secretary, by resolution of its Board of Trustees, the day and year first above written; and the said party if the third part hath also caused the same to be subscribed by its President, and its corporate seal to be hereto affixed and attested by its Secretary, by resolution of its Board of Trustees, the day and year first above written.

Office of

San Francisco, Cal., January 27th, 1872.

Hon. George H. Williams
U. S. Attorney General,
Washington City, D. C.

Sir:

Congress, as you are aware, by Act of July 25, 1866, (Statutes vol. 14, page 239) made a grant of land to the "Oregon and California Railroad Company"—to aid in the Construction of a Railroad and Telegraph Line from Portland, in northern Oregon, to the Southern boundary of the State; in order to connect in travel and commerce that portion of the Union, not only with the trans-continental lines, but with the whole railway system of the Republic, now over sixty thousand miles in extent.

In view of the enormous outlays, required for the construction of this great work of internal improvement, so distant from the older portions of the Republic, Congress conferred upon the Grantee, (whose landed interests, under the Grant, have enured to this Company, as shown in the Document A, herewith.)—the absolute and unqualified power of disposal of, the lands granted; leaving it for the Company to fix its own rates and terms, without any restriction whatever; so that by selling for Cash, on on long Credit, on easy terms, the interests of purchasers would be subserved, and proceeds realized adequate to the immense expenditures in the completion of the work.

In this Original Grant of 1866 Congress further took care, in reserving amendatory authority, to stipulate that it should be exercised "having due regard for the rights of said Oregon and California railroad companies."

Subsequently, an amendatory Act was passed, approved April 10, 1869 (Statutes 1869, page 47—extending the time one year from the passage of the Act, for filing map, &c.; reiterating the stipulation "That nothing herein shall impair any rights heretofore acquired by any railroad company under said Act of July 25th, 1866, &c." yet adding a farther proviso, directing sales "to actual settlers only"—of not more than 160 acres to one purchaser, and at $2.50 per acre.

Now this Company in fixing details for proceeding to dispose of these lands, referred the subject for an unbiassed legal opinion, to a leading Attorney and Counsellor of this State, learned in the Law, whose opinion, Document B, is copied, and transmitted herewith.

The Board of Trustees of this Company—in accordance with that opinion, and their own clear conviction as to the principles which should govern, in order to carry into full and complete effect, the purpose of Congress, in making the Grant, have ordered:

That all persons who were actual settlers upon odd sections when the Original Grant was passed,

As also, all those who actually settled on odd sections, from that date, 25 July 1866, up to the 10th April, 1869,

And, all others who might be found actually settled on odd sections up to the time when the line of route of the railroad was established, should have the privilege of purchasing, not to exceed 160 acres, each, at $2.50 per acre.

And, that to all other persons not settled as aforesaid, the Company is not legally restricted from selling, on liberal terms of cash or credit, at reasonable rates.

Now I am directed to lay these facts before you, and the principles as enunciated above, to the end that the same may be referred by you to the Department of the Interior, with a request, that, as it is not doubted this liberal construction will be approved, a communication may be addressed to the President of this Company, ratifying and affirming the justice and correctness of the construction of the said Act of April 10, 1869—as above set forth.

Very respectfully Your Obt Sert

EUROPEAN AND OREGON LAND COMPANY,

Hon. Ben Holladay,

President.

Dear Sir: By direction of Hon. M. S. Latham, there is sent herewith, to your care, Letter of this date, to Attorney General Williams, in reference to the Grant of lands, in aid of the construction of a Railroad and Telegraph Line, from Portland to the California line.

The original land grant, of which this Company, as shown in the papers herewith, is the present beneficiary, is in regard to terms of disposal, absolute and unrestricted, by the Act of 25 July 1866. (Statutes, vol. 14 page 239)

By the Amendatory Act of 10th April 1869 (Act 1869—page 47)—however, sales to actual settlers are required to be made, not exceeding 160 acres to one purchaser, and for not exceeding $2.50 per acre.

In order to adjust details in the disposal of the lands both under the Original Grant and the Amendatory Act, the Company referred the whole matter to Counsel, learned in the law, for an impartial and just exposition and construction of the two Acts—

The Company have adopted the Opinion (transcript herewith)—which has been given by the Counsel;—regarding the principles therein enunciated as just and proper, and as realizing the purposes of the Grant.

In order however that there may be a full understanding with the Executive Department of the Government, so that proceedings in disposal of the lands, may in all respects be harmonious and concurrent, it is requested that you will bring the matter to the attention of Attorney General Williams, who is thoroughly conversant with the subject; to the end that he may request the Secretary of the Interior, to dispatch an affirmation of the principles referred to, which the company would be gratified to have in the form suggested, by the draft of a letter, which I enclose herein, addressed to myself.

Yours very respectfully

JOS S WILSON Prest.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,

Sir:

I have considered the question presented in the papers transmitted with your letter of the 20th ultimo, as to the meaning of the last proviso of the Act approved 10th April 1869, amendatory of the Act of 25th July 1866 "granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland in Oregon", and am of opinion that the proviso means just what it says, "that the lands granted by the act aforesaid shall be sold to actual settlers only, in quantities not greater than one quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre." The legislative intention was plainly to prevent the lands from being held for speculative prices and disposed of in large quantities to other than actual settlers; and to limit the provisio's operation to those on the lands granted at or before the survey of the road, would, in my judgment, utterly defeat such intention.

The papers transmitted with your letter are herewith returned.

Dear Sir In recurring to a conversation with you of this inst in relation to the restrictions imposed by Act of of Apr. 10 1869 upon the Company as to the manner of disposing of its lands to "Actual settlers only in quantities of one hundred and sixty acres or less at a maximum price of two dollars and fifty cents per acre" I have to state that in the opinion of Hon J. H. Mitchell counsel for the O. & C. R. R. Co and one of the ablest Lawyers of our state, the restrictions alluded to after the title vests in the Company by United States Patent will be nugatory and of no effect. An opinion in which I understand Ex-Senator Williams, formerly Chief Justice of Oregon, fully concurs.

Sir: The Department has considered the papers you referred from the European and Oregon Land Company, in right of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, under the Grant in Western Oregon, by Act of Congress approved 25th July 1866 (Statutes vol 14, page 239)—and the Amendatory Act of 10th April 1869 (Stat. 1869, page 47)—and is satisfied that the construction given by the said Company is just and proper, to the effect that all actual settlers on the odd sections from 25th July 1866, the date of the Original Grant, and all those who went on the odd sections from that date to the passage of the Act of 10th April 1869—and all others who are found on such odd sections when the line of the railroad is surveyed and established, are protected; and have the right to purchase, each one, not exceeding One hundred and sixty acres, at Two Dollars and fifty cents per acre—but that in regard to all other persons, the Original Absolute Grant, by Act of 25th July 1866, is in full force and effect, and authorizes the Company to sell on such terms as may be reasonable and just to all parties without any restriction.

San Francisco, November 11th 1871

Hon. Jos. S. Wilson,

Prest. European and Oregon Land Company.

Dear Sir:

Your letter of October 14th last, was duly received. Pressing engagements with our local Insurance Companies, growing out of the recent great fire at Chicago, as well as the time necessarily required in the examination of the questions propounded, have prevented an earlier answer.

In order that my opinion may be more readily and immediately directed to the very point of inquiry, I make the following extract from the very clear statement of facts, contained in your letter, viz:

1st. "By the Act of Congress approved July 25th, 1866—U. S. Statutes at Large, vol. 14 page 239, chapter 242—a grant of land was made, to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad, to Portland in Oregon. Under that grant, the Oregon and California Railroad Company has in charge the construction of that portion of the above mentioned line of route, within the limits of the State of Oregon, extending from Portland to the southern boundary of the state."

2nd. "Under date of March 28th, 1871, the above mentioned Oregon and California Railroad Company, sold its Land interest under the Grant, to the European and Oregon Land Company, at the rate of One dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, for actual settlement, as you will see by the printed pamphlet herewith, entitled Minutes of the Board of Trustees, of the European and Oregon Land Company"

3rd. "By the subsequent Act of Congress, approved April 10th 1869—Pamphlet Statutes, page 47—Chapter 27—amending the Original Grant, the Railroad Company could file its assent, within one year from the passage of this second Act."

"In that amendatory Act of April 10th, 1869, there is a proviso "that nothing herein shall impair any rights heretofore acquired by any railroad company under said Act of July 25th, 1866 &c"—and provided further, that the lands granted by the Act aforesaid, shall be sold to actual settlers only, in quantities not greater than one quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre."

"In the 12th Section of the said Act of 25th July 1866 (vol. 14, page 242) it is declared "that Congress may, at any time, having due regard to the rights of said California and Oregon Railroad Companies, add to, alter, amend or repeal this Act."

"Now the point upon which your legal opinion is desired is this—"

"Are the rights of the European and Oregon Land Company in view of their purchase of the landed interests of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, so abridged by said Act of 10th April 1869, as to restrict them in making sales, to $2.50 per acre, or have they a right, to sell to persons applying as settlers, at such rates as may be fair and reasonable, under the terms of the Original Grant, which contained no such restriction?"

In order to get at the effect of the Act of 10th April 1869 we must read it with reference to the Act of July 25th, 1866—or rather read the two Acts, as in fact constituting one.

Looking at Section 2 of the last named Act, three things are to be noticed.

1st. That a grant of land in presenti is made.

2nd. That the grant is to the Companies respectively referred to, "their successors and assigns".

3rd. The grant is for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the railroad and telegraph, for great public purposes, that is to say, the transportation of mails, troops, munitions of war, etc.

The same Section declares that "the lands herein granted, shall be applied to the building of said road, within the States respectively, wherein they are situated" —Besides this, the benefit of the work to the Government is likewise anticipated by a clause which raises the price of the alternate sections of land, remaining in the Government, to double the minimum price of public lands when sold; and Section 5, also, secures to the Government great public rights.

Section 4 provides for the issuing of patents to the Companies, as each twenty miles of railroad and telegraph shall be completed and equipped, and Section 9 attaches to the word "Companies," the words "their associates successors, and assigns" whenever used in the Act.

By Section 8, we learn that the patented lands do not revert to the Government, even upon a failure of the Companies to perform the important duties referred to in Section 6.

Reflection upon these various Sections, gives us the whole scope and bearing of the Act. The grant of the land was, as recited in the title of the Act, "to aid in the construction of a Railroad &c." and the Act, as shown above, carried out the declaration of the title and shows how the "aid" is practically applied; that is, "the land hereby granted shall be applied to the building of the said road, &c."

The power of the Companies over the land is left entirely unrestricted, as it must have been to enable them to use the land for the practical purposes indicated. The Companies were put upon limited time, in the construction of their work. The first section of twenty miles was required to be finished in two years, and at least twenty miles was required each succeeding year, and the whole by the 1st July 1875. The best mode of obtaining aid, and funds out of the lands, with which to do the work, is left entirely to the good sense, sagacity and business judgment of the Companies. The entire jus Disponendi was given to the Companies in the most unrestricted manner. In fact the disposition of these lands by the Companies was greatly facilitated by the Government, for a restraint of alienation is placed on the alternate sections remaining in the Government; the price being fixed at double the minimum price of public lands when sold; whilst the Companies might sell at any price, however low. The Government thus placed itself intentionally in a position where it could not compete with the Companies. The latter could get up great auction sales, could invite immigration by low prices, could mortgage, lease, or otherwise dispose of the land, as they might see fit.

The Act of Congress of July 1st 1862 (12 Stat. at Large, pp 489-492)—granting lands to the Overland Pacific Railroad, provides against the Railroad Companies retaining great bodies of land unsold. Sec 3. of that Act provides; that if the Companies do not sell the land granted, within three years after the Railroad shall have been completed, the lands shall be open for settlement and pre-emption, like other land, at a price not exceeding one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, to be paid to the Company. But the Act of 1866, as to the Oregon and California Roads, contains no such provision, and over all lands, not sold by the Company voluntarily, it retains the absolute dominion.

We have thus seen how important the Railroads and Telegraphs, contemplated by the Act of 1866, are to the Government, and how the absolute power of disposition of the lands granted, enters into the scope and bearing of the whole Act, and is, in fact, the vital spirit of the Statute. The lands are the consideration for the great privileges and right of transportation reserved and secured to the Government; their early sale is regarded as affording a material and secure aid in the work, and therefore, and necessarily, the absolute dominion over the granted land was given to the Companies "their associates, successors and assigns."

We now come to the Act of April 10th, 1869, and must read it not only in view of the Act of 1866, but in the "light of surrounding circumstances." We must, therefore, remember that at the time of the passage of the Act of 1866, there was no Company in Oregon, selected by Congress, as the recipient of the powers and privileges conferred. That matter was referred to the sovereign State of Oregon. The Legislature of that State was left to designate a Company. No such designation was made until Oct. 20th 1868. The Legislature could hardly be charged with neglect. On the contrary, the delay must be attributed to a due regard to the public interests. The Company designated, could be guilty of no neglect, because it could not act until designated. Congress might withdraw its bounty, or change its policy, doubtless, but unless it very clearly indicated that intention, a waiver as to mere points of time, would be assumed, where a Company had acted with all due celerity after its designation. The Federal Government, consistently with comity and public policy, could not treat a Sovereign State with disrespect, and therefore would not inflict a penalty on the Corporation, because of delay in the action of the State itself.

The Act of 1869 gives the Company that had been designated by the Legislature of Oregon, the right to file its assent within one year after the Act of 1869, and gives to that filing the same force and effect, to all intents and purposes, as if such assent had been filed within one year after the passage of said Act of 1866.

There could have been no motive on the part of the Government, to put the Oregon Company in a less favorable position than the California Company, for the latter, on reaching the State line, could have gone on, under the Act of 1866, with the consent of the Oregon Legislature, and completed the line of road to Portland. The same inducements on the part of the Government to give its aid in 1866, still exists in 1869. The Act of 1869, was, therefore, curative in its nature, and waived the literal performance of the acts called for by the Statute of 1866.

Is it not then clear, that the Act of 1869 was not intended to create any radical change in the Act of 1866? Its primary, and it may be said, only object, was to give to the subsequent filing, of the assent of the Corporation, in the Department of the Interior, the "same force and effect, to all intents and purposes, as if such assent had been filed within one year after the passage of said Act" of 1866.

The first proviso has no particular effect. It is merely declaratory of what the law would have been without it, and was, as is often the case, in the acts of legislative bodies, inserted out of abundance of caution.

The only difficulty which arises, is, as to the force of the second proviso. The whole force and effect of the Act of 1866, and the construction and object and motives, as deducible from the Act itself, have been reviewed at such length, and the circumstances under which the Act of 1869, was passed, presented, to enable us to get more satisfactorily at the power and meaning of the last proviso of this Act of 1869.

If it means that "actual settlers only" can become purchasers from the Company, and that all the lands, far and near, whether at stations, new towns, or important commercial points, are limited to two dollars and a half per acre, then it not only is directly contrary to the whole scope and bearing of the Act of 1866, but repeals by implication, a great part of that Act. All this is done, if at all, not by the plain language of the body of the enactment, but by the obscure words of a second proviso.

It is an elementary rule, requiring at this day no authority for its support, that repeals by implication are not favored, and especially where the results are great and the changes radical. But here we may say with greater force, that the second Act, by such construction, would be made by implication not only to repeal very important provisions of the original Act, but would so alter and change it, that its objects would be really impeded, if not defeated altogether, and yet the second Act is merely ancillary to the first Act, and was passed for the single purpose of giving the Oregon Road, the benefit of the first Act.

The times within which each twenty miles of road and telegraph shall be built, are not changed by the Act of 1869, and the most that can be said would be, that those periods of time, by reasonable construction would run from the date of the Act of 1869. The Sections 2, 4, 6, 8, and 9 of the original Act, must be considered still in force. The object is still "to aid in the construction of the Railroad, &c". The mandate still remains that "the land hereby granted shall be applied to the building of said road," &c. The word "assigns" is still annexed to the word "Company." The great benefit the Government is to have, as secured by Sections 2 and 5, still remains intact. But if the last proviso to the Act of 1869 is to be read literally, most of those provisions of the Act of 1866 would be repealed by implication. The Company could no longer sell to the highest bidder, any of its vast acres, could have no auction sale, could not speedily realize, but must await the slow and tedious progress of immigration to an agricultural State. At least a quarter of a century would pass away, yet short and positive is the time within which the road is to be completed and equipped.

The Secretary of the Interior too, withdraws the Railroad lands from public sale and settlement, as provided in Section 2 of the Act of 1866, and thereafter no bona fide settlement could be made on these lands. The Company could not even Mortgage the lands, because a mortgage always contemplates the possibility of a foreclosure, or other enforced payment, in the ordinary way of judicial sentence, with the right of purchase by the creditors. Yet if none could purchase but settlers, and they only to the extent of 160 acres, each, and that too at two dollars and fifty cents per acre, a mortgage is practically and in fact, absolutely prohibited. Such absurd results could never have been contemplated by Congress; certainly not as the effect of a mere proviso to an amendatory or supplemental Act.

Take the language of the proviso itself, and what can be said of it? Does it mean that no sale shall be made by the Companies, unless made to actual settlers? Is it merely a power to sell to actual settlers; or is it, at once, mandatory and limited? Must the Company sell to actual settlers against its inclination, and can it sell to no one else? If yea, how long must the "actual settler" have been such? Can he claim the pre-emption right the next day after he enters? If not, how long must he have occupied before he can claim it? What kind of occupation is required to make him an actual settler? Will the pitching of a tent do? Or must he have a house? Are enclosures necessary? Must he conform in his settlement to the Government survey, or not? Who is to determine his qualifications as an actual settler? Not the Registers, or any other Government officer, for these cease to be Government lands, and pass to the Company, and the restraint at best, is on the power of alienation, after the lands vest in the patentee. Is the question then to be tried between the "actual settler" and the Company? Can the "actual settler" tender his money and claim a deed, and procure a decree, of a Court of Equity, enforcing his rights; or a mandamus? If so, the Government would no longer have any interest in the controversy, and the Courts of the land would give a complete remedy to the settler. If the land were sold by the Company before the settler entered, could he have a right for all time, still to enter, until somebody should become a settler? Can it be that these lands are to remain forever out of market unless some one settlers on them? In twenty years from now, will a title traced back through a series of persons to the patentee be conclusive; or must it appear, that the first person claiming from the patentee, was an "actual settler"?

Again, as the restraint would on such literal rendering, be on sales alone, the power of leasing would remain. Now a lease-hold for ninety-nine years, is a mere chattel interest, and quite distinguishable from a sale. All lands therefore could be leased for these long terms, or so long as the State laws permit, at least where there are no "actual settlers."

Grammatically considered, the word "only" would be an adjective, qualifying the noun "settlers," and the meaning would be, that sales shall be made to none others than "actual settlers"; which would leave the company at liberty to keep its lands forever out of the market, use them itself, or lease them for such terms as it pleases.

Besides, this reading, as above shown, is in conflict with the whole scope and object of the Act of 1866, and would repeal by implication, some of its most important and necessary parts.

If the words be transposed, and the word "only" be placed in proximity to the words "shall be sold," it would become an adverb, and leave the Company at liberty to do as it pleases with the lands, unless in the case of an actual settler, with whom its transactions would be limited to sales only. This construction, of course, is not admissible.

It would be equally absurd to suppose that no actual settler could, where the Company is willing, buy one quarter section "only"; thus attaching the world "only" to the quantity named in the proviso.

All these constructions seem to be so unreasonable, that I have been led to seek for some other meaning to this proviso. We must, if possible, give it some practical interpretation. It is a rule, that each part of a statute must be considered, as having some office to perform, and as intended by the law making power for a useful purpose.

What then is the meaning of this proviso? Before attempting to answer I may refer to certain well known rules of construction of Statutes.

The Supreme Court of California, in the important case of French vs. Teschmacher, 24 California Reports, lays down the following principles:

"The legal intendment is, that each and every clause, has been inserted for some useful purpose, and when rightly understood, may have some practical operation. For the purpose of harmonizing apparently conflicting clauses, each must be read, with direct reference to every other, which relates to the same subject, and so read, if possible, as to avoid repugnancy. And, to that end, sections, paragraphs, and sentences, may be transposed; elegance of composition may be sacrificed; and the meaning of words, and phrases, may be restricted or enlarged."

So too in Smith's Commentaries on Constitutional and Statutory Construction (page 47)—we find the rule, that Statutes in pari materia may be looked at, as well as the general scope of the Act to be construed; that "every part of it should be brought into action, in order to collect from the whole, one uniform and consistent sense, if that can be done. * * * The whole context must be considered, in endeavoring to collect the sense of the parties, although the immediate object of the inquiry, be, the meaning of an isolated clause. This rule applies, in all its force, in the construction of Statutes when seeking for the intention of the Legislature."

Looking then, at the Act of April 10th, 1869, and we find that although the Company designated by the Legislature of Oregon, is given one year after April 10th, 1869, within which to file its assent in the Department of the Interior, yet that Act relates back, and has the same effect as if filed before the 25th July 1867. Being therefore retro-active, Congress was cautious to prevent a wrong being inflicted upon persons whose rights, had intervened during this time. The first proviso distinctly reserves the intervening rights of Railroad Companies under the Act of 1866, and provides (what was intended by the original Act) that only one Oregon Company should have a grant of lands under those Acts.

The second proviso carries out the same principle. During the long lapse from July 25th 1866, the date of the first Act, and April 10th 1869, the passage of the last Act—settlers had gone in upon portions of these lands, and made their homes, though they had not yet purchased, or pre-empted, or complied with the homestead laws. They were, however, "actual settlers," and might have become, in the process of time (had not the Act of 1869 been passed), entitled to pre-emption or homestead rights. Up to April 10th 1869 no Oregon Company had acquired any right under the Act of 1866; consequently the Secretary of the Interior had not withdrawn, under the Act, the land from market, or settlement. The Act of 1869 operating then retrospectively, these "actual settlers" were affected, and consequently were intended to be protected by the last proviso of that Act. Rejecting the single word "only", and the proviso becomes plain, viz: "And provided farther, That the lands granted by the Act aforesaid shall be sold to actual settlers, in quantities not greater than one quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre." This would mean "actual settlers", at the date of the Act of 1869—or possibly up to the time of the location of the road, after the passage of the Act of 1869.

The difficulty arises entirely from the use of the word "only". But the proviso may, by a slight transposition, give force even to that word; thus making it, that in the case of actual settlers, and in their cases "only", the Company would be compelled to let them have a quarter section each, at two dollars and a half per acre. This construction is rational and practical, retains all that is useful, in the original Act, aids the Railroad Company, and yet does justice to the "actual settler" who was on the land when the Act of 1869 was passed.

That we have a right to reject constructions which lead to absurd results, and to disregard the mere letter, and take a rational view of a statute, is maintained by all the great writers on Constitutional and Statutory Construction, such as Rutherford, Lieber, Vattel, Domat, Dwarris, Smith, Blackstone and Sedgwick.

It is not uncommon to find Statutes, in which the words do not express the intention of the law maker perfectly; but exceed or fall short of it, leaving the meaning to be ascertained by great rules of construction. By these rules, in the language of Lieber, we draw "conclusions respecting subjects which lie beyond the direct expressions of the text from elements known from, and given in the text—conclusions which are in the spirit, though not in the letter of the text."

In thus construing the Act of 1869, it is made to perform only a similar to that of the proviso in Section 2 of the Act of 1866. That Section after declaring that the "land which shall remain in the United States, within the limits of the aforesaid grant, shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price of public land, when sold," goes on to protect by the proviso "bona fide and actual settlers" under the pre-emption laws of the United States, giving the right to purchase, at the price fixed at the date of their settlements, and also to protect settlers under the homestead laws, to the extent of eighty acres of the land reserved to the United States.

The manifest intention of the last proviso, to the Act of 1869 is likewise to protect the "actual settler" who is deemed to have a claim on the equity and conscience of the Government.

I am satisfied from the whole scope of both Acts of Congress, and by applying the recognized rules of construction, that the meaning of the proviso, of the Act of 1869 is what I have given above, and that the power of the Company to sell is unlimited, as to persons and price, except that actual settlers on the lands on the 10th April 1869 and possibly up to the time of the location of the line of the Railroad, have the right to purchase one quarter section each at two dollars and fifty cents per acre.

Very respectfully

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
WASHINGTON,

June 5, 1872

Sir:

I have considered the question presented in the papers transmitted with your letter of the 20th ultimo as to the meaning of the last proviso of the act approved 10th April, 1869, "granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Central Pacific Railroad in California to Portland, in Oregon," and I am of the opinion that the proviso means just what it says. "That the lands granted by the act aforesaid shall be sold to actual settlers only, in quantities not greater than one quarter section to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre." The legislative intention was plainly to prevent the lands from being held for speculative prices and disposed of in larger quantities to other than actual settlers; and to limit the proviso's operation to those on the lands granted at or before the survey of the road would, in my judgment utterly defeat such intention.

The papers transmitted with your letter are herewith returned.

I am, Sir,
Very respectfully,
Your Obdt Servant,
C. DELANO,

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,

Washington, D. C. July 16th 1872.

Address only the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Hon. Geo. H. Williams,
Attorney General U. S.
Dept. of Justice.

Sir:

I have the honor to acknowledge your communication of 27th ult., returning certain papers filed with you, by B. Holliday Esq., relative to the construction to be placed on the last proviso of the Act of 10th of April 1869, amendatory of the Act of 26th of July 1866, granting lands for the Oregon & California Railroad.

It is stated in your letter that the papers contain no communication to me or to the Secretary of the Interior, asking any action or decision in reference to the subject which they discussed. That they were not filed with the view of eliciting any opinion, and that you did not suppose any would be given until some questions were presented which it would be necessary for the Department to decide &c. You, therefore, ask that the papers may be filed until some question arises, or the parties bring them before me for consideration, or ask for opinion upon the question which they present, and that the opinion which the Secretary has given upon the subject may be withdrawn until some question is raised, making it necessary to pass upon the construction of the Act mentioned, or until the parties interested desire an opinion on the subject.

These papers were originally presented to this office with your letter of 20th April last. In that letter you use the following language: "I enclose some papers "which have been transmitted to me by the Attorney of "the Oregon & California Railroad Co., to be filed, I "suppose, in your office. You will see that they relate "to the construction of an amendment to the Act grant-"ing Lands to said Co."

I am aware that none of these communications are addressed to the Secretary or myself, but I would respectfully call your attention to the following quotation from the letter.

1st. Letter of Mr. Wilson to B. Holladay, in which after referring to the laws, he closes as follows:—

"In order, however, that there may be a full under-"standing with the Executive Department of the Gov-"ernment, so that proceedings in disposal of the lands, "may in all respects be harmonious and concurrent, it is "requested that you will bring the matter to the atten-"tion of Attorney General Williams, who is conversant "with the subject to the end that he may request the "Secretary of the Interior to despatch an affirmation "of the principles referred to, which the Company would "be grateful to have in the form suggested by a draft "of a letter, which I enclose herein addressed to myself." Again, in Mr. Wilson's letter to you, after requesting the same, he concludes as follows: "Now I am directed "to lay all the facts before you, and the principles as "enunciated above, to the end that the same may be re-"ferred by you, to the Department of the Interior, with "a request that as it is not doubted, this liberal construc-"tion will be approved—a communication may be ad-"dressed to the President of the Company, ratifying and "affirming the justness and correctness of the construc-"tion of the said Act of April 10, 1869, as above set "forth."

You will observe that these quotations clearly look to an expression of opinion on the part of the Department, as to the construction of the law, asking the affirmation of the opinion of the law, as taken by the Company, when too, these papers were accompanied with the opinion of counsel for the Company as to the meaning of the law, and a form of letter as the basis for a reply. I certainly had no doubt but that the Company did desire, and asked for, the view of the Office on the matter.

It was not understood that you desired the opinion, but the letter was addressed to you because I viewed you as the medium of communication adopted by the Company.

Your request for a recall of the opinion expressed was presented to the Secretary who desires me to state that while he must respectfully decline to formally withdraw his opinion, yet, in view of your letter, he will be willing at any time, on application to reopen the case and to have all arguments the Company may desire to present upon the matter.

The papers have, as you requested, been placed on file.

I am Sir:

Very respectfully,

WILLIS DRUMMOND,

Commissioner.

We hereby certify that we have carefully and critically examined the foregoing List of Lands claimed by the Oregon and California Railroad Company, as successor and assignee of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, under the grant, by Act of Congress, approved May 4, 1870 and the acts amendatory thereto, and selected for said Oregon & California R. R. Co., by Geo. H. Andrews actg. Ld. Agt. Or. & Cal. R. R. Co., the duly authorized agent, and we have tested the accuracy of said list by the plats and records of this office, and that we find the same to be correct. And we further certify that the filing of said list is allowed and approved, and that the whole of said lands are surveyed public lands of the United States, and within the limits of 25 miles on each side of the located line of said road; and that the same are not, nor is any part thereof, returned or denominated as mineral land or lands, nor claimed as swamp land; nor is there any homestead, pre-emption, state or other valid claim to any portion of said lands on file or record in this office. We further certify that the foregoing list shows an assessment of the fees payable to us, allowed by the Act of Congress, approved July 1, 1864, and contemplated by the Circular of Instructions dated Aug. 4, 1885 addressed by the Commisisoner of the General Land Office to the Registers and Receivers of the United States Land Offices, and that said Company has paid to the undersigned, the Receiver, the full sum of Two Dollars, in full payment and discharge of said fees.

Dear Sir:—

I am co-operating with the W. D. Mixter Co. at Junction City, Oregon, in regards to selling Lands and sending in Emigrants into Oregon. They have sent me literature advertising that country and I have got your address out of same. I am Immigration Agent for the Ft. Worth and Denver, Frisco and Houston and Texas Central R. R'ds, and have transportation over their lines. I am the Land Agent for this Locality for the H. & T. C. and Southern Pacific R. R. Lands. I am under C. C. Gibbs at San Antonio.

I attended the Knight Templar Conclave at San Francisco last September and I was well enough impressed with Oregon to want to live there. I intend to change my location this year, and would like to join your crowd selling your lands. I have held my own in Texas for the past twenty years, and have sold more land than any other Agent in this part of Texas. If you have a place you can use me selling your lands, let me have your proposition.

I would like to have transportation over the Southern Pacific to California and Oregon as I have sent so far this year 25 people to California to live. I have several at this time that are going to California and Oregon prospecting with view of locating. They are mostly Farmers and have Money. If I had transportation I could come out with them over your lines. There will be out of this town this Summer at least a Car Load of People for the Portland Fair. I can route them your way. Let me hear from you at once and oblige,

Yours Respt,

J. E. LUTZ.

Dear Sir:

I have your favor of the 13th instant, stating that you would like to act as agent for the sale of railroad land.

As all the land belonging to the Oregon & California Railroad Company is at present off the market, and the date when sales will be resumed is uncertain, we are not at this time appointing agents.

Yours very truly,

My dear Sir:—

I note you have for sale at favorable terms, a large amount of ground granted to the Oregon & California Railroad Co. There are a number of people in this section of the country who desire to emigrate to almost any place where they can find cheap land; the prices here being too high for them ever to become land owners.

My business is acting as land agent, and I would be pleased to hear from you in reference to your proposition. Owing to the Exposition being at the coast this year, it is probable that I could get a number of parties to go and look at your land, provided you could show them without me being on the ground. I, of course, could not make the trip with every person I send, although I should try to get a bunch together whom I thought were the surest purchasers and bring them out personally, provided your terms are all O. K.

If you are interested in establishing an agency in this part of Iowa, would be pleased to hear from you.

Very respectfully yours,

H. M. BARTLETT.

Sir:

Having quite a number of applicants, mostly foreigners, wishing to purchase homes in Western, Southern, Northern, Pacific Coast States, and Canada, we kindly ask you to let us know at once what sort of homes, lots, farms, timber, and mineral lands on your list, and what price for cash and time, and what opportunities there are for man and family to earn a living on the start. State annual debts due taxes on disposing properties, number of lots, section, states, county seat, P. O. address, what property is assessed to, and the leading productions, also main industries in that locality. What commission will you allow us on sales and what time you will give us to dispose of same? We prefer absolute option on all or part of properties that you will be willing to have us dispose of. Also let us know what R. R. rates or homeseekers excursion would be from Chicago to your place.

We prefer to have you send us, if possible, some samples of vegetation, fruit and minerals which will be exhibited in our large lighted room for inspection to visitors.

Mr. Chas. W. Eberlein,

Dear Sir:

We have a large number of inquiries from eastern states, as well as from Oklahoma for farming lands in Oregon. We have already sent several thousand of the circular which has been published by the O. R. N. upon the resources and products of this country, and are getting some very good results from the same. We would like some information from you in regard to the price you have placed upon the railroad land belonging to said Company, terms, etc., as we believe that we can get a large number of people to take hold of railroad lands in this section upon small payments down and long time on the balance.

We would like to make some arrangement with the Company to send parties back in different localities to gather land seekers for Oregon. If we can make such arrangements with you on a commision basis or otherwise or by being appointed as emigrant agents for your lands.

The writer has been personally acquainted with Mr. A. L. Craig, General Passenger Agent for a number of years and can refer you to him.

Kindly give this your attention, giving us all the

Mr. W. H. Mills, Land Agent,

Dear Sir:

I enclose notice from Marshfield, appearing in the Oregonian of today. You will see that the law firm of McKnight & Seabrook have raised the question of the title of the Coos Bay Wagon Road lands, upon the clause in the original grant, in which it cites that the land shall not be sold to individuals other than citizens of the United States, and in tracts not larger than 160 acres and at a price not to exceed $2.50 or less than $1.25 per acre; and in consequence they have induced a large number of persons to make application for the purchase of the lands at the General Land Office, and that they have put up $3,000.00 to try the case.

While this information may not perhaps be entirely true, yet it would seem there is no doubt but that the question may be tried out, and any decision in this case would materially affect, I think, the title to our lands, as both our grants, that is the grant of May 4th, 1870 and July 24th, 1866, contain a similar clause.

I beg to call your attention to this matted, as I deem it of considerable importance.

Very truly yours,

Subject: Provisions of Act of Congress fixing sale price granted lands Oregon & California Railroad Company $2.50 per acre to actual settlers.

Mr. Wm. F. Herrin,

Chief Counsel, Southern Pacific Railroad Company, Building.

Dear Sir:—

I beg to call your attention to the enclosed clipping appearing in yesterday's papers.

As nearly as can be determined from this published report, the Coos Bay Wagon road grant in Oregon appears to be subject to the same limitation as we found in the amendment to the granting Act to the Oregon & California Railroad Company,—directing sales to actual settlers to not to exceed $2.50 per acre.

If I am correct in this supposition, the question is of the greatest importance to our Oregon-California grant.

Would it, in your opinion, be desirable for our company to co-operate in the defense of this attack upon the Coos Bay grant, or should we keep quiet and let them make the fight themselves?

It is a matter wholly of policy, and I realize the necessity of not calling any more attention than is absolutely necessary to the provision in our grant which is already giving us trouble.

If, however, the assault on the Coos Bay grant, for an identical provision with our own, should be successful the application of an adverse decision to our grant would work great harm and injury to us.

Yours very truly,

CHARLES W. EBERLEIN,
Acting Land Agent.

TWO HUNDRED WANT THE LAND

Defective Title to Timber Tract Held by Oregon Company May Open Up Rich Grant.

Marshfield (Or.) February 17.—The discovery by a local law firm of a defect in the title to a large tract of land known as the Coos Bay wagon road lands, held by a corporation known as the Southern Oregon Company, has caused the filing of 200 applications for quarter sections on that tract which is one of the most valuable pieces of timber lands in the Northwest.

It is claimed that this immensely valuable tract of timber is held in trust by the Southern Oregon Company for the people, the clause in the original grant to the State of Oregon from the Federal Government being operative in which it recites that the land shall not be sold to individuals other than citizens of the United States and in tracts not larger than 160 acres and at a price not to exceed $2.50 or less than $1.20. This land has always been held as a whole by the corporation and upon this point hinges the fate of the 200 applicants for the land.

Intense excitement prevails as a result of the disclosures regarding the title. This company has persistently refused to sell a foot of land to settlers at any price. The applicants have subscribed $3000 for the purpose of fighting the suit which is to be instituted by the Southern Oregon Company.

SUBJECT: Application to purchase Coos Bay Wagon-road lands.

Mr. Charles W. Eberlein,
Acting Land Agent S. P. R. R. Co., Building.

Dear Sir:

According to the newspaper clipping received with your letter of the 19th instant, about two hundred persons have applied to purchase a quarter-section of land each from the Southern Oregon Company, owner of the Coos Bay Wagon-road grant, at (presumably) two dollars and one-half per acre; which land, according to the clipping, the Southern Oregon Company refuses to sell. Your letter suggests that the decision of the cases thus presented may have weight, as precedent in authority, in event a corresponding provision to that relied on by the applicants, in the Act of April 10th 1869 (16 Stat. 47) relative to our Oregon & California grant, is brought to court for construction.

The provision relied on in the Coos Bay Wagon-road grant (15 Stat. 340) is:

"Provided further, That the grant of lands hereby made shall be upon the condition that the lands be sold to any one person only in quantities not greater than one-quarter section, and for a price not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre."

The corresponding provision in the Oregon & California Act of April 10th 1869, is:

"And provided further, That the lands granted by the Act aforesaid shall be sold to actual settlers only, in quantities not greater than one quarter-section to one purchaser, and for a price not exceeding two dollars and fifty cents per acre."

As the Coos Bay Wagon-road grant contains no requirement that the Company sell the lands of its grant at all, it is not clear to me how the applicants expect to compel conveyances to themselves of lands that Company does not want to sell; and this is equally applicable to similar applications to purchase Oregon & California lands.

By letter dated the 18th instant, Mr. W. D. Fenton called my attention to the matter—inclosing copy of a letter from himself to Mr. E. B. Seabrook, attorney for the applicants, asking the course of procedure he intends to take to enforce the applications.

I have written Mr. Fenton to keep in touch with the proceedings, and to tender our aid to the Wagon-road Company.

Very truly yours,

WM. F. HERRIN.

Dear Sir:—

I found it necessary to wire you today as follows:

"Will Mr. Chambers or Mr. Bloss advise by wire whether land grants by Congress may be transferred to assignee or grantee, giving such the right to make and file primary and indemnity selection lists in its own name and receive patent to itself. Local land office records in Oregon show California and Oregon Land Company as successor to Oregon Central Military Road Grant selected lands in Section 7, Township 20 South, Range 1 East, W. M., list No. 8, October 12, 1903, received patent therefor December 5, 1903. Did it require act of Congress to vest such Land Company with right to make selections in its own name and receive patent. If not, what does department require in such case. Has California and Oregon Land Company right to make indemnity selection in its own name."

Thinking that perhaps you had gone or were about to go on your vacation, I included Mr. Bloss' name as I think there is nothing in this telegram which he could not answer, and I did not desire that you should be delayed or annoyed by this telegram.

Mr. Harriman arrived here today and, of course, things are very busy around these parts.

I have been asked to get at once the information suggested in this telegram.

Long before you receive this letter I shall have received your reply, and I merely wish to explain that what I wish to know is what is the practice regarding transfers of grants made by Congress for railroad purposes, such as Southern Pacific, Oregon & California, etc. Particularly grants having indemnity rights.

I wish to know if a railroad company holding a grant can transfer the same, and if so will its transferee or grantee be clothed with all the powers conferred by the original charter and be authorized to make selection lists in its own name as such assignee and to receive patents as such, both for primary and indemnity.

I wash particularly to be advised whether it requires any act of Congress to transfer such rights, and if not what it is the department requires in the premises.

The foreclosure of the K. P. Mr. Peter F. Dunne, General Attorney,
Southern Pacific Company,

My dear Mr. Dunne:

I beg to hand you telegraphic correspondence regarding the transferring of railroad grants made by act of Congress. I think the telegrams explain themselves.

While the Union Pacific Land Company does not furnish a case exactly in point, I think that the transfer of the Oregon Central Military Road Grant to the California & Oregon Land Company does.

The Union Pacific Railroad Company and the allied lines, namely, the Kansas Pacific Railway Company, went into the hands of a Receiver. Mortgage was foreclosed by the United States, and the lands in Kansas granted to the old Kansas Pacific Railway Company were bought in by the Union Pacific Land Company.

The substitution in this case is complete, and the Union Pacific Land Company makes its own selection of lands formerly granted to the Kansas Pacific Railroad Company and receives patents to the Union Pacific Land Company direct.

My telegram to Mr. Chambers states the facts regarding selections by and patents to the California & Oregon Land Company of lands originally granted by Congress to the Oregon Central Military Road Grant.

Mr. Chambers has undoubtedly looked this matter up. He makes no citation to department decision, but I think this matter can be brought about by conference with the officials at Washington, who are just now inclined to be friendly to us.

I think, however, that all arrangements should be made, and then the matter taken up with them,—personally, and not by letter.

If this matter once gets into the ordinary grind of the Interior Department, it may be months, or even years, before we can pull it through.

Please accept my assurance that I am at your disposal at all times in helping through this somewhat complicated, but I think altogether hopeful deal.

I go to Portland tonight, to be gone for some days;

but in case you need me I will try to hasten my return.

GOVERNMENT'S EXHIBIT NO. 116

INFORMATION RECEIVED FROM DAVID LORING

Mr. Loring went to work for the Oregon & California Railroad Company on March 4, 1882, in the engineering department; shortly after, he went into the right-of-way department, and worked in these two departments until the fall of 1884. Mr. Schulze had resigned as land agent of the O. & C., and Mr. I. R. Moores had recently died. The Board of Directors and the Farmers Loan & Trust Company were unable to agree upon a land agent, and the Board made George H. Andrews acting land agent, in which capacity he served until 1904. Shortly after, Mr. Andrews was made acting land agent, Mr. Loring was assigned to work in the land department, commenced his duties as such in the fall of 1884 or early in 1885, and served in that capacity until Mr. Andrews retired. During this time, Mr. Loring had general charge of the office work, conducted many of the investigations for the sale of lands personally, and in a general way had charge of the records of the office, all subject, of course, to Mr. Andrews. Mr. Loring personally wrote and prepared most of the deeds executed during the period he was so employed.

At the time Mr. Loring entered the land department, Mr. Andrews had full charge subject to General Manager Koehler and President Villard, and this condition continued until after the Southern Pacific Company secured the road; in other words, the land department matters were entirely within the control of men who represented the Oregon & California Railroad Company. Shortly after the Southern Pacific secured the road, a general land department of all Southern Pacific lines was established at San Francisco, and William H. Mills was made land commissioner. He had charge of the railroad lands of all of the companies then controlled by the Southern Pacific system. Mr. Madden had direct charge of either the old Southern Pacific or the Central Pacific, subject to Mr. Mills who gave but little personal attention to those lands.

After Mr. Mills was appointed land commissioner, the general policy concerning lands was dictated from San Francisco by Mills or frequently, by Mr. Huntington himself. Mr. Huntington did not have full control of the Southern Pacific at the time it acquired the Oregon & California. There was considerable of a struggle for the control of the road for a few years.

The land department was maintained in this general manner until sometime in 1902, when Mr. Eberline was sent out as the representative of Mr. Harriman, or so it was generally understood. Mr. Eberline immediately began a thorough investigation of the entire records of the land department. Shortly after Mr. Eberline took charge, he ordered the sale of all timber lands to stop, and but few sales of any lands were made after that. Most all of the land in the grant had more or less timber on it at that time. There was but a few straggling sales made after Mr. Eberline stopped the sales.

At the time Mr. Loring went into the office, a considerable part of the lands were graded,—Mr. Loring now thinks a large part of the lands that had been patented were graded,—he is not certain as to the quantity —but the grading was indicated by pencil notations on the plats in the office, these notations simply consisting of prices. There had been some cruising before that time, but only of small parts of the grant. Mr. Moores had been connected with the land department from the start, and he was very well acquainted with the land generally throughout the valley, and Mr. Loring thinks that a large part of the grading was made upon his individual judgment. After Mr. Andrews and Mr. Loring went into the land department, they found frequent instances where the lands were rated too low, and as a result, Mr. Andrews and Mr. Loring began grading the lands up to actual value so far as known, and this policy continued during all of the time Mr. Loring and Mr. Andrews were in the office. Their uniform policy was to ascertain the reasonable value of lands,

Mr. Loring says that always during the time he was in the office, the lands were sold at as high a price as could be obtained, and to any person who applied to purchase and would pay the price, and of as large a quantity as desired. Mr. Loring does not remember that the company ever refused to make a sale because of the provisions of the act of 1869 or of the act of 1870. For that matter, Mr. Loring does not remember that any one else than the man in Washington ever contended that he had a right to purchase under that Act. This case in Washington was in 189— sometime. Mr. Arthur C. Emmons, who is now practicing law in Portland, with offices in the Chamber of Commerce Building, was attorney for the defendant in that case, and probably remembers it thoroughly.

Mr. Loring says that it is possible that the question of the rights of actual settlers was discussed in some way at the time the quadrant suit was started, and that Judge Williams, who was attorney for the settlers, might know; or perhaps Mr. Galvani knows. Mr. Galvani at that time lived at Forest Grove. He is now head draftsman for the Oregon Electric Co., the electric line now being constructed to Salem.

From the time Mr. Loring first went to work in the land department until sometime after 1890, there was very little demand for timber lands, and most of the sales were made to people who were farming the adjoining lands or to new settlers coming in, and during this time the actual value of a large part of the grant, so far as the then market price controlled, was really not more than $2.50 an acre, and a great deal of land was sold at prices not above $2.50; but during this same time, the sales of the better known and higher priced lands in the more thickly settled part of the valley were sold by Mr. Andrews and Mr. Loring at their actual value so far as known, as above stated. The outlying lands were in the midst of Government land, still vacant, and the Government price naturally controlled the market price of the adjoining lands. In the valley lands were sold as high at 6, 8, 10, and even $15 an acre, always according to value. When a person applied to purchase there was no effort made to ascertain if he was a settler on the land, nor the use which he intended to make of the land, nor whether he had previously purchased any lands which would exceed 160 acres added to the new purchase. There never was any attempt to ascertain whether the land sought to be purchased was susceptible of settlement. The only cruising or grading done was simply to ascertain the value of the land.

The cruisers and land examiners made notes as to the general character of the land with reference to soil and sub-soil, and as to whether the land was agricultural or grazing or timber land, but this was simply to assist in fixing the value of the land, rather than in restricting sales to actual settlers. There never was any policy of restricting the sales of even the agricultural lands to actual settlers, so far as Mr. Loring knows. All lands were sold alike, so far as the general policy was concerned, to any purchaser, in any quantity, and at the highest price obtainable.

Down to 1890, there was no general demand for timber lands, and they had no such value as they have today. From 1890 to 1900, the demand for these lands increased very rapidly, and the value increased accordingly, and it was during this period that nearly all of the large timber land sales were negotiated. Before these large sales began, the general indications were that there was going to be a demand for timber lands, and that eastern buyers would be making purchases of them, and the office in anticipation of this condition, had the timber lands cruised as rapidly as possible. In this way the land department endeavored to take advantage of all market conditions for the purpose of increasing the revenues from the sales of the lands. Nearly all of the large sales were negotiated after 1890, with the exception of the sales to the bondholders in 1872-3-4.

The land business in every way was more vigorously and effectively handled after the Southern Pacific acquired the road. The principal reason for this was that before that time, the Oregon & California Railroad Co. had no money to exploit the land business, but after the S. P. acquired control, cruisings were made and no efforts spared to exploit the land business and develop and obtain as high values as possible, and this policy was persistently pursued until Mr. Eberline's time, when he stopped sales altogether.

Patents to indemnity and lien lands were delayed on account of the manner in which the work was done in the General Land Office. Mr. Loring says that many indemnity selections were pending when he went into the office, and that many more were made by him shortly after he went into the office. The lands in the place limits were not selected so rapidly because the company knew in a general way what it had there, and it was the policy of the company to avoid selecting as long as possible, in order to keep them off the tax rolls. But indemnity selections were made as rapidly as surveys would permit, because a great deal of land was being lost. The place limit lands were not selected until required in a general way, first, to avoid the fees, and second, to avoid taxes. The Oregon & California R. R. Co. was always short of funds. After the Southern Pacific secured control selections were made of everything as rapidly as possible, and it was after this time that a large part of the place limit lands were selected. The fees for selections amounted to considerable, being $2 for each quarter section, so that while the indemnity selections were made as rapidly as possible to avoid losses, place selections were, during the years of financial adversity, delayed as long as possible.

Place lands were sold before patented, and even before acceptance of selections in a few instances where there was no doubt that selections would be approved. Mr. Loring does not remember to what extent this was done during his time, but he knows that it was done with very little restraint by Messrs. Moores and Schulze, and that a great many complications arose and had to be straightened out during the time of Mr. Andrews and Mr. Loring.

Mr. Loring has been over a large part of the land in lower Douglas and in Josephine and Jackson counties while right-of-way agent and also on outing trips. He says that there is a large amount of land which is available for grazing and for fruit and grapes; that in that general locality fruit and grapes will grow to the best advantage, even in the mining country; that grapes seem to do best on mining soil. Mr. Loring finds it difficult to make a satisfactory estimate of the quantity of land available for agricultural purposes. There are quite large tracts all of which will be available for growing fruit and grapes, and then again, large tracts wholly unfit for any such use. Then again the largest part of the land consists of quarter sections containing land of both characters. Mr. Loring thinks the best estimate he can give would be that from 60 to 75% of all of the quarter sections remaining in the land grant, and for that matter, the even numbered sections as well, south of Roseburg, contain from 6 to 12 acres or more which can be devoted to the growing of fruit and grapes, and the balance of the quarter section can be used for grazing, and in this way the land could be used by settlers. Mr. Loring calls attention to the fact that nearly all of the timber land after the timber is removed can be seeded to timothy and grow excellent crops for grazing, and that this can be done without removing the stumps. Mr. Loring says that the quantity of land available for fruit and grapes will be greatly increased if irrigation projects are installed.

Mr. Loring remembers specifically most of the large sales to Hammond, Kelly, and the Curtiss Lumber Co.

There were hundreds of contracts forfeited at various times. There used to be a book in which all of these cancellations were recorded, but Mr. Loring thinks this book was probably destroyed in the San Francisco fire.

Mr. Loring says that the Booth-Kelly people have right from the first considered their lands as possessing a substantial value, after removing of timber, for grazing purposes, and that this subject was discussed by them on various occasions with Mr. Loring himself. In these conversations, Mr. Kelly referred to the value of the lands for grazing and other purposes after timber was removed.

The sale maps published by the company were revised from time to time, generally every two years or so. Mr. Loring attended to a large part of the corrections. At the time Mr. Eberline took charge the publication of the maps was stopped, and that explains why they are so rare today. The Southern Pacific people looked after the printing of maps because they could get the work done cheaper than the O. & C. had before paid Rand & McNally. This shows to what extent the Southern Pacific dictated the policy of the O. & C., including the land department.

Mr. Loring says that the upper end of the Willamette Valley and the Umpqua and Rogue River Valleys were in a general way taken up under the donation laws long before the railroad grant, and that the land taken up in this manner was almost as much in quantity as now appears on the railroad map. That there was more land lost in place limits than all of the indemnity lands, so that even if the company had gotten all of the lands within the indemnity limits, it would still have lost a part of the grant.

Because of the existence of minerals in Jackson and Josephine counties, the company had all indemnity lands examined before selecting, and no selections were made of lands reported to be mineral. It is a fact that nearly every odd section was selected, but they were reported to be non-mineral before they were selected. It is also a fact that afterwards where minerals were discovered, such lands were sold as mineral lands after being patented. All contracts and deeds of lands in those counties reserved minerals, unless the existence of minerals was known and conceded by the purchaser and he bought and paid for the lands as mineral lands, in which case until about the year 1900, the minerals were not reserved. (Stopped selling minerals 1902).

Mr. Elliott probably knows as much as any person about the character of the lands now remaining in the grant. He worked as a cruiser for the company for many years.

It was understood when sales were made to men like Kelly, Hammond and Wentworth, that they were buying land principally for the timber and with no intention of settling upon it or of having others settle, in fact, the value of the lands for timber was the principal basis of negotiations as to price.

Deeds accumulated from time to time in the office which were never delivered, because the parties never called for them, and we were unable to locate them. When all of the records were sent to San Francisco, these undelivered deeds were included among the papers sent, unless perhaps they were retained by Mr. Cotton. My recollection is that there were three or four, or possibly a half a dozen of the deeds way back during the time they were executed by Latham and Atherton, and other deeds accumulating from that time on down. There were perhaps 75 of these deeds which had accumulated down to 1902. These deeds, of course, would not appear in the public records.

Ainsworth, Ralston and Rathborn were the three old bondholders who exchanged bonds for lands in the early history of the company.

The "East Side" and "West Side" lands were all handled alike, excepting that down to 1897 they were authorized in separate lists, but after that time, the lands of both grants were included in the same serial numbers.

The manner of preparing schedule of deeds to be executed was as follows:

On the 1st of each month, all contracts fully paid up were included in a schedule prepared by myself, which was furnished to Mr. Andrews, and he prepared the schedule which was adopted at the directors' meeting. When the schedule was adopted by the Board of Directors and deeds authorized, the schedule was then handed to me, and I prepared deeds pursuant to the form prescribed by the resolution and by the contract. I then handed them to Mr. Andrews, who executed them as Secretary and sent them to Mr. Koehler who executed them as Second Vice-President. If the deeds required signature of the Union Trust Co., Mr. Koehler then sent them to the Union Trust Co. with proper letter on the subject, and when they were returned by the Union Trust Co. executed, they were sent to the Land Department for delivery. The deeds which did not require execution by the Union Trust Co., were delivered to the Land Department as soon as Mr. Koehler executed them.

Mr. Loring, immediately upon receiving the deeds, finally executed and ready for delivery, notified the grantees at their residences as the same appeared in the records of the company by postal cards. It was one of the requirements of the company that the purchaser should surrender their contract or paid up certificate, if one had been delivered to them, before the deed wonld be delivered, and the postal card advised them of that fact.

The decision in the Steel case was construed by the railroad company and conceded by the Union Trust Co. to mean that any lands which were subject to pending contracts on May 12, 1887, were not covered by the Union Trust Co. mortgage; and it was further construed by both of the parties that if any contracts executed prior to May 12, 1887 were at any time afterwards cancelled, the lands reverted to the railroad company, but did not become subject to the Union Trust Co. mortgage, and these lands were called "non-trust" lands, and the deeds for them were later given a serial number with the initials "N. T." This applied to both grants.

There was a separate book kept containing all cancellations. I am not at all certain as to the number of these cancellations, but it seems that the number exceeded 2,500 during the entire history of the railroad. The first big batch of these cancellations was in 1885 and 1886, during the receivership, when all of the affairs of the company relating to the lands were adjusted in a general way. Notice was given to all delinquent purchasers to pay up, and those who failed to pay up, were subjected to forfeiture. This accounts for the unusual number of deeds executed during 1885, because people came in and paid up their old pending contracts. Referring to the statement above that surrender of contracts was required before delivery of deeds; the company made it a practice to require an indemnity bond in case the contract had been lost and could not be surrendered.

Mr. Loring thinks that the contract with the Pokegama Company in November, 1902 was pursuant to a former contract entered into several years prior, by the terms of which it was provided that if a certain railroad should be constructed, the Pokegama Company should be entitled to select and purchase a specified quantity of land and at a specified price, and that this contract was entered into after Eberline had really stopped sales.

In some cases lands which had been sold under contract were sold for taxes in the different counties, the company not paying the taxes on contracted lands at first. When the railroad company afterwards forfeited these same contracts, the lands reverted to the company, but subject to these tax titles, and this is the cause of the only uncertainty as to the quantity of lands held by the company at the time Eberline took charge. Redemption was made from these tax sales wherever they were discovered, and one of the first things that Eberline did was to check the entire grant, and make provision for getting rid of the tax titles standing against it.

W. W. Bretherton was tax commissioner for the company for 18 years until Eberline took charge. Bretherton is still in Portland and in the employ of the S. P. Company as colector of freight bills or some similar capacity. He is a brother of C. E. Bretherton, the English lawyer who re-organized the company for Villard in 1881.

Mr. Loring's recollection is that none of the indemnity lands were sold prior to patent during his time, but that the primary lands were sold before patent.

In the southern part of the grant, the Land Department waited until the lists were proved before placing the lands on sale, and in most cases until patent was actually issued. It is a fact that a large part of the lands in the southern part of the grant were never offered for sale as low as $2.50 per acre. A large part of them were cruised before the company's title became assured sufficiently to be put on sale, so that when they were first put on sale, a price in excess of $2.50 an acre was asked for them.

GOVERNMENT'S EXHIBIT NO. 120.

State of Oregon :
:ss.
County of Jackson :

I, W. G. Grieve, a citizen of the United States, 35 years of age, residing at Jacksonville, Oregon, where I am County Assessor of Jackson County, Oregon, being duly sworn, depose and say:

I have been county assessor for about three years last past. I have lived in Jackson County, Oregon, for the last twenty-four years; and prior to becoming county assessor, I spent about seventeen years in the stock business, and about four years in locating people on government land. During my residence in Jackson County, I have lived at Central Point, Prospect, Jacksonville, on Little Butte Creek, on Big Butte Creek, and elsewhere. I have ranged cattle in almost all the out districts of said county; and through ranging cattle, locating people on lands, hunting, performing the work of county assessor, etc., have become very familiar with the lands in all parts of said county.

I have had experience in farming; and by having lived most all my life in farming communities, have become familiar with agricultural conditions, particularly in said Jackson County, Oregon.

I am very familiar with the lands now owned by the railroad in the following described townships; and I estimate the number of quarter sections thereof which are suitable for settlement purposes, that is, which would support a family, at the percentages stated below:

Those which drain into Trail and Elk Creeks and the upper Rogue River, namely, Tps. 32 S. Rgs 1 W. and 1 & 2 E. W. M.; Tps 33 S. Rgs 1 W. and 1, 2 & 3 E. W. M.; Tps. 34 S. R. 1 W. & part of 1 E. & 35 S. Rgs. 1 W. & 1 E.....20%

Those which drain into Big Butte Creek, namely, T 34 S. Rgs 2 & 3 E & part of 1 E; Tps 35 S. Rgs 2 & 3 E; & parts of T 36 S. R. 3 E.....40%

Those which drain into Little Butte and Antelope Creeks, namely, Tps 36 S. Rgs 1 W & 1 & 2 E. & part of 3 E; T 37 S. Rgs 1, 2, 3 & 4 E.....20%

Those which drain into Evans & Sardine Creeks and tributaries, namely, T 33 S. Rgs 2, 3 & 4 W; T 34 S. Rgs 2, 3 & 4 W; T 35 S. Rgs 3 & 4 W; and the portions of T 36 S. Rgs 3 & 4 W which are north of Rogue River.....20%

Those drained by Sams & Beagle Creeks, namely, T 35 S. R 2 W; and part of T 36 S. R. 2 W.....50%

Those which drain into the Rogue River on the south, and into Bear Creek as far south as Ashland, namely, part of T 36 S. Rgs 2, 3 & 4 W; T 37 S. Rgs.

1, 2 & 3 W & part of 4 W; & T 38 S. Rgs 1 W and part of 2 W & 1 E.....50%

Those which drain into Jennie & Dead Indian Creeks and those south of Ashland which drain into Bear Crek, namely, T 38 S. Rgs 2, 3 & 4 E; T 39 S, Rgs 1, 2, 3, 4 & 5 E & part of 1 W; Tp. 40 S. Rgs 1, 2, 3 & 4 E; T. 41 S. Rgs. 1, 2, 3 & 4 E.....30%

Those which drain into Applegate Creek and its tributaries, namely, part of T 37 S. R. 4 W; T 38 S. Rgs. 3 & 4 W & part of 2 W; T 39 S Rgs. 2, 3 & 4 W and part of 1 W; T 40 S. Rgs 1, 2, 3 & 4 W; and T 41 S. Rgs 3 & 4 W.....15%

Taking all the quarter sections together which I have estimated above as suitable for settlement purposes, I estimate that they will average tweny acres of plow land to the quarter section; and I know that practically all of the railroad lands in the territory above mentioned is good grazing land.

I consider the above estimates as conservative; and I know that the climatic and soil conditions of the lands in Jackson County, Oregon, are favorable for agricultural purposes, and fruit growing.

That said Oregon Central Railroad "Company, the party of the first part, and its success-"ors shall and will, at any time or times hereafter, and "from time to time, execute, acknowledge and deliver, "under its corporate seal, to the said parties of the sec-"ond part, and the survivors or survivor of them and "their and his successors or successor, such other and fur-"ther assurances, deeds, mortgages, obligations, trans-"fers, indenture and instruments in writing, and shall "and will do and perform all such further or other acts "or things, as shall or may be proper or necessary, or as "their or his counsel, learned in the law, shall deem "necessary, proper or expedient for the better or more "effectually securing the payments of said five thous- "and eight hundred and sixty bonds, and the interest "due or to grow due thereon, or for carrying into effect "the true intent, design, objects and purposes of these "presents, or making, preserving, continuing and keep- "ing valid and effectual, the lien and incumbrance creat- "ed, or intended to be created by the execution, delivery "and recording of this indenture, upon all the property, "real and personal, rolling stock, equipments, franchis- "es and effects, and especially the lands referred to in "and by the said Act of Congress, approved May 4, "1870, now owned, possessed or acquired or which shall "hereafter be owned, possessed or acquired by said party "of the first part.

The said parties of "the second part shall not have the right to make sale "of any of said lands, without the consent of the party "of the first part.

"Fourthly. That the said Oregon Central Railroad "Company, the party of the first part hereto, shall and "will, well and truly, pay the said sums of money in said "five thousand eight hundred and sixty bonds men- "tioned, together with the semi-annual interest due, or "to become due thereon, at the rate of seven per cent per "annum, at the times, in the manner, and at the place "specified therein; and further, said Oregon Central "Railroad Company, hereby covenants and agrees, that "in case it shall have for the space of thirty days, made "default, in the payment of the semi-annual interest due, "or to become due, or either or any of the said five "thousand eight hundred and sixty bonds, or in case it "shall fail to appropriate and set apart in the hands of "the said parties of the second part, all and singular, the "net proceeds of the sales of the said lands, granted to "the party of the first part, by the Act of Congress of "the United States as aforesaid, as, and for a sinking "fund for, and to be applied in payment or redemption "of said five thousand eight hundred and sixty bonds

"in the manner hereinbefore and in said Act of Con-

"the lapse of said thirty days, the whole principal sum
"mentioned in each and all of said five thousand eight "hundred and sixty bonds, shall forthwith be and be-

"that it shall and may be lawful, and the said parties of "the second part, and the survivors and survivor of them,
"and their and his successors or successor, are hereby

"First. The said Holladay sells and transfers, and "agrees to sell and transfer to said parties of the second "part, or to such persons as they may designate, nine- "teen millions of the stock of the Oregon and California "Railroad Company, being all of the lawfully issued "stock of the said company, excepting only one million "now held by Milton S. Latham.

"Second. The said Holladay in like manner sells "and transfers and agrees to sell and transfer to said "parties of the second part, or to such persons as they "may designate, a majority of the stock of the Oregon "Central Railroad Company, viz., over seventy-five "thousand shares thereof, the remainder being held by "Milton S. Latham and others.

"Third. The said Holladay in like manner sells and "trainsfers, and agrees to sell and transfer to said par- "ties of the second part, or to such persons as they may "designate, all of the stock of the Oregon Steamship "Company, the same now standing in the name of Milton "S. Latham, and at the option of said parties of the "second part, or such person as they may designate, the "said Holladay agrees to guaranty and to fulfill said "guaranty, and he hereby guarantees that the benefits "arising from the now existing contract or contracts for "the carriage of the mails between Portland and Sitka "for the remainder of the time of said contract shall "accrue to the Oregon Steamship Company, if it elects "to continue said service for the remainder of said con- "tract term.

"Fourth. The said Holladay, in like manner, sells "and transfers and agrees to sell and transfer to said par- "ties of the second part, or to such persons as they may "designate, all of the stock of the Portland Warehouse "and Dock Company, viz., five hundred thousand dol- "lars, and the said Holladay covenants that the title of "said company to its real estate is perfect and free from "liens or incumbrances, and that said company is free "from floating debt and other debts, except as to a mort- "gage on its real estate of thirty-five thousand dollars "or thereabouts, which mortgage said Holladay agrees "to pay and cancel out of the first moneys to be paid "to him by said parties of the second part, or such per- "sons as they may designate as is hereafter agreed. The "net earnings of said last-named company, up to the "date of this agreement, are not to belong to the said "parties of the second part.

"Fifth. And the said Holladay agrees that any "existing contracts between the Oregon and California "Railroad Company, the Oregon Steamship Company "and the Oregon Central Railroad Company, or either "of them, with the Oregon Transfer Company, shall be "modified, previous to the execution of this contract, by "a new agreement between the proper parties, to the "reasonable satisfaction of the parties of the second part "to these presents, or to such persons as they may desig- "nate.

"Sixth. The said Holladay agrees to furnish to said "parties of the second part, or of such persons as they "may designate on the execution hereof, a full release

"by the North Pacific Transportation Company of all "its claims both upon the Oregon and California Railroad "Company and the Oregon Central Railroad Company; "that against the last-named company being in amount "about ninety thousand dollars, and until said claims are "in some manner satisfactorily released, the parties of the "second part may retain an amount of said bonds, part "of the three hundred thousand dollars herein agreed to "be paid to said Holladay, equal to the amount of said "claims.

"Seventh. The said Holladay agrees to pay, on "the execution hereof, to the Oregon and California Rail-"road Company, the amount due to it by the Portland "Street Railroad Company, for certain iron, being five "thousand one hundred and three dollars and sixty-eight "cents. And said Holladay further agrees to pay, on "the execution hereof, all other sums for which he is liable "to any of the companies hereinbefore named, amounting "to two thousand eight hundred dollars or thereabouts, "and in some valid and effectual manner to release and "waive, previous to the execution hereof, all claims for "salary as president of the Oregon Steamship Com-"pany, and to cause the entries to his credit on this ac-"count on the books of said company to be effectually "cancelled and discharged in accordance herewith. And "said Holladay also agrees, previous to the execution "hereof, to waive and release his claim to additional com-"pensation as president of the Oregon Central Railroad "Company, made since December twenty-first, one "thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, and cause

"the entries to his credit on this account, on the books "of said company, to be effectually canceled and dis- "charged in accordance herewith. And said Holladay "likewise agrees, on the execution hereof, to pay the sum "of three hundred dollars towards the costs of investi- "gating the title of the Portland Warehouse and Dock "Company to the real property sold herein. All the "moneys, the payment of which is herein stipulated by "said Holladay, shall be deducted from the first cash "payment herein named for the properties of the Port- "land Warehouse and Dock Company.

"Eighth. And the said Holladay further covenants "and agrees with the said parties of the second part that "the books of accounts of the Oregon and California "Railroad Company and the Oregon Central Railroad "Company are to the best of his knowledge full, accur- "ate, and true, and that the trial balance and monthly "statement of January, one thousand eight hundred and "seventy-six, are as he believes full, accurate and true, "and that there are no other legal and valid claims "against either of said railroad companies, of which he "has any knowledge or notice, excepting only small "sundry claims for rights of way, and certain claims of "Hallet and Elliot which have been made known to "the parties of the second part; and that there are no "contracts with or for salaried officers, or other offi- "cers, except for the ordinary services and salaries of "the current year, and that there are no contracts which "do not expire at the end of each fiscal year, and which "have not been made known to the parties of the second "part. And the said Holladay further covenants and "agrees with the parties of the second part that the books "of account of the Oregon Steamship Company, so "far as he knows and believes, are accurate and full, "and that there are no debts or claims due by said com- "pany, so far as he, said Holladay, knows and believes "which are not fully known to Milton S. Latham, and "the only debts which he, the said Holladay, has any "knowledge or information apart from the current "money bills, and repairs, and the debt of the European "creditors, represented by Latham, is what may be due "for current salaries, supplies and payrolls. And said "Holladay further covenants and agrees for himself, his "heirs and legal representatives, that he will on demand "either convey to the Oregon and California Railroad "Company, to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, "to the Oregon Steamship Company, and to the Port- "land Warehouse and Dock Company, or to any of "them, or else, as the case may be, will take all necessary "legal proceedings in conjunction with said companies, "or any of them, for the purpose of compelling the trans- "fer to said companies, or any of them, of any real es- "tate or other property or rights which equitably belong "to said companies, or any of them (if any such prop- "erty or rights there be), but which may now be held "by or stand in the name of said Holladay, or any other "person or persons or corporations in trust having been "purchased for said corporations or conveyed to him for "their use.

"Ninth. And the said Holladay further covenants

"that he will obtain and cause to be delivered to the "Oregon and California Railroad Company a good and "sufficient deed with covenants of warranty against the "acts of the grantors from one James G. Hughes to the "said railroad company for certain property at Junction "City and Drain stations and Oregon City, being all "the property at said places standing in the name or "under the control of said Hughes, which has heretofore "been a subject of controversy between the parties to "this agreement, or will take such proceedings as may "be necessary to secure such title. And also that he will "obtain and cause to be delivered a good and sufficient "deed, with full covenants of warranty from the Willam- "ette Real Estate Company to the said railroad com- "pany, in accordance with an existing contract for the "said conveyance. And also that he will cause to be "executed and delivered to the Oregon Central Railroad "Company a good and sufficient deed, with full cove- "nants of warranty by the Portland Warehouse and "Dock Company of the depot property sold by it to said "railroad company. And said Holladay further agrees "to execute, or cause to be executed, all further or other "instruments or assurances which may be necessary or "proper to perfect the title to any of said parcels of "real estate.

"Tenth. And said Holladay covenants that to the "best of his knowledge and belief, the company has set- "tled, confirmed and paid all claims of one Hallet "against the Oregon and California Railroad Company, "and that he has no valid claim against the said com"pany, and that in like manner all claims of said Elliott, "or of Elliott and one Nightingale, are invalid, and "said Holladay agrees, without charge, to furnish the "said parties of the second part for the use and benefit "of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, "when required, every assistance in his power to defend "and defeat all of said claims. And said Holladay also "agrees to furnish copies of all agreements of one Gaston "made at the time of the compromise of his claims "against the said Oregon Central Railroad Company, if "the same are not already on file in the company's "office, and further said Holladay agrees, on demand, to "give to the parties of the second part his resignation "as president of the companies herein referred to, and "also to procure the resignation of the vice-presidents "and secretaries of said companies, excepting only the "secretary of the Oregon and California Railroad Com- "pany, and the secretary of the Oregon Steamship Com- "pany, which last he will obtain if possible.

"Eleventh. And the said Holladay covenants and "agrees not to engage, directly or indirectly, whether as "part owner of a vessel or in any other way whatso- "ever, in any trade or business which can or shall be "in conflict with the business or interests of the Oregon "and California and the Oregon Central Railroad, and "the Oregon Steamship Companies, and not to erect any "docks or warehouses which might come in competition "with and affect injuriously the business of the Portland "Warehouse and Dock Company. And the said Holla- "day, at the time of the execution hereof, shall enter into "a personal bond in the sum of one hundred thousand "dollars in gold coin for the faithful performance of this "covenant. Said covenant shall continue in full force for "the term of ten years from the date hereof. But this "covenant is not to be considered so as to affect the full "use and enjoyment of the present charter of the steam-"ship 'California,' which said parties of the second part "agree shall be confirmed in its present tenor for the full "unexpired term thereof, provided the same was made "with the knowledge and consent of Milton S. Latham, "for the European creditors of the Oregon Steamship "Company; nor shall said covenant affect the use in "any trade or business not directly in conflict for the "time being with the business of the Oregon Steamship "Company of the ship 'Idaho,' in which vessel Holladay "is a part owner. But except as aforesaid, this general "covenant shall apply to both the 'California' and "'Idaho,' so long as Ben Holladay retains any interest "therein as owner or otherwise. And the said parties of "the second part, in consideration of the premises, and "of the foregoing covenants to be kept and performed "by said Holladay, in behalf and as the agents and repre-"sentatives of bondholders of the Oregon and California "Railroad Company to the extent that they represent "the said bonds as aforesaid, covenant and agree with "the said Holladay, and with his legal representatives, "as follows:

"Twelfth. That all of said stocks referred to in "article first and second of this agreement may be forth-"with placed in the hands of the bank of the State of "New York, of the City of New York, as a trustee, "to be held by it until the delivery of the three hundred "thousand dollars of bonds hereinafter more specifically "referred to, whereupon the same are to be duly de- "livered to said parties of the second part or to such "persons as they may designate. And until this sur- "render it is agreed between the parties to these presents "that said parties of the second part, or to such persons "as they may designate, shall have the power to vote by "proxy upon all of said stocks.

"Thirteenth. That simultaneously with such de- "posit the said parties of the second part shall pay to "said Ben Holladay the sum of two hundred thousand "dollars ($200,000), in gold coin of the United States, "less the amount due under the mortgage on the proper- "ty of the Portland Warehouse and Dock Company, "hereinbefore mentioned, and less the payments stipu- "lated in article seven of this agreement; and within one "year thereafter the said parties of the second part will "make to said Holladay or to his assigns a further pay- "ment, in like gold coin, of the sum of fifty thousand "dollars ($50,000), with interest at six per cent. per "annum, if the said Holladay shall have faithfully and "strictly complied with his covenants and agreements "hereinbefore expressed.

"Fourteenth. And further, the said parties of the "second part covenant that they will within a reasonable "time after the execution hereof cause to be created, "executed and delivered to the said Holladay or to his

"assigns, three hundred bonds of one thousand dollars "each, payable in thirty years after their date, to-wit: "first of March, one thousand eight hundred and seventy "six, bearing seven per cent. interest, payable semi- "annually, principal and interest to be payable in gold, "such bonds to be created and issued by the Oregon Cen- "tral Railroad Company, under the corporate seal of "said company, and to bear coupons as usual. The "form and manner of the original creation and issue of "said bonds to be agreed upon between the respective "counsel of the parties hereto. The said bonds shall be "secured by a mortgage of said road, and in case the "said parties of the second part shall hereafter secure the "control of the existing bonds on the Oregon Central "Railroad Company, said bonds shall be retired and "canceled, and the mortgage securing them be extin- "guished. But in case of such retirement or cancella- "tion of the present mortgage bonds of the Oregon Cen- "tral Railroad Company, said company may create a "new mortgage for a sum not exceeding twenty thousand "dollars a mile, of which the afore-mentioned three hun- "dred thousand dollars of bonds shall be part upon the "completed road to Junction City. These bonds shall "be issued only pro rata as said railroad is completed, "and the interest on the above-named three hundred "thousand dollars of bonds, shall by apt legal instru- "ments to be devised by counsel, be secured by the pledge "of the net earnings of the Oregon and California Rail- "road, so far as the said parties of the second part have "the right to receive or control the same as representa"tives of the bondholders as aforesaid, so that they shall "be first applied to the payment of seven per cent. in- "terest on such three hundred thousand dollars "($300,000) of bonds of the Oregon Central Railroad "Company, before any interest is paid on any of the "existing bonds of the Oregon and California Railroad "Company, owned or controlled by said parties of the "second part. But the rights of Sulzbach Brothers are "hereby expressly saved, as the same are named under "a certain assignment and pledge of the interest coming "to the bondholders, represented by the parties of the "second part, to secure the repayment of two hundred "and fifty thousand dollars, in sums not exceeding forty "thousand dollars per annum. But neither the Oregon "and California Railroad Company nor the said parties "of the second part shall in anywise be liable directly "or indirectly for the payment of the principal of said "three hundred thousand dollars of bonds, nor for the "payment of interest otherwise than as aforesaid.

"And the said porties of the second part further "covenant that in case of an arrangement by which the "railroads controlled by the stocks now purchased from "said Holladay, or either of them shall be consolidated "with any other railroad or railroads, or shall be sold "to any other railroad or corporation, and upon any "such sale or reorganization or combination, new bonds "of any kind shall be issued and paid for the road or "roads now controlling under this agreement by said "parties of the second part, that then and in any such "case an equal number of such new bonds or an amount,

"the annual interest upon which shall be equal to the "interest payable to said Holladay upon the three hun- "dred thousand dollars of bonds above referred to, shall "be offered to said Holladay or his assigns in exchange "for the three hundred thousand dollars of new bonds "herein above agreed to be created and paid to him; "and in case such new bonds shall be equal in value to "the bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, "or shall be guaranteed by the Central Pacific Railroad "Company or other corporations of equal financial "standing, then said Holladay for himself and his as- "signs agrees to accept the same in exchange for the "said three hundred thousand dollars of bonds. This "covenant on said Holladay's part to expire in six years "from the date hereof. And as to the rights and pow- "ers of the parties of the second part, and those whom "they represent, over the net earnings of the Oregon and "California Railroad Company, it is now expressly stat- "ed that they represent the portion of said earnings be- "longing and coming to such of the holders of the first "mortgage bonds of the Oregon and California Rail- "road Company as are represented by the parties of "the second part.

"Fifteenth. And the said parties of the second part "further agree with said Holladay that upon the strict "fulfillment of the several covenants hereinbefore ex- "pressed, and upon the condition that the financial con- "dition of the said several companies herein named is "found to correspond with the statements and accounts "rendered up to the execution of this agreement, in so "far as he is personally responsible for the same, he, the "said Holladay, and his associates, as officers and "agents whose shares in the several companies afore- "mentioned, are hereby sold, and also all other holders "of stock in the several companies, aforenamed whose "shares are hereby sold, and the said Holladay indi- "vidually shall be formally and legally discharged and "released by the various companies against all accounts, "agreements, guarantees and demands incurred by them "in their representative capacities to this date, as far "as such acts, accounts, agreements, guarantees and de- "mands are shown and proved by the books and public "statements of the several companies herein named, and "for which said Holladay is liable to either of said com- "panies, it being the intention of the parties hereto, by "this sale, to settle and end all previous transactions "between the parties aforesaid, and said companies re- "spectively including those which have hitherto been "disputed by said parties of the second part, or of which "they have had actual or constructive notice. And also "that said Holladay shall be protected from, and in- "demnified against, all liability under the contract made "between said Holladay and said parties of the second "part of July, one thousand eight hundred and seventy- "four, by means of a covenant not to sue, or other in- "strument, sufficient to secure him from all liability "thereunder, without in any manner releasing or dis- "charging any other party. But such instrument shall "not affect the respective rights or liabilities of said "Holladay and Messieurs Sulzbach Brothers under said

"agreement in respect of a claim made by the latter for "a payment on account of interest of fifty thousand "dollars or thereabouts.

"Sixteenth. And said Holladay agrees in case the "issue of the pending suits of one Elliott, and of said "Elliott and Nightingale, shall in any way injuriously "affect the rights of the bondholders of the Oregon and "California Railroad Company that he, the said Holla- "day, will indemnify them for any loss or damage that "they may suffer in consequence thereof. And said "Holladay further covenants that he has full right and "lawful power to make, and agree to make, all the trans- "fers, conveyances and assurances hereinabove agreed "upon; and that he will, on demand, execute and secure "to be executed, all further necessary transfers and as- "surances in order more fully to carry out the purposes "of these presents the intention of the parties hereto, "being to secure to the said parties of the second part "through the transfers of the railroad stocks, and the "other stocks above mentioned, the substantial and abso- "lute control of both of said corporations and their prop- "erties.

"In witness whereof, the said parties have hereunto "set their hands and seals, the year and day first above "written.

"After the first payment under this stipulation on "account of the principal, there shall be added to each "subsequent payment on account of the principal an "amount equal to the interest saved by the previous pay- "ment of principal, so that such semi-annual payments "of principal and interest, taken together, shall be not "less than eleven thousand and two hundred dollars until "said advances are fully paid. The semi-annual pay- "ments of both principal and interest shall be made on "the fifteenth days of April and October of each year; "but if said advances of said party of the sixth part shall "have been made for less than six months at the time of "the first payments on account of principal and inter- "est herein provided for, the amount of principal and "interest then due and payable shall only be proportion- "ate to the time for which said advances have actually

"of all claims of said parties of the fourth and fifth "parts, to be held by the nominee or nominees of the "party of the sixth part, in accordance with the true

"COMPROMISE CONTRACTS OF 1874.

"No. 1. General Contract between the Oregon and "California Railroad and the Bondholders for "Funding Interest.

"WHEREAS, The Oregon and California Rail- "road Company has been unable to pay the coupons due "October first, one thousand eight hundred and "seventy-three; and April first, one thousand eight hun- "dred and seventy-four, on its debt of ten millions nine "hundred and fifty thousand dollars, for which its bonds "of various denominations, to the number of eighteen "thousand four hundred and fifty, have been issued se- "cured by a first mortgage running to Faxon D. "Atherton and Milton S. Latham, trustees; and, "whereas, it is probable that the receipts of said rail"road company will not be sufficient, for some time to "come, to pay the interest on said mortgage debt to the "stipulated amount of seven per cent. per annum; and, "whereas, the holders of said bonds are now entitled "to the full enjoyment of the security named in said "mortgage, and the same might now be enforced by "the said trustees, at their discretion, or on requirement "of the majority in interest of said bondholders; and, "whereas, it is the desire of the Oregon and California "Railroad Company, and of Ben Holladay, its presi- "dent, and the owner of the majority of its capital stock, "to enter into a satisfactory agreement with the holders "of the first mortgage bonds, so that they may not fore- "close the said mortgage and render the said stock of no "value; and whereas, Heinrich Hohenemser, director of "the Deutsche Vereins Bank at Frankfort-on-the-Main; "Aron Niederhofheim, manager of the branch of the "Bank of Commerce and Industry at Frankfort-on-the- "Main; Julius Schmidt, merchant at Frankfort-on-the- "Main; Adolph Otto, counsellor at law at Heilbronn in "the kingdom of Wirtenberg; Henry Villard, of Heidel- "berg in the Grand Duchy of Baden; Michael Benja- "maine, director of the Baierische Wechsler Bank at "Munich in the kingdom of Bavaria; Carl Staehelin- "Bucknow, of the firm of Iselin & Staehelin of Basle "in Switzerland; F. S. Van Nierop, director of the "Bank of Amsterdam in the kingdom of the Nether- "lands; and William Koester, of the firm of Koester "& Co., at Mannheim in the Grand Duchy of Baden, "are the holders of eleven thousand one hundred and

"forty-seven of said bonds of the Oregon and California "Railroad Company, to the amount, at their par value, "of six millions four hundred and sixty-eight thousand "and six hundred dollars ($6,468,600), being a majority "in interest and number thereof; and, whereas, the "above-named bondholders insist that the creditors of "said company have a claim upon the stockholders "thereof, and upon certain parties heretofore directors "thereof, in respect to the amount of alleged unpaid "stock and otherwise. Now, therefore, in consideration "of the premises, and of other valuable considerations "of the parties hereunto moving, it is hereby agreed "by and between the said Heinrich Hohenemser, Aron "Niederhofheim, Julius Schmidt, Adolph Otto, Michael "Benjamine, Carl Staehelin-Bucknow, F. S. Van "Nierop and Wilhelm Koester, by their attorney in "fact, Henry Villard; and the said Henry Villard, as "parties of the first part, the Oregon and California "Railroad Company as party of the second part, Ben "Holladay as party of the third part, and Faxon D. "Atherton and Milton S. Latham, trustees, as parties "of the fourth part, as follows, to wit:

"ARTICLE 1. The parties of the first part shall "have the right, during the continuance of this agree- "ment, and are hereby vested with whatever power and "authority shall be requisite for the purpose, to nominate "three members of the board of directors of the said "Oregon and California Railroad Company, with power "to remove them when and so far as it legally may, "and to make new nominations and appointments in "their place in case of removal, resignation, expiration "of their term of office, or a vacancy in said office "from any cause. And the parties of the second part, "and third part, respectively covenant and agree to "incorporate and renew, or retain forever, and cause "to be so incorporated, renewed or retained, such pro- "visions in the by-laws of the party of the second part, "without any modification at any time as shall fix the "number of directors at the number of seven, not less "than five of whom shall constitute a quorum; and in case "the number of directors should at any time be required "by law to be changed, the proportionate number to be "nominated and chosen in behalf of the parties of the "first part, and the proportion necessary to constitute "a quorum, shall in no case be diminished without the "written assent of the parties of the first part; and the "parties of the second and third parts further covenant "and agree, that the persons to be designated by the "parties of the first part, from time to time, for the "board of directors, shall be legally chosen by the stock- "holders, and shall be placed in all respects upon a per- "fect equality with the other members of the board; and "that they, the parties of the second and third parts, "will, in all respects, to the extent of their power, pro- "mote the wishes and interests of the parties of the first "part, as touching their representation in said board "of directors, or any changes in such representation; "and the party of the third part covenants and agrees, "at all times, on demand, to deliver to said parties of "the first part, or their financial agent, without charge,

"such number of shares of the capital stock of said rail"road company as shall be requisite (under the law, or "any rule or by-law of the company) to qualify their "representatives as aforesaid to become lawful mem"bers of the board of directors; and the said party of "the third party covenants and agrees to cause such "shares to be registered in the books of said railroad "company, in the names of such persons as shall be "designated by the parties of the first part, as members "of the board of directors as aforesaid. Said shares "shall, on request of the parties of the first part, or "their financial agent, be assigned in blank and de"posited to the order of the parties of the first part,
"with the London and San Francisco Bank, limited, "or such other banking institution, as the parties of "the first part may designate. And it is also covenanted
"and agreed by the parties of the second and third parts,
"that, at the time of executing this agreement, a suffi"cient number of vacancies shall be created in the board "of directors, by resignation or otherwise, to reduce
"said board to the number of four, and that thereupon "three persons, to be nominated by the parties of the "first part as aforesaid, shall be legally elected to said "board forthwith. And the party of the third part "hereby covenants that none of his shares of the capital "stock of the Oregon and California Railroad Company "shall be transferred without notice of this to the pur"chaser.

ARTICLE 2. The parties of the first part shall "have, at all times, the right to be represented as to all "matters concerning their interests in said railroad com"pany, or the property thereof, by a financial agent for "the protection of the interests of the bondholders, who "shall be selected by the parties of the first part, and "who shall reside in such place as the said parties of "the first part may designate. The salary of the finan"cial agent is hereby fixed at the sum of six thousand "dollars per annum, in gold coin; and the additional

"sum of one thousand dollars per annum, in gold coin,
"when said agent shall act as chief of the land depart"ment, which salary shall be paid out of the receipts
"of the railroad company. It is further covenanted
"and agreed by and between the parties to this agree"ment, that the salary of the president of the Oregon "and California Railroad Company shall not exceed "six hundred dollars per month, in gold coin, to be paid
"out of the receipts of the company. The regular salary "of the attorney and solicitor of the company shall not "exceed the sum of five thousand dollars per annum, in "gold coin, to be paid out of such receipts.

"ARTICLE 3. It is further agreed by the parties "of the second and third part that all the receipts of "the party of the second part, from whatever sources,
"shall be turned over to the financial agent, and all "money needed to meet the current expenditures of "the company shall be paid out by him, or on his order;
"and, by proper arrangement between the financial "agent and the company, the particular terms of which "shall be expressed in a supplementary agreement, the "company shall be freed from embarrassment or delay

"in obtaining such portion of the earnings as shall be "required for the operation of the road. Until the ap- "pointment of the financial agent, and as long as he "shall not have entered upon the exercise of his func- "tions and during any vacancy at any time in the office "of the financial agent, the entire net receipts of the "railroad company (meaning, thereby, whenever the "term 'net receipts' is used herein, the receipts after "deducting what is needed for operating expenses, ex- "penses of the land department and necessary repairs), "shall be deposited, at the end of each month, with the "London and San Francisco Bank, limited, San Fran- "cisco, California, to the credit of the parties of the first "part, on account of the interest or coupons or certifi- "cates or unpaid interest, hereinafter named, or, on full "payment thereof, on account of the principal sum due "on the first mortgage bonds, if the same are then due "and payable. And it is further covenanted and agreed "by the parties of the second and third parts, that, "although the Board of Directors shall have the man- "agement of the company, no expenditures other than, "and over and above, the ordinary and usual repairs "of the road, depots, bridges, machinery, shops and "equipments, shall be incurred or made without the "consent of said financial agent; and at the request of "said financial agent, the Board of Directors of the "company shall be bound to cause to be made out of "the earnings of the party of the second part, whatever "repairs and improvements may be deemed necessary "by said financial agent, to keep the railroad in good "working order, and to keep its depots and property in "good condition. The financial agent shall have the "right to pass over the road free of expense, to have "full and free access to all the books and papers of the "company at all reasonable hours; to inspect all its "work, buildings and property, and examine books, in- "ventories, cash and other assets of any description; to "control the keeping of its books and accounts, and to "make extracts from them; to point out and demand "the correction of any errors and irregularities in the "general management of the company, or in the dif- "ferent bureaus and departments of it; and whatever "information he may require regarding the management "of the company, shall at all times be furnished to him; "and all errors and irregularities shall be properly rem- "edied without delay, whenever they shall be pointed out "as aforesaid, and when the same can reasonably be "changed in accordance with his suggestion. No work "shall be done in the workshops of the company for out- "side parties, either private individuals or corporations; "and no part of the personal or real property of the com- "pany shall be sold, nor the use of it allowed, to outside "parties; and no new stock or bonds shall be issued and "no engagements and liabilities of any kind entered "into, except such as may be necessary for the operation "of the railroad, without the consent of said financial "agent in said matters respectively. The financial agent "may be designated as one of the three directors in said "railroad company, to be named by the parties of the "first part.

"ARTICLE 4. In case the net earnings of the rail-"road company, in the hands of the financial agent, in-"cluding those placed to the credit of said parties of the "first part, in the London and San Francisco Bank, "limited, during the term of five years, beginning March "first, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, shall not, for "any of the periods of six months hereinafter defined, "beginning March first, eighteen hundred and seventy-"four, be sufficient for the payment of the semi-annual "interest on all outstanding bonds, falling due for any "one of the periods of six months preceding the first of "April and the first of October, of each year, beginning "with the half-year from April to October, in the year "eighteen hundred and seventy-four, to the amount of "at least one and one-fourth per cent., the party of the "third part agrees to supplement the amount of the net "earnings, whatever it may be, during any of the periods "of six months hereinafter defined, during the said term "of five years, with whatever amounts shall be neces-"sary for the payment, semi-annually, of at least one "and one-fourth per cent. interest on all the outstanding "first mortgage bonds; provided, however, that the party "of the third part shall not be required to contribute for "this purpose more than the sum of twenty-five thou-"sand dolars during any period of six months, nor more "than fifty thousand dollars during any one year of said "period of five years; it being understood that the party "of the third part shall be liable for supplementary pay-"ments up to the total amount of fifty thousand dollars "in any year, for five years, in the proportion that the

"net earnings of said railroad company shall be insuf"ficient for the payment of the stipulated semi-annual "interest aforesaid, for the respective years, but no more;
"and also, provided always, that in case the net earnings
"in either of the two periods of six months, in any one
"fiscal year of said five years, beginning March first,
"eighteen hundred and seventy-four, shall exceed the "amount of one and a quarter per cent., aforesaid, for "such six months then such excess, to an amount equal "to the sum advanced, or to be advanced, by said party "of the third part, by way of supplementing, as afore"said, the interest due on said bonds for the other six "months of such fiscal year, shall be paid or allowed in "account to said party of the third part, after any de"ficiencies in the stipulated interest for the other of said
"two periods of six months has first been made up to "the parties of the first part. But in no case shall there "be any such payment, allowance, or transfer of receipts
"in any fiscal year aforesaid, by way of increasing or "diminishing the interest or the sums to be paid by said
"party of the third part in any other fiscal year.

"In case the net earnings of the railroad company,
"in the hands of the financial agent, including those "placed to the credit of said parties of the first part in the "London and San Francisco Bank, limited, during the "term of three years, beginning March first, eighteen "hundred and seventy-nine, shall not, for any of the "periods of six months hereinafter defined, beginning
"March first, eighteen hundred and seventy-nine, be suf"ficient for the payments on all outstanding bonds of

"the semi-annual interest for anyone of the periods of "six months preceding the first day of April and the "first day of October, of each year, beginning with the "half-year, from April to October, in the year eighteen "hundred and seventy-nine, to the amount of at least one "and three-fourths per cent., the party of the third part "agrees to supplement the amount of the net earnings, "whatever it may be, during any of the said periods of "six months hereinafter defined, for the said term of "three years, with whatever amount shall be necessary "to insure the payment, semi-annually, of at least one "and three-fourths per cent. interest on all outstanding "first mortgage bonds; provided, however, that the party "of the third part shall not be required to contribute for "this purpose more than the sum of twenty-five thou- "sand dollars during any period of six months; nor more "than fifty thousand dollars during any one year of "said period of three years, it being understood that the "party of the third part shall be liable for supplementary "payments up to the total amount of fifty thousand "dollars, in any year, for said three years, in the proposi- "tion that the net earnings of said company shall be "insufficient for the payment of the stipulated semi- "annual interest, aforesaid, for the respective years, but "no more; and also, provided furthermore, that in case "the net earnings in either of the two periods of six "months, in any one fiscal year during the period afore- "said, beginning March first, eighteen hundred and "seventy-nine, shall exceed the stipulated interest of one "and three-fourths per cent. for such period, as afore-

"said, then such excess, to an amount equal to the sum "advanced or to be advanced, by said party of the third "part, my way of supplementing, as aforesaid, the in- "terest due on said bonds for the other six months of "such fiscal year, shall be paid, or allowed in account, "to said party of the third part, after any deficiencies "in the stipulated interest, for the other of said two "periods of six months, has first been made up to the "parties of the first part. But in no case shall there be "any such payment, allowance, or transfer of receipts, "in any fiscal year aforesaid, by way of increasing or "diminishing the interest, or the sums to be paid by the "said party of the third part, in any other fiscal year. "The obligation of said party of the third part to make "such supplementary payments, shall be a purely pri- "vate and personal one, and said party of the third part "shall have no claim to be indemnified for such supple- "mentary payments by the railroad company, or any "other party, except as otherwise stated herein. And "the said party of the third part further agrees, at the "time of the execution of this agreement, to assume, or "pay, or cause to be paid, the floating debt of the com- "pany, now outstanding, to the extent of seventy-five "thousand dollars, not including interest on bonds, said "amount being estimated by said party of the third part, "to be all of said floating debt; and, in consideration of "this assumption and payment of said indebtedness, the "party of the second part shall transfer, assign and "convey to the party of the third part, contemporan- "eously with such payment, and the release of the com"pany from said floating debt, an equal amount of its "claims against the Oregon Central Railroad Company. "And the party of the third part hereby covenants and "agrees, with the parties of the first part, that the float- "ing debt of the company does not exceed said amount "of seventy-five thousand dollars; and that the entire "liabilities of the company, and all its contracts, shall be "made known to the parties of the first part, contempor- "aneously with the execution of these presents.

"ARTICLE 5. At the expiration of the period of "eight years, beginning March first, one thousand eight "hundred and seventy-four, and for the period beginning "March first, one thousand eight hundred and eighty- "two, and ending at the maturity of the principal of the "first mortgage bonds, it is hereby agreed, by the parties "of the second and third parts, that the holders of the "said bonds shall continue to receive the entire earnings, "and to distribute the net receipts, as above defined, of "the Oregon and California Railroad Company, through "the financial agent of the parties of the first part, as "aforesaid, to the amount of seven per centum interest "per annum, in gold, payable semi-annually, on all the "outstanding bonds, but the obligation of said party, of "the third part, to make up any difference that there "may be between the net receipts, and said reduced "annual interest, out of his private means, shall cease at "the expiration of said eight years, and after the expira- "tion of said eight years, and as long as the holders of "the first mortgage bonds outstanding shall receive all "the benefits secured to them in this agreement, and the "net receipts of the company, according to the terms "of this agreement, whether the same amount to the sum "of seven per centum interest per annum on said mort- "gage bonds or not, and as long as the terms of this "agreement are in all respects complied with by the "parties of the second, third, and fourth parts, the Ore- "gon and California Railroad Company shall not be "dispossessed of its property by the parties of the first "part, or their assigns, on account of the non-payment "of said seven per centum interest per annum; and no "proceedings to collect the same or to enforce any of "the provisions of said mortgage in respect thereto, by "reason of any such default, shall be taken by the par- "ties of the first part, or their assigns upon, or by reason "of any of the bonds held by them as aforesaid, other- "wise than, and only so far as may be necessary to "save them from losing any rights secured or reserved "to them in this agreement, by reason of any statutes "of limitation.

"ARTICLE 6. As soon as the parties of the second "and third parts shall have fulfilled their obligations "under this agreement, regarding the coupons due Octo- "ber first, one thousand eight hundred and seventy- "three, April first, one thousand eight hundred and "seventy-four, and October first, one thousand eight "hundred and seventy-four, as far as they may be held "by the parties of the first part, such coupons shall be "deposited in the London and San Francisco Bank, "limited, or in the hands of some other party to be agreed "upon, to be held in trust for the parties who may be

"ultimately entitled to receive them under the terms "of this agreement; and in case the provisions of this "agreement are fully carried out according to its terms, "and the principal of said bonds, together with all unpaid "certificates hereinafter named, and the interest falling "due at the maturity of the bonds, shall be promptly "paid as herein provided, then the said coupons shall be "delivered up to the party of the second part for can- "cellation, but otherwise, and in case the parties of the "first part shall, by reason of the failure of the parties "of the second, third and fourth parts, to fulfill their "agreement, or by reason of bankruptcy, or for any "cause beyond their own control, be deprived of the "benefits of this agreement, or be driven to resort to a "foreclosure, they shall be restored to the parties of the "first part, in exchange for certificates of equal value "(having reference to their face value, and excluding "interest), as such certificates may be presented, and all "coupons remaining, over and above the amount of the "outstanding certificates, shall be returned to the party "of the second part to be cancelled; and in the same man- "ner, all succeeding coupons belonging to the parties of "the first part, after those falling due October first, "one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, shall be "delivered up to the depositary aforesaid, as soon as the "parties of the second and third parts shall have ful- "filled their respective obligations regarding the said "coupons; all this is, on the express condition, however, "that the parties of the second, third and fourth parts "shall also comply with all the other covenants and

"agreements of these presents.

"The party of the second part shall issue certificates "of indebtedness in a form to be agreed upon, not bear- "ing interest, for the full amount of the coupons due "October first, one thousand eight hundred and seventy- "three, and April first, one thousand eight hundred and "seventy-four, and for whatever amount of the interest "due on the following coupons, shall remain unpaid, "under the terms of this agreement, after the supple- "mentary payments aforesaid; and whenever the net "receipts of the railroad company, in any one year shall "exceed seven per centum on the nominal value of all "the outstanding bonds, then, and in that case, one-half "of the excess shall be employed in the redemption of "said certificates of indebtedness, and the other half "shall be paid to the Oregon and California Railroad "Company for distribution, as dividend on its stock, or "otherwise, as the directors may lawfully determine; "and it is further agreed by the party of the second part, "that it will have the certificates of indebtedness pre- "pared with the least possible delay, and signed by its "proper officers, at or before the time when the coupons "respectively shall fall due, to which said certificates "relate, and all such certificates of indebtedness shall, "as soon as they are prepared and executed, be delivered, "for the purpose of being exchanged for coupons, to the "financial agent of the parties of the first part. Until "the financial agent shall be appointed, or during any "vacancy in said position of financial agent, said certi- "ficates shall be delivered to the London and San Fran"cisco Bank, limited, or whatever banking institution "shall be designated by the parties of the first part, to "the order of the parties of the first part; and the parties "of the first part shall deliver the certificates of in- "debtedness issued in place of the coupons due "October first, one thousand eight hundred and seventy- "three, and April first, one thousand eight hundred and "seventy-four, to the holders of these coupons, on the "surrender of each coupon, to the parties of the first "part, but the certificates of indebtedness which shall "be issued for the unpaid portion of the coupons, due "October first, one thousand eight hundred and seventy- "four, shall be delivered by the parties of the first part "to the parties respectively entitled thereto, only after "payment of the coupons due April first, one thousand "eight hundred and seventy-five, to the holders of said "coupons, on the surrender of such coupons to the parties "of the first part; and in the same manner all certificates "of indebtedness subsequently issued, shall always be "delivered only after the surrender of the coupons to "which said certificates of indebtedness respectively "relate, so that the possession of each coupon shall en- "title the holder thereof to receive the certificate of in- "debtedness issued, in order to supplement the cash "payment on account of the next proceding coupons, "excepting always, however, as aforesaid, the certificates "to be issued for October first, one thousand eight hun- "dred and seventy-three, and April first, one thousand "eight hundred and seventy-four. The certificates of "indebtedness issued for any one period of six months,

"shall form a series, and the parties of the first part shall "determine whether, and what partial payment on the "certificates in any one series shall be made, in case there "shall not be sufficient means for the redemption of the "whole series; and no new series shall be redeemed in "part, or wholly, as long as a preceding series shall not "have been called in for redemption by the parties of "the first part. All moneys received for the redemption "of certificates shall be deposited by the financial agent "with the London and San Francisco Bank, limited, "or such other banking institution as the parties of the "first part may designate, to the credit of the parties of "the first part.

"ARTICLE 7. In order to insure punctual calcula- "tion and payment of the earnings to be applied for in- "terest, and of the supplementary payments to be made "by the party of the third part, the business year of the "Oregon and California Railroad Company shall, for "all purposes of this agreement, run from the first of "March of each year to the following last day of Febru- "ary, both inclusive, and accounts shall be rendered ac- "cordingly, so that the net receipts of every six months, "from March first to the last day of August, both in- "clusive, and from September first to the last day of "February, both inclusive, shall be regularly applied to "the payment of interest as hereinbefore provided.

"The obligations of the party of the third part, re- "garding supplementary payments on account of in- "terest as hereinbefore provided, shall begin on the first "day of March, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, and

"such supplementary payments shall be made by the "party of the third part on the first day of March and "the first day of September of each year, or within ten "days thereafter, during the whole term of eight years, "for which said obligations shall continue under the "terms of this agreement. The first supplementary pay- "ment shall be made by the party of the third part on "September first, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, or "within ten days thereafter. Notwithstanding these "provisions, however, it is not understood that the actual "payment of interest or coupons to the bondholders shall "be made before the first of October and the first of "April of each year. The supplementary payments of "the party of the third part shall be made to the financial "agent of the parties of the first part, or to such other "person as the parties of the first part may designate.

"ARTICLE 8. The parties of the second and third "parts also agree, that as soon as may be, after the ex- "ecution of these presents, a contract and reconveyance "of certain contracts, lands and property, named in the "deed of trust relating to the congressional land grant " of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, to "Milton S. Latham, Faxon D. Atherton, and William "Norris, trustees, dated April fifteenth, eighteen hun- "dred and seventy, by the said European and Oregon "Land Company to said trustees, a copy of which is "hereto attached, marked 'A', shall be duly executed "and delivered to the parties of the first part by, and on "behalf of, the European and Oregon Land Company, "and the other parties thereto; and that a contract be"tween said Ben Holladay, the Oregon and California "Railroad Company, and the said Milton S. Latham, "Faxon D. Atherton, and William Norris, trustees, and "Heinrich Hohenemser, Aron Niederhofheim, Julius "Schmidt, Adolph Otto, Michael Benjamin, Carl Stae- "helin-Bucknor, F. S. Van Nierop, and Wilhelm Koes- "ter, by which said Ben Holladay, and the Oregon and "California Railroad Company, among other things, "waive and relinquish the right to control the invest- "ment of the proceeds of the sale of the Congressional "land grant, a copy of which is hereto attached, marked " 'B', shall be duly executed and delivered by the parties "thereto. And the parties of the second and third parts "also agree, that they will do, or cause to be done and "performed, all acts and things necessary and proper, "under the law, to be done and performed, in order to "secure to all concerned the full benefit of the said land "grant, and to confirm the title to the lands already "wholly or partly acquired by or for the benefit of the "Oregon and California Railroad Company, under the "Acts of Congress, or the laws of the State of Oregon; "and that said company will build, or cause to be built, "the telegraph lines and the remainder of its railroad "to the California line, provided the money necessary "therefor shall be furnished to the said company on "reasonable terms, and upon the best security which it "may hereafter be able to give.

"Said contract, marked respectively 'A' and 'B' and "also the other contracts hereinafter provided for, when "they shall be executed and annexed hereto, shall be "deemed to be a part of these presents, as fully and to "the same intents and purposes, as if they were expressly "and at large incorporated herein.

"ARTICLE 9. The said party of the third part "hereby agrees that he will do all that he lawfully can "do, to carry into full effect, with all practicable speed, "by the execution of the necessary agreements, the pro- "visions of article twelve, of the paper signed by William "Norris, as agent, at Frankfort, on the ninth day of Jan- "uary, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, "which article is in the following words, to wit:

" 'Ben Holladay herein agrees to join with the "creditors of the Oregon Steamship Company, and the "creditors of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, in "any arrangement with their consent, by which the entire "property of these two companies, after their indebted- "ness is liquidated, shall belong to the railroad com- "pany, and be a further security by mortgage to the "bondholders,' which agreements, when executed, shall "be deemed and taken to be a part of these presents. A "failure on the part of said companies to execute such "contracts within a reasonable time, shall give the par- "ties of the first part the option of treating these "presents as null and void, but shall have no other effect "whatever.

"ARTICLE 10. In the course of each month, there "shall be a settlement between the financial agent of the "parties of the first part and the party of the second "part, which settlement shall relate to and comprise the "entire business of the railroad company during the "calendar month then last preceding; upon making "which settlement, said financial agent shall receive and "deposit the net earnings during the month for which "the said settlement is made, with the London and San "Francisco Bank, limited, or such other banking institu- "tion as the parties of the first part may designate, to "the order of said parties of the first part; or said "financial agent shall make such other disposition thereof "as said parties of the first part may direct. The de- "livery of the certificates of indebtedness and the pay- "ment of interest on said bonds, as hereinbefore pro- "vided, shall take place by and at the Deutsche Vereins "Bank at Frankfort-on-the-Main, or through such other "banking firm in that or any other place, as the parties "of the first part may designate; and the necessary re- "mittances for this purpose shall always be seasonably "made to the place and firm which the said parties of the "first part shall designate. The payments to be made "by the party of the second part, herein provided for, "and also the supplementary payments to be made under "the provisions of this agreement by the said party of the "third part, shall be made in full, and without any de- "duction, reservation, defense or protest, on any ac- "count; and, more particularly, no deduction, reserva- "tion, defense or protest shall be made on the ground "that all the holders of the bonds may not join in this "agreement.

"ARTICLE 11. In case of any failure on the part "of the party of the second, third and fourth parts to "these presents, or on the part of either of the parties "contracting with the parties of the first part, and named "in the agreements heretofore referred to, and of which "copies are hereto annexed and to be annexed, to fulfill "the agreements made by them respectively as aforesaid, "fully and in all respects; or in any case, by reason of "the bankruptcy of either of the parties of the second "or third parts, hereto or otherwise, unless through some "act or default of the parties of the first part, it should "become impossible to carry out the provisions of this "agreement; then, and in any such case, the parties of "the first part, by the mere fact of such non-fulfillment, "or failure, or ascertained impossibility, shall become at "once reinstated to the fullest extent in all their original "rights and powers under the mortgage executed by said "party of the second part, to secure the payment of prin- "cipal and interest on the aforesaid bonds of the party "of the second part, and to all rights of action or other "rights, as against any stockholders of said company, or "other parties, in like manner as if this agreement had "never been made; but they shall, notwithstanding, be "deprived of no advantage then already gained by this "agreement, and shall lose no rights secured hereby, "and shall be liable to no claim or demand for the re- "covery of any money, rights or property secured by or "during the continuance of this agreement, except as "herein expressly provided. But otherwise than as "aforesaid, this agreement shall continue in force during "the whole period until the maturity of said bonds; pro- "vided only, that nothing herein contained shall prevent

"the parties of the first part from commencing any ac"tion or taking any steps or proceedings which may be "necessary to prevent their losing any rights under the "mortgage, or otherwise, by the operation of any "statutes of limitation; but, in that case such action or "proceeding shall not be prosecuted any further than
"may be necessary to prevent such loss while this agree"ment is in force, and the parties of the second and third
"parts respectively agree to co-operate with the said "parties of the first part in any such action, and that "they will take no advantage of any such statutes of "limitation.

"ARTICLE 12. The parties of the second, third "and fourth parts respectively, hereby admit and ac"knowledge that the parties of the first part are the "lawful holders of the majority in interest, as well as in "number, of the first mortgage bonds issued by the said
"party of the second part; and the parties of the first "part hereby covenant and agree to, and with the parties "of the second, third and fourth parts, that they are the "owners and holders of the majority, both in interest
"and number, of the whole of the first mortgage bonds "issued by the party of the second part, to wit: the num"ber of eleven thousand one hundred and forty-seven of "said bonds, amounting to six millions four hundred and "sixty-eight thousand and six hundred dollars ($6,468,- "600) thereof, at their par value; and they further con-"venant, that they have lawful power and authority to "bind the amount of bonds named and the holders there-
"of, and that the numbers of bonds furnished the party

"of the second part by said parties of the first part, by "their attorney in fact, Henry Villard, for record, upon "the books of said party of the second part, are the num- "bers of the bonds held by said parties of the first part; "and they further covenant that they will cause all of "said bonds, so held by them, and all such other bonds "as shall hereafter become subject to the provisions of "this agreement, to be properly stamped with a mem- "orandum, showing that they are held subject to the "provisions of this agreement. The party of the third "part covenants that he owns and controls a majority "of the stock of the party of the second part.

"The parties of the second, third and fourth parts "admit and acknowledge that the parties of the first "part, or any three of them acting together, for and in "the name of the others, either personally or by an at- "torney at law, or fact, authorized in writing by said "parties of the first part, or any three of them (unless "an equal number should put upon record at the Regis- "try of Deeds for Multnomah county, in Oregon, their "denial of the right of any party of three to act), possess "the proper power and authority, now, and for all future "time, except only as herein otherwise expressly pro- "vided, to claim and represent, assert and defend, in or "out of courts, in all ways whatsoever, all the rights, "privileges and powers of a majority of the bondholders "under the mortgage in or relative to the railroad rolling- "stock, telegraph lines, and all other rights, privileges "and property named therein, and also to claim and rep- "resent, asert and defend, likewise, and in the manner

"and to the full extent aforesaid, all the rights, privileges, "powers and claims secured and arising to the said ma- "jority of the bondholders, under the laws, and con- "stitution of Oregon, and under the provisions of this "agreement (including therein, now and always, when "this agreement is in any manner named or referred "herein, the provisions of all the contracts hereinbefore "referred to, of which copies are, or may be hereto an- "nexed, when the same are annexed). The parties of "the first part, or any three of them acting together as "aforesaid, shall in no case, except in case of conflicting "claims on the part of two or more parties of three of "said persons, composing the parties of the first part, be "required to substantiate the existence, or continuance "of their holding of the majority in interest, as well as "in number, of the bonds issued by said party of the "second part; and the said parties of the second, third "and fourth parts, hereby expressly, and for all future "time, except as herein otherwise expressly provided, "waive all right to have, or demand proof of such hold- "ings or continuance, from the parties of the first part, "or any of them, or from any person or persons repre- "senting them, or any of them; and every power of at- "torney, and every other document signed by not less "than three of the persons constituting and representing "the said parties of the first part, except as herein pro- "vided, shall be as valid as though it were signed by all "the persons constituting and representing it. No "change in the persons composing the said parties of "the first part, either from death, resignation or any "other cause, or from the admission or reception of other "persons by said bondholders, shall in any way affect "the rights, privileges and powers of the parties of the "first part, except as herein otherwise expressly pro- "vided; and the persons thus newly admitted and re- "ceived shall be admitted to and held to possess, in all "respects, the same rights, privileges and powers, and to "be, in all respects, subject to the same provisions as "though they had originally joined in this agreement. "And whenever three of the persons, representing and "constituting the parties of the first part, shall make "and subscribe a formal declaration before any Ameri- "can consul or other magistrate authorized to take the "acknowledgement of deeds, that any new person, or "persons have been received and admitted among the "persons composing the parties of the first part, such "person or persons shall be held and deemed in all re- "spects as belonging to the parties of the first part, and "none of the other parties to this agreement, including "always the contracts, of which copies are or are to be "annexed, when the same shall be annexed, shall have "any right to question or contest the legality of such "constitution, or to demand further proof of it. All "acts and things whatever, which might be done per- "sonally hereunder, by the parties of the first part, or "any three of the persons composing them, including "acts authorized to be done as attorney for the party of "the third part, with others, may be done by the attorney "or representative of the parties of the first part, or any "three of said persons.

"ARTICLE 13. The parties of the first part agree "to allow and to secure, to the best of their ability, a "participation in all the benefits arising under this "agreement, in the just proportion of the respective "holding, to all the bondholders who shall join them in "carrying out the purposes of this agreement, and who "shall, in witness whereof, have affixed to or impressed "on their bonds and the coupons attached thereto, by the "parties of the first part, or its agents, the stamp in- "dicating their assent to this agreement, as before in- "dicated.

"ARTICLE 14. The party of the second part "binds itself to pay to the parties of the first part, for "the benefit of the Deutsche Vereins Bank, of Frank- "fort-on-the-Main, a commission of one-half of one per "cent. on all amounts disbursed by said bank under "this agreement, said commission being the charge of "said bank for making such disbursements.

"ARTICLE 15. The parties of the first part here- "by further covenant and agree, to and with the said "parties of the second, third and fourth parts, that, on "condition of their securing to the parties of the first "part, for all the bondholders, as aforesaid, the full bene- "fit of this agreement; and when the same shall have "been fully secured and received, then this agreement "shall stand and operate as a full release forever to each "and all of the stockholders and directors of the said "Oregon and California Railroad Company, from any "and all alleged liability, by reason of any claim that "any part of such stock has not been fully paid up, or

"No. 3. CONTRACT BETWEEN MILTON S. "LATHAM, FAXTON D. ATHERTON AND "WILLIAM NORRIS, TRUSTEES, BEN "HOLLADAY, THE OREGON AND "CALIFORNIA RAILROAD COMPANY "AND THE BONDHOLDERS, AS TO THE "MANAGEMENT OF THE LAND GRANT.

"WHEREAS, the Oregon and California Railroad "Company has heretofore issued its bonds to the amount "of ten million nine hundred and fifty thousand dol- "lars ($10,950,000), secured by the first mortgage on "all its road, franchises and property (excepting its land "grant), dated April fifteenth, eighteen hundred and "seventy. And whereas, contemporaneously therewith, "the said company conveyed, by a deed of the same date, "all its land grant to Milton S. Latham, Faxon D. "Atherton and William Norris, as trustees, for the pur- "pose of establishing a sinking fund for the redemption "of said bonds. And whereas, said two instruments were "each referred to in the other, and were part of one and "the same transaction. And whereas, the said sinking "fund trustees, aforesaid, sold and conveyed said land "grant, and certain rights and interest in the land and "property included in the said grant, to the European "and Oregon Land Company (a corporation established "under the laws of California), by deed of contract dated "March twenty-eighth, A. D. eighteen hundred and "seventy-one upon certain terms and conditions named

"in said deed. And whereas, the said railroad company "failed to pay its interest upon said bonds, falling due "in October, eighteen hundred and seventy-three (1873) "and in April, eighteen hundred and seventy-four "(1874), and will probably be unable to pay any interest "thereon for a considerable time to come, and the prop- "erty of said railroad company, named in said mortgage, "is now subject to foreclosure. And whereas, a ma- "jority, in interest and number, of the holders of said "mortgage bonds have proposed, forthwith, to fore- "close said mortgage, and to endeavor, by all suitable "means, to obtain a reconveyance for the benefit of all "the bondholders aforesaid, of the rights and property "sold to said land company, as aforesaid. And whereas, "an agreement for the settlement of all disputes be- "tween said railroad company and its bondholders has "been entered into between Heinrich Hohenemser and "others, and the said railroad company and others, of "even date herewith, of which these presents is to form "a part, and which is hereby referred to and made a "part of these presents. And whereas, the said rail- "road company, and Ben Holladay, its president, and "the owner of the majority of its capital stock, being "entitled, under the terms of said deed to the trustees "of said sinking fund, to advise and direct, in the in- "vestment of the proceeds of sales of land and other- "wise, have united with said bondholders in requesting "that said reconveyance should be made. And whereas, "the said European and Oregon Land Company, in "view of the premises, declines to carry out the terms "and conditions of said deed of conveyance to them, and "desires that said reconveyance should be made, as afore- "said. And whereas, for these and other reasons, it is "believed to be greatly for the advantage of said rail- "road company and of all its bondholders, that said sale, "so far as may be, should be canceled, and said land "grant reconveyed upon equitable terms. And whereas, "the said European and Oregon Land Company have "spent certain sums of money causing plans, written "descriptions, and maps of the land named in said land "grant, to be made and circulated, and in advertising "the said land, and in maintaining agencies for the sale "thereof, and in other ways, which will be of great bene- "fit to all parties interested in the sale thereof. And "whereas, a contract and deed of reconveyance, by said "European and Oregon Land Company, to said Milton "S. Latham, Faxton D. Atherton, and William Norris, "trustees aforesaid, of all said land grant remaining un- "sold by said European and Oregon Land Company, "upon terms and conditions provided in said deed, has "been prepared and will be duly executed contempo- "raneously with this agreement, as supplementary to "said agreement between Heinrich Hohenemser and "others, and said railroad company and others, which "said agreement is made part hereof. And whereas, all "the parties hereto are interested in adjusting the con- "troversies that have arisen, touching the said land grant, "and the rights of the bondholders, and in securing to "the bondholders the fullest enjoyment of the benefits "intended to be given them in the deed of trust afore"said, which may be consistent with the rights of said "railroad company and others.

"Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises "and of the mutual agreements between the parties "hereto, it is hereby agreed by and between the parties "hereinafter named, and the heirs, executors, adminis- "trators, assigns, and successors of them, and each of "them, to wit: Milton S. Latham, Faxon D. Atherton "and William Norris, trustees, as parties of the first "part; Heinrich Hohenemser, director of the Deutsche "Vereins Bank, of Frankfort-on-the- Main; Aron Nied- "erhofheim, manager of the Branch Bank of Commerce "and Industry, at Frankfort-on-the-Main; Julius "Schmidt, of said Frankfort; Adolph Otto, of Heil- "bronn, in Wirtemberg; michael Benjamin, director of "the Baierische Wachsler Bank of Munich, in Bavaira; "Carl Staehelin-Bucknor, of Basle, in Switzerland; F. "S. Van Nierop, director of the Bank of Amsterdam, "at Amsterdam, in the kingdom of the Netherlands; "Wilhelm Koester, of Mannheim, in Banden, and "Henry Villard, by their attorney in fact, Henry Vil- "lard, and the said Henry Villard, acting together as "parties of the second part, the Oregon and California "Railroad Company as party of the third part, and Ben "Holladay, president of the said last-named company, "and the owner of the majority of its stock, as party of "the fourth part, as follows, to wit:

"First. During the continuance of the agreement "aforenamed, to which these presents are supplementary, "and as long as any part of the principal or interest on "the bonds, secured by said mortgage, and any certifi-

"and it is hereby agreed, by all the parties to these "presents, that all said rights shall be exercised by the "parties of the second part, but said parties of the third "and fourth parts shall not be held responsible, in any "respect whatever, for the management of said land de-

"of said parties of the second part; and said party of "the third part hereby authorize its president or treas- "urer to waive notice, and accept such resignation at "any time, in its name; and said parties of the second "part shall have the right to nominate and appoint any "successor or successors to said trustees, or either of "them, or any successor of either of them; and all the "parties to these presents hereby, upon request of said "parties of the second part, agree to do all things, and "take all steps necessary or proper to secure the full "appointment and confirmation in office of any new "trustees so nominated and appointed by the parties of "the second part; and upon the payment in full of said "bonds, and all interest and unpaid certificates of inter- "est, and of all the proper charges, expenses and dis- "bursements of the trustees in and about said trust, any "trustees so nominated and appointed by said parties "of the second part, shall, on request of said party of "the third part, duly made and certified to them, forth- "with resign said office. The salary of the parties of "the first part, and any successors in said trust, shall "not exceed one thousand dollars ($1000) per annum for each trustee, and shall be paid out of the revenues "of the land department. The funds provided for by "the terms of said deed of trust, and arising out of the "sale of said lands and property, may be invested in said "first mortgage bonds of the Oregon and California "Railroad Company, whenever the same can be ob- "tained at not over par, and accrued interest in gold, "but they shall, in all cases, be bought at the lowest rates

"at which they can be obtained, after advertising for "proposals for not less than ten weeks, at least once a "week, in some one or more of the leading newspapers "of Portland, in the State of Oregon, San Francisco, "the City of New York, and Frankfort-on-the-Main. The financial agent of the parties of the "second part, or other party, to be named by them, shall " be the chief officer of said land department, and the "expenses of said department, to the extent that it shall "not be self-sustaining, in each period of one year, shall "be paid out of the earnings of the party of the third "part; provided that not more than twenty thousand

"Third. All the provisions of the agreement above "named, to which these presents are supplementary, re-"lating to the powers of the parties of the second part, "to do all acts and things whatsoever, and to exercise "all their powers by their financial agent or attorney, "and relating to the full recognition of the authority "and right to act of said parties of the second part, as "being a majority in interest and number of the bond-"holders, and their ownership in bonds, and to the con-"tinuance of their authority, and the coming in of new "parties to join them, and the effect thereof, and as to "the waiver of any right to object to the authority of "said parties of the second part, or the continuance "thereof, and to the rights of said parties of the second "part, in case of any failure of other parties to keep the "agreements entered into by them, and in case of bank-"ruptcy, and otherwise, and for further conveyances "and assurances to carry out the purposes of the agree-"ment, and all other provisions of said agreement to "which this is supplementary, shall be held to be appli-"cable hereto, and incorporated herein as fully as if here"in written down at large, so far as they are relevant "hereto, and not inconsistent herewith, and are hereby "accepted and agreed to by the parties to these pres- "ents; and these presents shall be treated in all re- "spects as part of said agreement.

"Fourth. If the Oregon and California Railroad "Company, in any of the eight years during which the "party of the fourth part has agreed, in certain con- "tingencies, to supplement the earnings of the said rail- "road company, shall pay any sum for the expenses of "the land department, in excess of the receipts from "that department, and the said Holladay, in the same "year shall be compelled to pay any sum toward supple- "menting the interest on the bonds of the railroad com- "pany as is provided in the said agreement to which "this is annexed (and it is expressly understood that "such supplementary payments are for the purpose of "making up all deficiencies after paying all amounts "herein specified, for the land department, as well as "other expenses of the railroad company), then, and in "every such case, the amount of such supplementary pay- "ments, up to but not exceeding the amount of the pay- "ments of said company toward said expenses during "said year, shall be repaid to said Holladay out of the "future net revenues of the said department, when it "shall be self-sustaining, or out of any net earnings, of "said company applicable to the payment of interest, "which are in excess of the rate of interest guaranteed "by said Holladay, in the manner aforesaid, to be paid "on its bonds during said term of eight years.

five thousand (5000) acres at five ($5.00) dollars per acre as hereinafter provided; and of the lands in the Mount Diablo Base and Meridian not less than fourteen thousand and eight hundred (14,800) acres at seven ($7.00) dollars per acre, as hereinafter provided. The foregoing lands to be selected by the second party and so purchased in tracts comprising and constituting half a quarter section each (but the selection of two forty acre tracts in two separate quarters of a section shall not be deemed a compliance with this provision). And in case the purchase is made as herein provided, it shall be written upon the contract forms in general use by the first parties for the sale of timber lands at the time such purchase is made and in conformity with and subject to the subsisting rules and conditions of first parties relating to such sales, with a covenant excepting and reserving all minerals in the lands, with right to mine and extract the same, unto the first parties. Provided, however, that while the foregoing option extends to any and all of the said lands, yet the second party must purchase not less than twenty-seven thousand and eight hundred (27,800) acres thereof, to be selected by the second party; of which not less than fourteen thousand and eight hundred (14,800) acres shall be in the Mount Diablo Base and Meridian and not less than thirteen thousand (13,000) acres shall be in the Willamette Base and Meridian. It is further agreed that of the lands in the Willamette Base and Meridian second party must first select not less than eight thousand acres at the agreed price of nine (9.00) dollars per acre, and that after such selection—but not before—second party must also select an additional five thousand (5,000) acres at the agreed price of five ($5.00) dollars per acre which additional selection must not exceed nor be less than five thousand (5,000) acres.

The following is a re-capitulation of the minimum amount of acres to be selected by second party, and the price to be paid therefor:

In the Mount Diablo Base and Meridian, not less than 14,800 acres at $7.00 per acre	$108,600.00

Total.....	$200,600.00

Otherwise, the said option to be void; and upon notice of the lands to be selected for the purchase under this option, the first parties will withdraw such lands as subject of sale under this agreement, and hold them so withdrawn pending the existence of the said option.

Provided, further that the foregoing option is subject to and depends upon, full and specific performance by the second party of the following conditions precedent; that is to say;

(1) No right whatsoever shall vest in, or be deemed conferred upon, the second party by or in virtue of this agreement, until the second party shall have completed the construction of a railroad from some point on, or in the immediate vicinity of, section five (5), in township forty one (41) south, range five (5) east. Willamette Base and Meridian, to and connecting with the main railroad (California and Oregon branch) of the Central Pacific Railway Company; nor shall any right vest in, or be deemed conferred upon the second party by or in virtue of this agreement, unless the construction of the said connecting railroad by the second party is completed and in operation on or before June 30th 1903;

(2) The second party shall, on or before June 15th 1903, file with the first parties, at their Land Agent's Office in San Francisco, a list describing the lands selected to be purchased under this agreement, and thereupon such lands, but no other lands shall be withdrawn as hereinbefore provided, and all lands not described in said list shall thereupon be free and clear of the operation and effect of this agreement; and in case the title of the first parties, or either of them, shall fail, or be found imperfect, or invalid, to any lands described in said list as filed, the second party shall purchase all the remaining lands of said list, at the time and as herein provided, and in default of such purchase all rights of the second party under this agreement shall cease.

(3) Time, whenever mentioned, is an essence of this agreement.

(4) It is mutually agreed that this agreement, nor any interest therein, cannot be assigned by the second party without the written consent of the Land Agent of the first parties.

In consideration of the foregoing option, second party has paid to first parties the sum of one thousand ($1,000.00) dollars, which has been paid into the treasury of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and in the event of the compliance of the second party of the terms and conditions of this option said sum is to be credited on account of the purchase price agreed to be paid for the land herein described—otherwise said sum is to be forfeited and to remain the property of the first parties.

It is further agreed that this option is to supersede that certain option of date September 25th, 1901, between the Central Pacific Railway Company and the Pokegama Sugar Pine Lumber Company, and that certain option of date October 2nd, 1901, between the Oregon and California Railroad Company and the Pokegama Sugar Pine Lumber Company; and the two last mentioned options are hereby cancelled by mutual agreement.

In Witness Whereof, the first parties have caused their names to be subscribed to this agreement in triplicate, by their Land Agent and the second party has caused its name to be subscribed and corporate seal affixed on November 11, 1902.

to
City of Portland
Pacific Division Quit-claim Deed No. 6.

THIS INDENTURE, made the seventh day of August, in the year of Our Lord, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-Six, by and between the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, a corporation, created by and existing under an act of the Congress of the United States of America, entitled "An Act, granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from Lake Superior to Puget Sound, on the Pacific Coast, by the Northern Route," approved July 2, 1864, party of the first part, the Central Trust Company of New York, a corporation, existing under the laws of the State of New York, Trustee under a certain Indenture of Mortgage or Deed of Trust, made by the said party of the first part, and bearing date the first day of January, A. D., One Thousand, Eight Hundred and Eighty-one, party of the second part, and the City of Portland, in the County of Multnomah and State of Oregon, party of the third part.

WHEREAS, the said party of the first part, under and by virtue of the said act of Congress, became and is the grantee of certain lands situate in the Territory of Washington and State of Oregon, and did execute and deliver to the said party of the second part, a mortgage, inter alia, of the said lands, in trust for the purposes therein mentioned, bearing date the first day of January, A. D. One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-one, and duly filed and recorded in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, in the City of Washington.

AND WHEREAS, it is provided and covenanted in said mortgage, among other things, that the said party of the first part shall at all times be at liberty to contract for the sale of any parcel or parcels of said lands, at such price or prices as to it shall seem reasonable, not below the appraisal thereof, approved by the said party of the second part, and that upon deposit of the proceeds of such sale, or sales, with the said party of the second part, whether the same be in cash, bonds, coupons or other securities, it shall, by deed or deeds, executed by it, or its authorized Attorney or Attorneys, release the land so sold and paid for, from the lien created thereby.

AND WHEREAS, the said party of the first part, has contracted to sell and convey to the said party of the third part, the right of way over and the riparian rights inuring to the parcels of the said lands, which are hereinafter described, free from the encumbrance of the said mortgage, for the price hereinafter specified, being not less than the appraisal thereof, approved by the said party of the second part; and the said Trustee has become a party hereto, for the purpose of releasing the said land, hereby conveyed from the said encumbrance so that the party of the third part, its representatives, successors and assigns, shall take and hold the same free from any lien existing by reason of said mortgage.

Now this INDENTURE WITNESSETH: That the said parties of the first and second parts, by virtue of the said powers in said mortgage expressed, and of all others their powers and estates in the premises, and for and in consideration of the sum of Five Dollars unto the said party of the first part, and by it unto the said party of the second part, well and truly paid, at and before the sealing and delivery of these presents, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, do release and quitclaim forever, unto the said party of the third part, its representatives, successors and assigns, all their right, title and interest in and to the following described parcels of land, situate in Multnomah County, in the State of Oregon, to-wit:

A strip of land, fifty feet in width being twenty-five feet in width on each side of the center line of a water pipe line, as the same is staked out and located or as it shall be hereafter finally located, according to the provisions of an Act of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, approved November 25, 1885, providing for the means to supply the City of Portland with an abundance of good, pure and wholesome water, over and across the following described tracts of land:

Sections Nineteen and Thirty-one, in Township One South of Range Six East; Sections Twenty-five, Thirty-one, Thirty-three and Thirty-five in Township One South of Range Five East; Sections Three and Five in Township Two South of Range Five East; Section One in Township Two South of Range Four East; Sections Twenty-three, Twenty-five and Thirty-five in Township One South of Range Four East of the Willamette Meridian.

Hereby giving and granting unto the said party of the third part, its representatives, successors and assigns, the full right to enter on the hereinbefore described strips of land, over and across the above described Sections, for the purpose of constructing, maintaining or repairing the said water pipe line, without being considered a tres*p*asser, also giving and granting all riparian rights whatsoever, which inure and belong to the party of the first part, or which it may hereinafter acquire by reason of any right, title and interest or claim whatsoever in and to the above described lands lying contiguous and adjacent to the stream known and described as Bull Run, in the above named Sections.

TO HAVE AND TO HOLD the above described premises, together with all and singular the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in any wise appertaining, unto the said party of the third part, its representatives, successors and assigns, forever, for use as the site of said water pipe line, to be constructed and maintained for supplying the City of Portland with water and not otherwise, free and clear of the lien and encumbrance of the said Indenture of Mortgage, and of the trusts therein or thereby declared or created.

F. L.

The Honorable,
The Commissioner of the General Land Office. Defendants Ex.

Sir: 250

On behalf of the Oregon & California Railroad Company, I have the honor to invite your further attention to parts of Section 9, Township 30 South, Range 1 West, Roseburg, Oregon.

Under date May 15th ult., I addressed a letter to you in connection with this same matter, calling attention to the fact that the Railroad Company named had heretofore received patent for the SE/4, frl. SW/4, and frl. NE/4, 320 acres, of said Section 9, patent No. 3, dated May 29, 1872, (recorded in Vol. 3, p. 41,).

I also therein called attention to the fact that the local office at Roseburg, Oregon, had given notice that plats of survey of the W/2 and NE/4 of said Section 9, would be filed in that office on Saturday May 29, 1909, at 9 o'clock A. M., and that the lands would then be open to entry to bona fide settlers who made settlement prior to the withdrawal of the lands for the Umpqua National Forest Reserve.

I accordingly asked that appropriate instructions be issued to said local office to exclude said patented portions of Section 9, namely, the S/2 of NE/4 and the S/2 of the SW/4.

That application was granted by you, and instructions were issued by your Office, under date May 18, 1909, (E—W.T.P.—54351—09); and in your said letter you advised the local office that the lands so patented to the Railroad Company are now described as the SE/4, S/2 of NE/4, SE/4 of SW/4, and Lot 7, of said Section 9; and you instructed the local office to so note on their records.

In view of the fact that the patent so heretofore issued to the Company describes the lands as fractional NE/4 and fractional SW/4, and which lands have now been further designated by survey as being the S/2 of the NE/4, the SE/4 of SW/4, and Lot 7, of said Section 9, I am requested by the Railroad Company to ask that a supplemental patent may issue to it, covering the descriptions just given, this to the end that the record may be made to conform with the latest official designation by legal sub-divisions.

Respectfully,

A. A. HOEHLING, JR.

Attorney for said Company.
